U. S. SENATOR IS INDICTED

U. S. TO SEVER RELATIONS WITH MEXICO, BELIEF

Senate to Consider Invasion; Time to Act: Hitchcock.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Resolutions directing the administration to intervene with armed forces in Mexico will be brought before the senate immediately after congress convenes Monday.

Senators returning to Washington today after recess visits among their constituents reported widespread belief that the time has come for congress to take the initiative and end "watchful waiting" in the Mexican situation.

Senator King, Utah, Democrat, said he had prepared a resolution to authorize the president to use the naval and military forces to settle the Mexican question. He believes that the time has come for the United States not merely to demand satisfaction in the Jenkins case but to insist upon a settlement of the vast damages owed by the Mexican government for the loss of American lives and property in Mexico.

Serious, Hitchcock Admits.

Senator Hitchcock, Nebraska, administration leader, just back from Omaha, pronounced the Mexican situation "serious," and said there seemed to be a general feeling that the time was at hand for the government to take a definite stand in its relations with Mexico.

On all sides the opinion prevailed that the administration would announce to congress the breaking of relations with Mexico. Unless the present crisis blows over, indications are that the Mexican situation will crowd the peace treaty off the stage of the senate's attention during the next session.

With the necessity for intervention growing more and more apparent among senators, there was relief in many quarters that the senate had refused to ratify the peace treaty.

Saved From League Handcuffs.

Under the league of nations covenant, it probably would be impossible for the United States to intervene without breaking the obligations imposed by Article XI senators explained.

A controversy such as that now in progress between the United States and Mexico could properly be called before the league by any one of Mexico's Latin-American friends, it was pointed out.

Senator Fall, New Mexico, Republican, generally regarded as the leading authority in the senate on the Mexican question has been spending several weeks on the border and is expected here within a few days. Many of his colleagues are anxious to get his report of conditions to aid them in shaping the future course of congress.

New Note Kept Secret.

State department officials declined to make public the text of the new note to Mexico, requesting a substantiation of its charges that Jenkins had signed conflicting statements respecting his case; but there is reason to believe that the Mexican government was advised that the United States government was surprised by the tenor of the Mexican reply to the American demand, but expressed willingness to receive any evidence of the new charge against Jenkins and would keep their case open until such evidence had been received.

The note also is believed to have impressed upon the Mexican government not only the sense of gravity felt by the state department, but also the insistence of American public opinion that the wrongs committed by the Mexican government, or by reason of that government's failure to afford adequate protection to Americans in Mexico be corrected.

Showdown Is Suggested.

It is suggested, further, that the note declared the firm intention of the United States to seek a settlement now and finally of the Mexican question, in so far as the international obligations of Mexico to the United States, and the protection of American citizens in Mexico and of their rights were concerned.

It was authoritatively learned that the state department's rejoinder to the Mexican refusal to release Jenkins occupied itself with the Mexican foreign office's note entirely, and did not take

TO GOOD FELLOWS: LET'S GO!

Icy winds blew your season in last night. The kids are calling you and will continue to call till Christmas.

It is the privilege and pleasure of THE TRIBUNE this morning to sound the tocsin for the tenth annual gathering of the Clan of Good Fellows.

Ten years ago the original Mr. Good Fellow conceived a big idea. He wrote a letter to THE TRIBUNE. Of that letter was born the movement that sent the first group of Good Fellows on their Santa Claus errand into hundreds of homes where, otherwise, there would have been no Christmas. The spirit has spread year by year. The Order of Good Fellows never loses a member. No one who ever has tried the joyous experiment of gladdening the heart of a child on Christmas fails to look eagerly for the return of the opportunity.

Abnormal Condition This Year.

Already letters have been received from dozens of Good Fellows of yesteryears anxious to be at the happy task. Their assistance will be needed more than ever this season. An abnormal condition exists. On the surface there appears to be less poverty, less unemployment, less suffering. The average person is satisfied and it is harder to convince him a real need exists.

That one does exist is evidenced by the fact that the United Charities spent twice as much this October for worthy cases of relief than during the same month last year. There are two reasons for this unusual situation—the flu epidemic of last year and the present high cost of living.

Good Fellow Needs No Argument.

But Mr. Good Fellow does not need to be convinced. He knows wherever children live in the crowded districts there is work for him to do and that there will be thousands of empty stockings if his response doesn't measure up to his prosperity.

This year there are hundreds of homes not listed with the charitable organizations—clean, orderly homes in which pride holds back an appeal for aid.

That is the Christmas Mr. Good Fellow is interested in—the kind that brings dolls and tin soldiers and candy and nuts and all the goodies that make the day real for the kiddies.

Since the beginning of the movement Good Fellows have made happy upwards of 120,000 children. Last year 2,000 Good Fellows made Christmas real for 10,000 kids.

The Original Idea.

The first Good Fellow explained the plan thus:

Neither you nor I gets anything out of this except the feeling that we've saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. Perhaps a 25 cent doll or a 10 cent toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the child who would find them in an otherwise empty stocking they mean much.

Here's where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and meat, the clothes, the necessaries; you and the rest of the Good Fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candy—the child's real Christmas!

That's the big idea that keeps it going. Send in your name and address. Tell us how many children you wish to be Santa Claus to and what section of the city you prefer to have assigned to you. We will send you names, ages, and addresses of the number desired. You do the rest. There is no publicity. Your name is revealed to no one.

What You Must Do.

Do not send or bring in money. That plan would make us the Good Fellow instead of you, and rob you of the pleasure we want you to feel—the heart thrill you'll get when a little girl clasps a 50 cent doll to her breast as if it were a million dollars, or a tousled headed urchin grins over a wooden horse as if it were a Pegasus. You must do everything yourself; visit the family if you like, pick out the gifts, purchase them, and carry the basket to the home on Christmas eve.

Four new telephone lines in direct communication with Santa Claus will be in operation tomorrow. Call Central 135, 136, 137, or 138, or drop into the first floor of the Tribune building and leave your name at the Good Fellow desk.

(A form is printed on page 8 for your convenience. Fill it out and send or bring it in.)

Seizure of Chicken Thief Proves Comic Tragedy

Waukegan, Ill., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Mrs. George Spaulding, wife of a Waukegan farmer, caught a chicken thief last night. While her husband carried a gun she lighted the way to the hen house with a lantern. Mrs. Spaulding saw a bushy tail protruding through the doorway. She made a grab for the tail. The next moment she staggered back and released her hold. The animal scampered away. Mr. and Mrs. Spaulding buried their night clothes in the barnyard.

PENROSE BREAKS FROM OVERWORK AND FLU ATTACK

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Senator Penrose is ill at his home in Spruce street, near Broad.

This information was given out this evening by Leighton C. Taylor, his secretary, who accompanied him from Washington to Philadelphia last evening.

The senior senator from Pennsylvania has collapsed as the result of overwork in the senate. He is also suffering from grip, and his heart is affected by the almost incessant coughing to which he has been subjected for a few weeks.

Attending Senator Penrose are his brother, Dr. Charles B. Penrose, and Dr. Herbert B. Carpenter. They have directed that he shall remain in absolute quiet at his home. Visitors are not permitted to see him, and calls to the Penrose home are not answered.

The senator's breakdown is ascribed by his secretary to the great amount of work to which he has attended this year without interruption.

Mr. Taylor is unwilling to say that Senator Penrose's condition is serious, yet the physicians attending him insist that absolute quiet is imperative at this time.

SHUT OFF HOME FORMULAS FOR MAKING LIQUOR

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Sale of formulas for making intoxicating liquor in the home has been placed under the ban by the bureau of internal revenue.

Firms or corporations engaging in such sale, the internal revenue bureau has just ruled, are liable to prosecution under the section of the criminal code making liable "whoever aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces, or procures" the law's violation.

"The bureau of internal revenue holds," says an announcement from the bureau, "that persons who sell or advertise formulas or ingredients for the manufacture of intoxicating liquor are influencing others to violate the law, and are subject, therefore, to prosecution under the criminal code."

Persons manufacturing liquors in their homes for private consumption are subject to penalties of the national prohibition act and are liable also to penalties and taxes imposed by internal revenue laws.

EMMA GOLDMAN TO BE DEPORTED

U. S. Department of Labor Issues Order; May Go Back to Russia.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—Deportation of Emma Goldman, the anarchist, was ordered today by the department of labor. The bureau of immigration, it was stated, will recommend that she be sent to Russia.

Assistant Secretary Post, the department stated, has ordered that the case be closed, following hearings in which her anarchist activities were reviewed.

HAILED AS "MARTYRS."

Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman were hailed as martyrs last night in Carmen's hall by 4,500 Socialists, radicals, and free thinkers. An admission fee of 50 cents was charged and when the crowd was told that a special fund was being raised to save them from deportation, they chipped in with enough to bring the proceeds to about $5,000.

In fact, so much money was taken in that the committee in charge of the meeting had to call on their old enemies, the police, to guard them while they counted it and made arrangements to care for it until it could be banked.

Jubilee for Radicals.

It was sort of a jubilee for the Socialists, etc., and they turned out in numbers to hear their two "martyrs" tell of their experience in jail for two years, each being convicted under the espionage act. Both, however, were tame in their remarks and the police and government officials did not disturb the meeting.

"I challenge the government and Attorney General Palmer to let me prove that they chain the political prisoners up by their wrists in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.," said Berkman, the first speaker.

"They put me and others in dungeons with no air and light in order to break down our will, but they did not succeed. Eugene V. Debs gave me a message to deliver to you—that is, he is going to stay in jail until they release all the 1,500 political prisoners."

The crowd rose to their feet and cheered him.

Emma Says She'll Fight.

"It is up to you working men to demand that the government release the political and other prisoners," said Miss Goldman, "for the government is not going to be gracious and let them go. Are they afraid that the prisoners might tell the truth about conditions in the prison?" and the crowd roared.

She told reporters that she intended to fight with every means in her power and the power of friends against deportation, saying that a court fight will be started soon.

"I shall take my fight to the highest court, for I expected this decision," she said.

NEWBERRY OF MICHIGAN AND 133 ACCUSED

Vast Fraud Charged in the Defeat of Henry Ford.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 29.—Truman H. Newberry, United States senator from Michigan, thirteen of his campaign lieutenants, and 120 lesser political lights of the state were indicted by a federal grand jury today on charges of election fraud, corruption, conspiracy, and misuse of the mails.

Two blanket indictments were returned dealing with the primary and election campaigns of 1918 in which Henry Ford was Senator Newberry's chief opponent.

Charge State-Wide Plot.

Government officials asserted that the testimony presented to the grand jury had revealed a political scandal that in many respects was without parallel in American annals. They said it extended from the most populous wards of Detroit to the Indian reservations on the shores of Lake Superior, where aborigines were voted according to the behest of the Newberry campaign organization.

It was alleged that voters were bribed, election boards corrupted, editors subsidized, and moving picture theaters bought up in the endeavor to defeat Henry Ford, first in the primaries of both parties, and later, when he had won the Democratic nomination, in the election itself.

Fund May Total Million.

Judge Clarence W. Sessions of the federal district, to whose court the grand jury reported, indicated that the evidence disclosed the fraudulent expenditure of between $500,000 and $1,000,000 in connection with the election.

The men whose names were announced today will be arraigned on Monday, Dec. 8. The extreme penalty which may be imposed under the indictments is a fine of $10,000 and two years' imprisonment.

First Fourteen Named.

The identity of only the chief figures in the case was revealed in court today. On instructions from Judge Sessions the names of the others were impounded to be made public only when their owners have been served with warrants. The fourteen names made public tonight were:

TRUMAN H. NEWBERRY, United States senator and secretary of the navy in the Roosevelt administration.

JOHN S. NEWBERRY, Detroit, brother of the senator, who contributed $99,900 to the campaign.

PAUL H. KING, Detroit, general manager of the Newberry campaign.

ALLEN A. TEMPLETON, president of Detroit chamber of commerce and chairman of the Newberry campaign.

HARRY O. TURNER, Detroit, broker and son of James Turner, former auditor general of Michigan. He was assistant secretary of the Newberry campaign.

MARK T. McKEE, Detroit, law partner of King. He was prominent in the Red Cross organization in Michigan and in fraternal circles. Government investigators charge his activities were mostly camouflage for politics.

HARRY A. HOPKINS, Detroit, publicity manager of campaign and former president of the State Publishers' association, legislative clerk of the United States senate.

CHARLES A. FLOYD, Detroit, who was in charge of the country organizations for the Newberry campaign. Formerly head of the Michigan state fair.

FREDERICK C. SMITH, Detroit, manager of the Newberry estate in Detroit.

MILTON OAKMAN, former Wayne county sheriff and for ten years Republican "boss" in Detroit.

JUDD YELLAND, probate judge at Escanaba.

FRANK McKAY, assignment clerk in the Detroit courts.

JAMES B. BRADLEY, physician at Eaton Rapids, once candidate in Republican primaries for governor.

GLADSTONE V. BEATTIE, former sheriff of Van Buren county and county manager for Newberry.

Besides the men whose indictments were announced several other individ-

FEDERAL, STATE TROOPS SENT TO KANSAS MINES

Guard for Volunteers Who Answer Call of Governor.

Topeka, Kas., Nov. 29.—Eighteen hundred state and federal troops have been ordered into the Kansas coal fields in connection with the proposed plan to reopen the mines next week under a state receivership, it became known tonight. Six hundred of the troops will be regulars and twelve hundred of them guardsmen.

The federal troops, 300 from Fort Riley and 300 from Fort Leavenworth, will arrive in Pittsburgh, center of the coal district, tomorrow morning. The state troops will begin entraining tomorrow. They will convey 300 volunteers, who will work in the coal fields.

Gov. Allen announced that twenty-three complete steam shovel crews of volunteer workers and fifteen steam shovels had been secured. Each crew is made up of skilled laborers.

The governor has instructed the warden of the state penitentiary to recall 400 paroled prisoners and put them to work in the prison mines.

Warning to All Concerned.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 29.—Coal must be mined and every miner, operator, or any other person who has acquired knowledge of the temporary injunction and who thereafter violates its terms will be cited for contempt, Dan W. Simms, special assistant United States district attorney, declared today.

All Ready at Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 29.—Coal operators declared today they were ready to operate the mines in the Pittsburgh district upon the government's terms.

Announces Raise in Wages.

Columbus, O., Nov. 29.—Walter D. McKinney, secretary of the Southern Ohio Coal exchange, today sent out notices to practically all Ohio soft coal mines that the increase of 14 per cent would become effective at once.

Post Offer in Iowa.

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 29.—Mine operators took steps today to offer the miners the 14 per cent wage increase to which Fuel Administrator Garfield announced the men are entitled.

CAMPANINI VERY ILL, SAYS DOCTOR; LOOKS FOR BEST

Dr. Milton Portis, who, with Dr. Joseph N. Blake, is in attendance on Cleofonte Campanini during his illness in St. Luke's hospital, said last night that, while the condition of his patient is grave, there is no immediate cause for alarm.

"During the last forty-eight hours," Dr. Portis said, "mild pneumonia has developed. The heart action is somewhat weaker and, although his condition is serious, he is holding his ground and there is hope for his recovery. I left his bedside at 6 o'clock tonight (Saturday), and at that time he was just a little worse than in the morning. I would not say that his chances are brilliant, but we hope to bring him through all right."

At midnight the patient had rallied encouragingly and was resting well. But Dr. Blake nevertheless remained at the bedside throughout the night.

Adriatic Bumps Into Boat Off Statue of Liberty

New York, Nov. 29.—The Adriatic, which sailed late today for Cherbourg and Southampton with a long list of distinguished passengers, collided with the St. Michael off the Statue of Liberty while moving down the harbor.

The St. Michael's stern was badly damaged under the water line and the ship is leaking, but apparently in no serious danger. The Adriatic was not damaged, according to coast guard headquarters and shortly after midnight again started on its way.

GOVERNORS HURRY HERE FOR PARLEY ON COAL

Board Cuts Off Fuel Supply for Most Industries.

Governors of a dozen states were summoned hurriedly yesterday to a conference in Chicago to consider the coal situation, the parley to begin at 10 o'clock this morning at the Congress hotel.

Called by Gov. Frederick D. Gardner of Missouri, the meeting will be attended by Gov. Lowden of Illinois and the governors of Ohio, Kansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Kentucky, and other coal producing states, according to an announcement by Gov. Gardner, made upon his departure from Jefferson City, Mo., for Chicago last night. The first of the executives to reach Chicago was Gov. Harding of Iowa, loaded down with complaints from all sections of his state and seeking immediate relief. Gov. Allen of Kansas and Gov. Black of Kentucky announced that they could not attend. Gov. Allen, however, is sending his attorney general, R. J. Hopkins.

The management of the Congress hotel stated Gov. Gardner had telegraphed an order reserving accommodations for the party.

New Rule in Cook County.

Coincident with the convention of governors the northwestern regional coal committee will today assume control of the coal retailers of Cook county for the first time since the war. The regional committee is to meet at 10 o'clock this morning at the Masonic temple with Cook county retailers of coal and announce plans for rationing and sale. The retailers will be obliged to follow the instructions of the committee or have their supplies cut off. They will be asked not to make deliveries to consumers with a week's supply on hand. Track dealers will be ordered to make deliveries to consumers in the following classes, industries excluded:

A—Railroads.

B—Army, navy, and other branches of the federal government.

C—State, county, and municipal institutions.

D—Public utilities, manufacturers and users of news print paper.

E—Residences, apartments, office and public buildings. Refiners of petroleum, cold storage plants and bakeries.

Cuts Off Industries.

With an average daily consumption of 1,480 cars of soft coal, Chicago received 525 cars yesterday. The regional committee released 747 cars, declining 263 applications, approving 290, and cutting off practically all industries.

A dozen gas and electric light companies were ordered by the state public utilities commission to appear before it Monday to show cause why they should not be required to cut off advertising signs and other unnecessary illumination in the interests of coal conservation.

The companies cited are the Commonwealth Edison, the Peoples Gas Light and Coke, the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois; North Shore Gas; Illinois Northern Utilities; Rockford Electric; Central Illinois Public Service; Chicago Heights Gas; Peoples' Power and Western United Gas.

Honnold Looks for Trouble.

"By tomorrow night," said Dr. F. C. Honnold, secretary of the Illinois Coal Operators' association, "there will not be a union man working in Illinois mines. I am informed that so far the caretakers have quit only in Williamson and Saline counties, but I understand the new order affects all districts."

Dr. Honnold stated that at meetings of miners in various towns last night and today indignation against the government and Dr. Garfield was expressed.

Court Action Planned.

Instructions of Attorney General Palmer to United States Attorney Clyne covered action along three lines:

Contempt proceedings against any mine worker or officer of the union, named in the injunction issued by Federal Judge Anderson in Indianapolis, upon a showing that the writ has been violated.

New injunctions against any one whomsoever who seeks to hinder distribution.

Criminal prosecution of price manipulators.

PUMPERS QUIT MINES

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Work will be offered tomorrow to the miners of all of the 370 shipping mines in Illinois. But the miners are not expected to work.

Their reply to Dr. Garfield's proposal of an average wage increase of 14 per cent was the withdrawal of engineers and firemen from many of the mines in the state. This act stops the pumps and enormous damage menaces the mines. This is said to be the first time within fifteen years that the United Mine Workers of America have resorted to this practice. Heretofore it has been their policy to protect the mines.

This indicates to the operators—they held a meeting of an hour and a half yesterday in the offices of F. C. Honnold—that the miners of this state do not intend to return to work for a 14 per cent increase.

Post Notice of Raise.

However, to the superintendent of each mine the operators sent a letter saying that "the fuel administration directors, and the operators' policy committee, now in Washington, urges and recommends, that you post at your mine and at public places where miners gather a copy of the inclosed notice."

That notice reads:

"The government of the United States having decided that mine workers are entitled to a 14 per cent average increase to bring wages up to the increased cost of living, this company gives notice that a 14 per cent average increase in wages is hereby granted, effective at once.

"No change will be made in conditions of employment. The new scale of wages will be posted as soon as possible."

Other States Likely to Follow.

From information gathered by the various operators at the meeting, they gained the impression that Indiana and Ohio will be in the same condition tomorrow in which Illinois is expected to be. The only exception to this general view is a small section in the southern part of Ohio.

Pittsburgh operators expect to get started on production this week and anticipate that they will have a 50 per cent output within two weeks in the union mines now on strike. That is their guess.

If the union men will not go to work within a few days the Pittsburgh operators plan to draw from the nonunion miners, of which there are a number in that section. They have been checking nonunion mines and find that some union miners of Illinois have drifted southeast and gone to work in nonunion mines, and they anticipate that more will follow.

May Work Bosses.

A large corporation like the Consolidation Coal company can take the superintendents and other subbosses from their more than 100 mines and put them to work producing coal at one particular mine.

From the information which has come west the Pittsburgh operators believe the large miners' wage will attract a certain percentage of union men back to the pits.

Altogether it looks to a layman, although no operator would make such a statement, as if the operators have an understanding that an attempt will be made to break the strike with the Pittsburgh operators as the center of operation.

If the plan works fairly satisfactorily it can be extended to other districts.

Illinois, however, is an exception. In this state a miner must show his competency by state examination. That has been thought by the miners to effectively tie the hands of the Illinois operators, even if they should desire to get miners from other states.

GOV. STEPHENS IS CONVINCED OF MOONEY'S GUILT

Sacramento, Cal., Nov. 29.—No further clemency in behalf of Thomas J. Mooney, convicted of murder in connection with the San Francisco preparedness day bomb explosion, is warranted by anything within the knowledge of Gov. Stephens, the governor stated in a letter made public late today at the governor's office here. The letter continued:

"In my judgment a grave injury is being done labor everywhere when it is made to appear by those who occupy places of leadership that organized labor champions such a heartless and vicious murderer as Thomas J. Mooney.

"Of Mooney's guilt there is, in my mind, no question. I am convinced he had a part in one of the most atrocious crimes involving treasonable purpose ever perpetrated in the history of our country. Ten persons were killed and fifty maimed by Mooney and his associates, who evidently were in sympathy with Germany's agents, who were resorting to every desperate measure to thwart preparedness of the American nation for war."

Plan to Watch Steel Strike Meeting for Radicalism

Waukegan, Ill., Nov. 29.—American Legion members and city police tomorrow will attend the meeting of the steel strikers in Waukegan to see that no radical speeches are made. This announcement was made today after Nicholas Keller, "Boy President" of the Amalgamated Association of Steel, Iron and Tin Workers, declared John Fitzpatrick, president of the American Federation of Labor, and members of the national committee would speak.

U. S. UNLIMBERS GUNS TO SMASH BIG COAL STRIKE

Sets Range to Hit Both Operators and Men if They Interfere.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—With the coal operators' and miners' representatives who sought in vain to settle the strike here departed for their homes, and with the 14 per cent wage advance in effect, agencies of government charged with enforcement of law and assisting in production and transportation of coal prepared to fight the strike out to a finish.

Assistant Attorney General C. B. Ames, who announced yesterday that miners and operators who sought to restrict the production of coal would be prosecuted by the government, took the first step today when he ordered an investigation of reports that mines of the Georges Creek Coal company in the Cumberland, Md., region had been ordered indefinitely closed by the companies. Notices to this effect were posted and former employés were requested to remove their tools from the mines not later than Monday.

Will Probe Closing of Mines.

An official of the department of justice, when he learned of this, stated:

"This is the first intimation the attorney general has received of such action by the Georges Creek company. The report will be investigated. If it is shown that the operators are closing their mines to curtail the coal supply the government will take immediate steps to operate the properties. The specific action to be taken will be determined by the facts revealed."

Fuel Administrator Garfield took occasion to deny reports that the crisis in the coal industry would be used as a means of breaking down the miners' union. He did not say where reports had come from, but there have been charges to this effect from union leaders. Operators who have had long experience with union leaders disclaim all responsibility for such reports.

No Fight on Unions.

"Report has come to me," Dr. Garfield said, "that the present crisis in the coal industry will be used to break down the labor union.

"I wish to say that I am as much opposed to any attempt to destroy the principle of collective bargaining and the union of working men as I am to the effort of labor leaders to keep labor satisfied by a constant boosting of wages regardless of the public interest, or to the effort of leaders in the industrial world to boost profits unduly to the hurt of the public.

"Any attempt to complicate the issue at this time by seeking to destroy the union of the mine workers or the principle of collective bargaining will be resented by the public and opposed by me."

Plan to Protect Workers.

Operators in western Pennsylvania, which is a part of the central competitive field, will meet Gov. Sproul of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia Monday to discuss plans for protecting miners wishing to return to work.

Those in close touch with the situation regarded this as the first indication of an attempt to break the strike in the central field. It was expected that general plans for all four states included in this field would be discussed when the operators' wage scale committee reconvenes here Wednesday.

The battleground of the conflict, which has centered here during the fruitless negotiations, today shifted to the various fields.

Operators returning home received assurance of the government that troops were ready to protect any miners wishing to return to work.

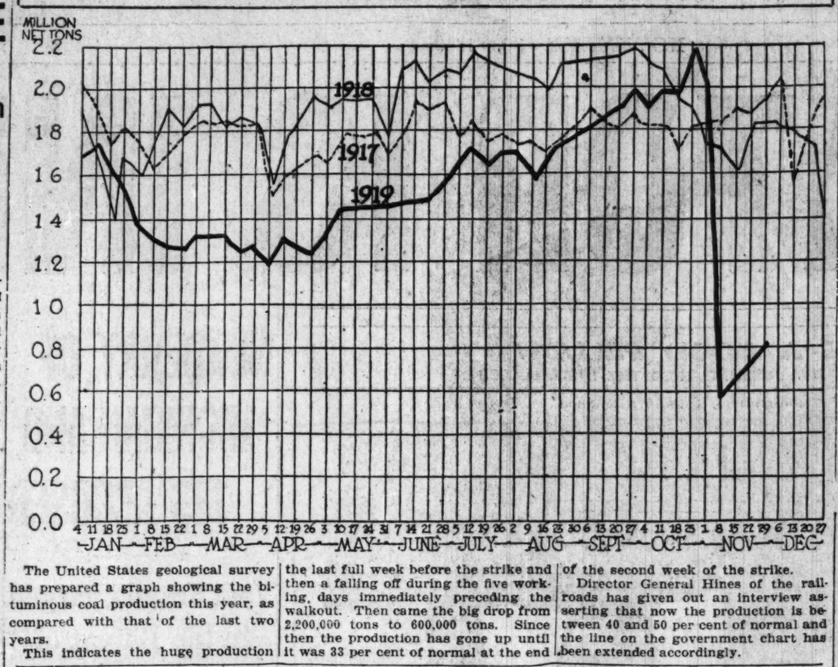
What Soft Coal Miners Have Done This Year

Bituminous Production of Last Three Years as Compared in Chart Prepared by the United States Geological Survey.



The United States geological survey has prepared a graph showing the bituminous coal production this year, as compared with that of the last two years.

This indicates the huge production the last full week before the strike and then a falling off during the five working days immediately preceding the walkout. Then came the big drop from 2,200,000 tons to 600,000 tons. Since then the production has gone up until it was 33 per cent of normal at the end of the second week of the strike.

Director General Hines of the railroads has given out an interview asserting that now the production is between 40 and 50 per cent of normal and the line on the government chart has been extended accordingly.

TIME FOR OPTIMISM IN STRIKE PAST, SAYS COAL TRADE JOURNAL

THE Black Diamond says: "The coal trade situation changed the last week from one of uncertainty to one of certainty—a certainty of a nation-wide famine unless the miners are back in the mines immediately. Reassuring talk to the effect that the country as a whole can withstand the tieup in the majority of the bituminous fields until Jan. 1 is more than offset by actual conditions at manufacturing plants and in dealers' yards, as well as by the constantly increasing check which coal committees are putting on coal releases.

"The northwest appears to be in better condition than many sections nearer the source of supply. Distribution from Minnesota into the Dakotas and Montana has had the result of preventing suffering.

"As to anthracite production, the output has been maintained at a high level. Canada has followed the lead of the United States, and as a result of the curetailed imports from this country has put an embargo on coal exportation."

FIVE ARE KILLED IN DETROIT GALE; 3 DIE IN INDIANA

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 29.—Five persons were killed here and a score of others injured in a storm that swept across southern Michigan tonight.

Three Killed in Indiana.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 29.—Two men dead in Indianapolis, one woman killed at Muncie, and thousands of dollars' damage to property was the toll of a wind storm that swept Indiana this afternoon. Scores were more or less seriously injured on the streets here.

Fort Wayne, Anderson, South Bend, and several northern cities report bad storm.

Paris Printers Vote to Return to Their Work

PARIS, Nov. 29.—The striking printers of Paris at a meeting today voted 741 to 463 to resume work. The strike committee has decided to approach the directors of the newspaper with a demand that none of the printers be dismissed because of the strike.

FIGHT TO SAVE KANSAS CITY IN FUEL FAMINE

Massmeeting Today to Consider Curbs on Industries.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 29.—A massmeeting of citizens to consider action on the coal shortage, made more critical by a railroad switchmen's strike here late this afternoon, was called for tomorrow morning. This call was issued this afternoon at a conference of the mayors of Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kas., and representatives of commercial and industrial enterprises.

Walter S. McLucas, president of the chamber of commerce, suggested at that meeting the complete closing of all industrial plants, stores, and office buildings Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of next week as a means for saving coal. This proposition will be presented to the mass meeting tomorrow.

Rail Strike Adds to Trouble.

Only ten carloads of coal have been placed on the unloading tracks. The switchmen's strike makes it doubtful if the several hundred carloads in reserve here can be shifted so as to be available.

William Volker, speaking for the Kansas City, Mo., school board, offered to the fuel administration the 650 tons of coal in the school reserves, and it will be sold by dealers operating under the fuel administration.

Colder weather is predicted for tonight in this section and it was believed much suffering would follow.

Atlanta Activities Restricted.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 29.—Fuel control orders have been issued here imposing the following restrictions:

Electric signs not to operate.

Plants, except public utilities and continuous process plants, to be open only forty-eight hours a week.

Stores and office buildings to be open only from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

All places of public amusement to be open only from 1 p. m. to 10:30 p. m.

These orders are to be effective throughout the southern fuel control region at noon Monday.

Omaha Industry Curbed.

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 29.—Because of the depleted fuel supply in Omaha, the fuel administration today further curtailed the use of coal in business houses and places of amusement.

Omaha factories will go on a five and one-half hour basis next Monday. Retail stores will be open seven hours a day and office buildings will be heated only six hours a day. Churches will have one three hour service a week.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 29.

CANCELLATION today on insistence of Mrs. Wilson of an important treaty conference between President Wilson and Senator Hitchcock tended to confirm in the minds of many apprehensive persons here the persistent reports that the president's physical condition is worse and that he is recovering with difficulty from a partial paralysis.

RESOLUTIONS directing armed intervention in Mexico will be introduced in the senate next week by Senator King of Utah, who says he has returned to Washington to urge congress to take the initiative toward Mexico and end "watchful waiting."

GOVERNMENT departments are watching developments closely in the coal strike since negotiations were broken off here Thursday and will prosecute operators or miners who deliberately seek to restrict production. Fuel Administrator Garfield declared today that reports that the present crisis would be used as a means of destroying the miners' union were without foundation.

THE department of labor, through Assistant Secretary Post, announces that the case against Emma Goldman, the anarchist, had been closed and that she is to be deported. The place of deportation is to be hereafter determined.

'WILL AMERICA FAIL US?' ASKED BY CHURCHILL

World League Wholly Its Plan, He Says; 'Those Who Suffer Wait.'

LONDON, Nov. 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—"Will America Fail Us?" is the title of an article by Winston Spencer Churchill, secretary of war, in the Illustrated Sunday Herald.

"There is no nation in the world less likely to put a grudging construction upon its honorable obligations," the secretary says. "There is no people in the world who would feel more deeply any sense of reproach in regard to a matter of duty. They do not expect foreigners to tell them their duty. In that case they might argue about it. But, left to themselves, in their own way, and in their own time, American democracy will make good to the extreme jot and title every honorable claim which may be made upon them."

League an American Plan.

Mr. Churchill contends that the league of nations was an American plan pressed upon the peace conference with the influence and authority of the United States, and that the whole character of the peace settlement was determined by American influences. The complete breakup of the Austrian empire, leaving a system of small rival states, with central Europe in grave disorder and Vienna without food, was mainly due to American initiative, he says.

"To carry such a policy half way, and to carry it no farther," he says, "to destroy the old organization without attempting to supply the new; to sweep away the imperial system without setting in its place a league of nations systems would indeed be an act from which America should recoil and which posterity would certainly condemn.

Suffer Waiting for U. S.

"The whole Turkish empire has remained in a state of quasi-dissolution all these months, awaiting an American decision, and now perhaps for many months more all those millions of helpless human beings must remain, sinking ever deeper into bankruptcy, famine, and anarchy, without being able to make a single plan to save themselves.

"It would only remain to leave France alone on the Rhine confronted with Germany, and probably later on with Russia, to squander irretrievably the whole victory gained by French, British, and American exertions. A more melancholy page in human history could hardly be conceived. We cannot believe that it will be written by American hands."

Does Not Blame Republicans.

Mr. Churchill does not blame the Republican party, which, he says, could not be expected to throw away any kind of voting strength; he doesn't consider it less friendly to England or less inclined to shoulder its obligations towards Europe than the Democratic party. He recalls that Premier Lloyd George took to Paris a British empire delegation which was virtually an informal senate and took no action without its approval.

In conclusion he pays a tribute to President Wilson's services to mankind.

WOMAN DIES AFTER BURNS.

RAILWORKERS AT KANSAS CITY OUT ON A STRIKE

Union Chief Says the Walkout Has No Authority.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 29.—Heads of railroads centering in Kansas City tonight addressed telegrams to the governors of Missouri and Kansas asking them to appeal to the federal government to supply troops to insure operation of trains during the strike of railway switchmen here.

Railroad officials tonight said efforts would be made with such switchmen as remain loyal, and by the transfer of men from other departments, to keep trains moving. Freight trains made up this afternoon were leaving the terminals here tonight. About 1,500 men are affected by the strike, which was called late today, and which has been termed "unauthorized" by national union officials.

Plan to Offset Effects.

Measures to meet the strike were considered tonight by heads of the railroads entering here, meeting with W. M. Corbett, president of the Kansas City Terminal railway and local representative of the United States railroad administration. Results of the conference have not been announced.

The full effect of the strike will not be known until 8 o'clock tomorrow morning, when the day crews are scheduled to go to work, Mr. Corbett said. He added that switchmen of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific and of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, members of the union, are not leaving their places, but members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen employed by Terminal roads and the Terminal company are going on strike.

Strike Opposed by Lee.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 29.—W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, today wired W. M. Corbett, government railroad representative at Kansas City, that the strike of trainmen there is illegal and that no protection or benefits of the brotherhood would be given to men engaging in illegal strikes at Kansas City or other points.

Broken Father Begs at Door of His Daughter Unaware

Five years ago Henry Aumont was earning $15,000 a year in New York. He took to drink and a year later disappeared.

Two weeks ago his daughter, Mrs. W. F. Morrison, 1165 East Sixty-second street, heard a knock at the back door. A man was standing there unshaven poorly dressed, but the image of her father. He begged something to eat.

She ran back into the next room and called her mother, but when they returned the old man was running away.

A man with the same name was found listed in the directory, but he proved not to be the missing man. Mrs. Morrison, however, is sure her father is in Chicago.

U. S. CHIEF PUT O. K. ON 23 CENT SUGAR, HE SAYS

Permit by Fair Price Member Claimed by Merchant.

J. H. A. Schroeder, owner of a grocery and meat market at 232 North Cicero avenue, declared last night he had received special permission from Lorenzo T. Plummer, a member of the government fair price committee, to sell sugar for 23 cents a pound, 9½ cents in excess of the price fixed by government. He asserted that Maj. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the committee, heard the conversation and gave his assent.

Schroeder is a member of the subcommittee on meats and markets of the fair price committee, appointed by Maj. Sprague under the direction of United States District Attorney Charles F. Clyne. Neither Mr. Plummer nor Maj. Sprague could be reached by phone last night.

Pool Bought 10,000 Pounds.

The grocer made his statement after City Food Director Russell J. Poole had placed in Mr. Clyne's hands evidence naming Schroeder as one of a pool of ten retailers who purchased 10,000 pounds of sugar at 21¼ cents a pound from Surkin & Portnoy, wholesale grocers at 121 West Kinzie street. Mr. Poole claims Surkin & Portnoy purchased this same sugar from See-Moon & Co. for 11 cents a pound, making a profit of $1,050 on the deal. He requested Mr. Clyne to press federal prosecution against Mandel Portnoy "with all vigor."

Mr. Poole said that with the exception of Schroeder other members of the pool had been content to sell the sugar at 14 cents a pound, accepting a loss of 7½ cents a pound in order to supply their customers. Complaints had been received, however, both by Mr. Poole and the federal authorities that Schroeder had charged as high as 23 cents a pound, it was said.

"Charges Only 22 Cents."

"That is not true," said Schroeder last night. "I never charged 23 cents."

"How much did you charge?" he was asked.

"Twenty-two cents."

"Well, wasn't that 'way above the government price?"

"Yes, it was," Schroeder admitted, "but I got special permission to charge 23 cents if I wanted to. As it was, I accepted a profit of only half a cent."

"Who gave you this permission?"

"The department of justice. Why, before I even bought that sugar I went down to see Mr. Plummer about it. I wanted to know if it would be all right for me to pay 21¼ cents a pound for it. He said it would be all right, to go ahead and get it. He said I could add the 1½ cents profit. That would have made the price 23 cents."

"Ask Sprague," He Says.

"I wasn't satisfied with a telephone conversation. I wanted to verify it with a personal talk, so I went down to see Mr. Plummer. Maj. Sprague will bear me out. He heard everything that went on. He agreed it would be all right. You ask Sprague about it. He'll tell you."

"It was said you bought five bags of that sugar. Is that right?"

"Yes," he replied. "That's right."

"And you went into a pool with nine others?"

"Yes."

"Well, it is said the others charged only 14 cents."

"I heard that some of them did," Schroeder replied, "but I couldn't do it. As it was, I accepted a cent less than I had authority to charge."

Details of the Pool.

Mr. Poole in his letter to Mr. Clyne says that the money collected from the ten retailers in the pool was turned over to H. G. Thoeming, a Chicago Heights grocer.

"From an investigation as made," the letter continues, "it appears that on Thursday, Nov. 13, Mr. Thoeming, accompanied by William Cassin, 5047 Madison street, who is a bookkeeper for the Central Wholesale Grocers, 317 West Austin avenue, which is owned by a combination of grocers, called on Surkin & Portnoy.

"Mr. Thoeming deposited $50 in currency with Mr. Portnoy as part payment on the 100 sacks of sugar. Prior to that time Mr. Thoeming had talked with Mr. Portnoy by telephone and, in the presence of Mr. Thoeming and Mr. Cassin, Mr. Portnoy called up Robert Edelson, room 1009 Conway building, telling Mr. Edelson that Mr. Thoeming had made a $50 deposit, which conversation was overheard by the witness, and thereafter Mr. Portnoy told Mr. Thoeming to call back on the following day to haul the sugar.

"Paid $2,150 in All."

"The investigation shows that thereafter Mr. Cassin, accompanied by Edward Bole, a caterer, 7422 Washington street, Forest Park, called at the place of business of Surkin & Portnoy, and that Mr. Cassin paid there in currency to Mr. Portnoy $2,100, which, added to the $50 previously paid by Mr. Thoeming, made $2,150.

"Thereafter Mr. Bole hauled the sugar from the railroad yards around Seventeenth street, the sugar being delivered to Mr. Bole upon an order signed by See-Moon & Co. on the Grand Trunk railroad, with some testimony that Mr. Portnoy secured the release through the intercession of Mr. Edelson.

"It also appears that Mr. Portnoy purchased this sugar in question from See-Moon & Co. at $11 per bag, and that the bill was made to Surkin & Portnoy.

100 Bags Distributed.

"Investigation further discloses that the 100 bags of sugar were distributed as the following in quantities indicated and that each contributed to the fund of $1,150, paid in proportion to the number of bags received:

H. G. Thoeming, Chi. Heights.20 bags
C. H. Garbers, 5728 South-blvd...10 bags
E. Freeman, 1703 N. Whipple-st..10 bags
J. H. A. Schroeder, 232 N. Cicero 5 bags
J. Westricker, 905 Chicago-av....10 bags
Mr. Swenson, 5695 Ridge-av.....10 bags
H. Garbers, 239 South-blvd.....10 bags
Mr. Gotch, Chicago-av. and Marion-st., Oak Park ..... 5 bags
G. Hinckler, 3457 W. Chicago-av.10 bags
Dreffein Bros., 959 N. Leavitt-st.10 bags

"As a result of our investigation I am of the opinion that Mandel Portnoy has been guilty of unfair practices and I trust that this case will be taken up by you and pressed with all vigor."

Pagin to Aid Prosecutions.

Oliver E. Pagin, federal indictment expert, arrived yesterday to aid District Attorney Clyne in prosecuting profiteers.

Immediate attention will be given the preliminary hearings of thirty sugar dealers arrested a week ago. Charges of violating the Lever food act may be added to the charges of conspiracy to levy excessive prices now resting against the dealers, it was learned.

The "Cost of Living" division of the federal investigation bureau has been ordered to push its investigations of all late profiteering complaints. It is believed that sugar indictments will be returned before the end of this week and that all food cases will be brought to trial within a month.

TWO MORE CARS OF FISH ORDERED IN WAR UPON H. C. L.

WATCH for THE TRIBUNE'S fish sales. Sling a hook into High Cost of Living.

Orders were given yesterday for two cars of fresh sea fish for the second week of the campaign to reduce HI Cost, actually, not academically. The sea food will be brought by express from Boston in refrigerator cars. The fish will be iced, but not frozen. It will be placed on sale direct to consumers next THURSDAY and FRIDAY.

The distributing points will be the Milwaukee avenue and Irving Park municipal markets and the B. & O. tracks at Grand Crossing and South Chicago, where sales will be made from the cars. Other marketing places may be added. Prices will be the same as last week. Watch THE TRIBUNE for announcements.

The surplus fish left from Friday's opening sale, when twelve tons were purchased by consumers despite the fact that it was the day after Thanksgiving, was given away yesterday, most of it going to charitable institutions. No unsold stock is to be kept on hand for the next week's sales.

THIEVES STEAL BAGS OF SUGAR VALUED AT $2,783

Twenty-seven thousand five hundred pounds of sugar in 100 pound bags was stolen last night when thieves using a motor truck forced entrance into an auxiliary storeroom of the L. Wall Commission company at 1309 South Clinton street. The firm valued the sugar at $2,783.

A delivery wagon of the Garrity Teaming company, 238 South Jefferson street, was stolen yesterday while the driver was in a State street department store. The wagon was loaded with merchandise valued at $1,500. The police later found it at North Clark street and Grand avenue. The merchandise had been removed.

Policeman Jeremiah Mulligan of the Desplaines street station yesterday took into custody Eddie Jackson, known as "Eddie, the Immune," at Madison and Sangamon streets. Mulligan said he suspected him of being involved in a number of pickpocket cases reported on Madison street cars. Victims would be asked to look at Jackson, he said.

STOKES GRIEVES AT CHARGE HE IS A DRUG ADDICT

New York, Nov. 29.—[Special.]—W. E. D. Stokes announced in a statement today that he had been accused of being a drug and whisky addict, and that he had recently been swamped with advertisements and booklets from drink and drug sanitariums, besides many telephone calls giving suggestions as to how to overcome his rumored bad habits.

In denial of the "charges" he wrote in part:

"Here I am today, publicly posted and advertised from one end of the country to the other as a 'drug fiend' and 'drunk,' and I doubt if there is a man in the country who is not an absolute teetotaler who has used less of liquors, or knows less about them, than I. I very seldom even drink tea or coffee, and have never smoked. In fact, I am opposed to their use, and as for drugs, I can remember but two occasions in my life when a drug was administered to me—on both occasions by physicians."

Court Orders Release of 228,400 Pounds of Sugar

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 29. — Federal Judge Faris today ordered the immediate release of 228,400 pounds of sugar which was seized by government agents last Saturday at a cold storage plant, where it was held for a wholesale fruit preserving company. The judge held that the manufacturing company had only purchased a reasonable supply for its own use.

A BELATED WELCOME

More than two thousand American boys who took on with the fighting "Canucks" at the beginning of the war marched through the loop yesterday and received Chicago's belated praises for a good job well done.

They were boys who slipped back into civilian clothes without any other welcome than that bestowed on them by their friends and families. By request they turned out yesterday to give Chicago a good look at the conquerors of Vimy ridge. It was a bad day for kilts, but they were all stepping high. Three bands led the parade, one of them from Great Lakes.

Lieut. D. H. Grant was grand marshal, and Maj. J. A. Boak "O. C." Capt. T. J. White, who made a daring escape from a Turkish prison during the war, headed the column of uniformed marchers. Several hundred veterans in "civvies" followed.

CENTRAL MARKET URGED AS PART OF CHICAGO PLAN

A movement favoring a great central wholesale produce market which will fit in as a part of the Chicago Plan, is under consideration by South Water street business houses, according to information given out last night by Frank G. Heilman, a member of the board of directors of the Chicago poultry board.

"The section of the city favored by a majority of the commission merchants is north of the river and west of Clark street," Mr. Heilman said.

Among organizations which have favorably discussed the move are the National League of Commission Merchants, the Chicago Mercantile exchange, the Chicago poultry board, and the Boosters' club of commission merchants.

MONDELL SAYS ECONOMY WILL BE WATCHWORD

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Economy stands first among the principles which should actuate the new session of congress, according to Representative Mondell of Wyoming, Republican leader of the house.

"I place economy first," said Mr. Mondell, "because, in my opinion, the lack of the practice of it in private and public life is at the bottom of many of our present day difficulties, and the government should set an example by the curtailment of doubtful, unnecessary, or useless expenditure.

"The exercise of sound judgment and wise discretion in the practice of economy will be essential to avoid penuriousness or the hampering of essential federal activities. We must, however, prepare to give the most careful scrutiny to every item of estimate, and particularly to the many demands that will be made for increased expenditure."

SHOOTS HIMSELF AFTER QUARREL WITH HIS WIFE

West Park Policeman John Seltser, seeing a man lying on the grass in Humboldt park, asked:

"What's the matter?"

"Just shot myself."

"Why?"

"Quarreled with my wife."

"What about?"

"I won't tell."

He was identified as Charles Michalek, a tailor, living at 1744 North Hoyne avenue. At the Norwegian hospital it was stated he would recover. Mrs. Michalek was summoned.

"Yes, we quarreled," she said.

"What about?"

"I won't tell, but I'm sorry."

ROBBERS CHOOSE WRONG DRUGGIST; 1 SHOT, 2 FLEE

Store Owner Is Wounded, but Guards Captive Till the Police Arrive.

Bandits, presumably, believe that druggists in general are a mild sort in whom there is no harm—save now and then in the way of wrong prescriptions.

But Thaddeus P. Chrzanowski, who runs a drug store at 1801 West Huron street, and lives above it with his wife and family, is not of this variety.

During the winter he constantly carries a loaded automatic in his back pocket and he draws it quick as a flash. He chased three bandits last New Year's eve with that automatic, speeding them out of his place with the old year and a volley of steel jacketed bullets.

Shoots One, Routs Two.

Last night three men came in. The first asked for a package of cigarets. While the druggist was about to reach in and get them two other men entered and, crying out, "We've got you now," began to shoot.

Out came the automatic, and seven shots followed one another in quick and effective succession.

The man who asked for cigarets fell with a bullet in each arm and one in his neck for good luck. A second man fell flat in the doorway, but was assisted to his feet by the third and managed to escape.

Chrzanowski was shot in the left arm, but with the automatic he continued guard over the man on the floor until the arrival of the police. Then he fainted.

The wounded man said he was Otto Brauer, who lived with a sister, Mrs. Emily Rosenheim, at Goethe and Wells streets. He insisted he was not with the other two men and that the weapon found near him was not his. However, he could not tell what he was doing in that neighborhood, and Mrs. Anna Barnas, 1756 Huron street, identified him as one of three men who had run out of the grocery store next door a few minutes previous to the shooting.

Grocer Routs Robber Trio.

The grocery is owned by Joseph Baran, and is at 1803 Huron. Baran, not liking the looks of the three men, one of whom, by the way, asked for cigarets, went to the rear of his store and got his revolver. It was then that the three men ran. Baran had scarcely put the revolver back in its accustomed place when he heard the shooting in the drug store.

"I don't know why they said 'We've got you now,'" said Chrzanowski. "They were not the three men who tried to hold me up last New Year's eve. But it's nothing. This place used to be a saloon. Quite a number of men were killed here in holdups. It seems to have a fascination for gunmen. But it's all right; there's a new clip in the automatic."

Brauer was taken to the bridewell hospital after a relative told the police he had been released from Pontiac a month ago after serving a term for burglary.

St. Louis Thieves Murder Jeweler in Robbing Him

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Paul Flucks, 70 years old, a collector of diamonds, was shot and killed by thieves who attempted to hold him up in his jewelry store at 616 South Fourth street today. Flucks was wounded in the right ear, in the abdomen, and in the back. He died in an ambulance.

Billy Dansey's Death Is Mystery to Coroner's Jury

Hammonton, N. J., Nov. 29.—The coroner's jury investigating the death of "Billy" Dansey rendered its verdict early tonight. The child came to his death "between Oct. 8 and Nov. 21, when and where being unknown to the jury," the verdict said.

CONDEMNED MAN SLAYS KEEPER; BADLY INJURES 4

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 29.—Paul Kowalski, awaiting death by hanging for the murder of a woman, killed his keeper, Constable J. C. Springstead, and seriously injured four turnkeys, one of whom may die, in the Barton street jail here today.

The condemned man, who was allowed to exercise in the cell corridors, suddenly attacked Springstead, his only guardian, choking him and then cutting his throat with a sharpened spoon.

Four keepers rushed to Springstead's assistance. Arthur Auty, chief turnkey, the first to reach the condemned man, was stabbed in the chest and is not expected to live. Sergt. Lawrie, a policeman, also was stabbed and is in the hospital in a serious condition. Two other turnkeys received injuries.

Kowalski was finally overpowered and thrown back into the death cell.

Montenegro Is Ruled by Serbs with Bayonet

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

TRIESTE, by Courier to Paris, Nov. 29.—That the people of Montenegro, eager for their independence and political freedom, are held under the iron grip of the Serbs by force of arms, is the substance of the report of the Count de Salis, head of the interallied mission which spent some months in Montenegro and Albania.

MERCURY FALLS 39 DEGREES; GALE SPREADS DAMAGE

Suffering Hits City with the Temperature 16 Above Zero.

His frigid majesty, King Winter, blew into Chicago this morning in the wake of a nipping nor'wester that lowered the temperature 39 degrees in fourteen hours and caused suffering in the poorer districts.

A forty-five mile wind from the southwest, which attained its maximum velocity at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and inflicted some damage, heralded his advent. At 10 a. m. the official temperature was 55; at 7 o'clock last night it had receded to 21 degrees above zero; at midnight it was 18, and at 3 a. m. the reading was 16.

The wind in the meantime had shifted to the northwest, and the weather bureau announced that the cold wave would remain indefinitely.

Coal Crisis Adds Interest.

With the corresponding increase in coal consumption which this betokens and the fact that the city already is on fuel rations renewed interest was manifested in efforts to adjust the coal mining controversy.

The first case of suffering to be reported to the police was recorded when Mrs. John McCormick carried her four shivering children into the South Clark street station and asked Desk Sergeant Thomas Conley for shelter.

Her husband had deserted her, she said, and they had been living at the Sarah Hackett Home for Women at Prairie avenue and East Twenty-fourth street. She paid out her last penny for lodging yesterday morning and was then forced to seek police aid. She and the children, who range from 3 to 12 years in age, were sent to detention home No. 3.

Wind Breaks Window.

The wind shattered a large window in the Fred Stine Furniture company store at 4732 Lincoln avenue and flying glass cut Mrs. Minnie Walsh of 2432 Blaine place and Mrs. L. Miller, 4713 North Western avenue. The Robey street police conveyed them to the Ravenswood hospital, where their injuries were dressed.

Morris Blau, 1542 South Ridgeway avenue, suffered a fracture of the left leg when his express wagon was lifted up and tossed in a ditch at South Western avenue and West Eighteenth street. Both horse and wagon landed upside down. Policeman Joseph Clancey extricated Blau. The wagon was wrecked. The horse was slightly bruised.

Sign Wrecks Windows.

A projecting electric sign was blown from its fastenings, breaking windows of the Barker System bakery at 362 East Fifty-first street and of a realty office at 360, next door. A number of clerks in the bakery were slightly cut by glass.

Lincoln, Jackson, and other parks reported that many small trees, as well as shrubbery, had been uprooted.

SUPREME COURT HEAD DECLARES L. AND R. PERIL

Landis Tells Bar That All Strikes Should Be Outlawed.

Characterizing the initiative and referendum as a "dangerous experiment in direct democracy," Frank K. Dunn, chief justice of the Supreme court of Illinois, last night sounded a warning to members of the Illinois Bar association, urging that every patriotic citizen actively oppose the wave of radicalism which, he said, is sweeping the country.

Judge Landis, the third speaker at a dinner in honor of the justices of the Supreme court in the gold room of the Congress hotel, followed the same line of thought. He expressed his regret that his position on the federal bench precluded his wielding a club and literally smashing a few bolshevik heads.

Must Be Met "Head-On."

Both jurists held to the view that the present industrial and social unrest is one of the greatest problems growing out of the war and that it must be faced squarely and met "head-on."

"Our forefathers knew what they were doing when they founded our American government on the principle of a representative republic," Chief Justice Dunn said. "They did not intend that our government should be administered as a direct democracy.

"The initiative and referendum is a step in the direction of the destruction of all constitutional limitations. It will nullify the judicial powers of the government. It will empower the majority with autocratic control, and deny justice to the minority.

Constitution in Danger.

"As first one state and then another approves of this dangerous experiment, the question we should ask ourselves is, 'Do we want to change the very foundation stones of our government and tear down the safeguards of our constitutional liberties?'"

"It is now time that we get back to our accepted form of government. During the war the people of their own volition submitted to autocracy and the constitution was pushed into the background. Freedom of action should now be restored to business and individuals.

"Bolshevism is the worst of the evils growing out of the war. It is the fullest development of Socialist democracy. It must be destroyed or we will be destroyed. Bolshevism is the despotism of a mob."

Landis Hits Bolshevism.

"It is my own personal opinion," Judge Landis said, "that bolshevism is as strong today in Russia as it ever was. But bolshevism in American can never endure, and bolshevism can never endure in Russia if our American constitution endures here."

Judge Landis entered into a discussion of strikes and labor unrest.

"A few months ago a certain trial over which I presided was sometimes referred to as a 'labor trial,'" he said. "It was no such thing. Labor had nothing to do with it. It was simply a case where certain men were on trial for treason.

"I want to say that there has never been a bomb set off in this country which was exploded by the true exponents of the cause of labor.

Would Outlaw Strikes.

"The time has come in our civilization when the thing called a strike should be outlawed. I hope that the men who write our new constitution will so devise it that strikes as a means of settling labor disputes will be abolished forever."

Justice Floyd E. Thompson of Rock Island declared that the growing contempt for the law is a manifestation of the revolutionary spirit.

For Free Legal Advice.

The board of governors of the association went on record as favoring the lending of legal assistance by members to deserving poor persons.

A report finding fault with the present jury system for "having twelve men dragged from their ordinary labors, to spend days of time passing on civil claims for a few hundred dollars," also was filed.

The system of continuances in court was criticized from the standpoint of remuneration to attorneys.

Movement for Republic Perils Roumanian Throne

PARIS, Nov. 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—A movement looking to the establishment of a republic in Roumania, which is under the direction of Gen. Fofoza Averesco, former minister of war, and Take Jonescu, former minister without portfolio, has spread to Bessarabia, Transylvania, and Bukowina, according to a Bucharest dispatch to the Oeuvre. The situation is said to be alarming for the dynasty.

SEIZE FOUR AS HOTEL THIEVES.

Four inmates of the Saratoga hotel, 29 South Dearborn street, were taken into custody yesterday and Capt. Morgan A. Collins of the Central station said they were members of a band which had been robbing guests. Those held are Ella Carter and Jane Kline; Jack Gorman, room clerk, and Ralph Pryor, bellboy. A sailor was robbed of $1,200 a few weeks ago, the captain said.

MASSES OF REDS THROWN BACK BY ESTHONIANS

LONDON, Nov. 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—Bolshevik forces have been fiercely attacking Esthonian troops on the Narva front since Thursday, but have been repulsed with heavy losses, according to an Esthonian official statement.

The attacks have been in close formation under cover of heavy artillery fire.

The Esthonian government has announced that peace negotiations with soviet Russia will be begun at Dorpat on Tuesday. The soviet delegates, it is stated, will cross the front in the neighborhood of Pskov.

Judge Pleads for Home for Neglected Children

Judge Victor P. Arnold of the Juvenile court pointed out the need of a home for neglected children last night at a benefit entertainment in the City Hall Square building. He said every child is entitled to the privilege of home training, even if it is in a charitable institution. The affair was arranged to aid in obtaining funds for the Theodore Roosevelt Home for Dependent Children.

HUNGER GNAW AT VIENNA VITALS; PEOPLE FREEZE

Endurance Near Snapping Point and Revolt Perils City.

BY FARMER MURPHY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

VIENNA, Nov. 28.—[Delayed.]—This city of more than 2,000,000 people, which suffered bitter hardships for four years, only to have them intensified by one year of peace, is fast approaching a point of desperation. There is little endurance left in the uncomplaining people, but there comes a time when humans who have been long racked with hunger and cold have become savages and fight with their last remaining strength for existence.

This period in Vienna almost has been reached. If substantial and permanent help is not forthcoming immediately the people, made mad by starvation, cold, and darkness, may begin to burn and plunder and invade the surrounding country searching for something to retain life.

Authorities Are Powerless.

The authorities admit they are powerless to keep order. A group of highest officials a few days ago told a prominent American that it will be impossible to repress outbreaks and that they feared the worst. An expert who knows every detail of the food crisis and who has worked desperately to alleviate it told me that probably now it is too late to save the situation and that disorder is inevitable.

This week's bread ration of one-half a loaf was not enough for one whole slice and the bread was barely eatable. The flour ration for cooking was only one-half a pound for the entire week. This was supplemented by a quarter of a pound of lentils.

The fuel situation is equally deplorable, the pitiful amount of sixteen pounds per week per family being the quota. This is scarcely a half a scuttleful and is only enough, as any householder knows, to make a little fire once a day for cooking. Yet one-third of the population is unable to get even this trifle.

The factories have been refused coal. People are beginning to mob coal and wood wagons in the streets and tear down wooden gates and fences. One family burned all its kitchen furniture to make a little fire in the room of the sick mother. Doubtless there are thousands of similar cases.

No Food for Rich or Poor.

Food is practically unobtainable for thousands on account of the scarcity and price. Thousands have not tasted even a bite of meat for weeks. One man known to me personally, who has money as well as exceptional opportunities of getting food for his home, said the other day that his family then was having a small piece of meat, the first he had been able to obtain in three weeks.

The extra portion of milk for children under 2 years has been cut off. Probably 300,000 persons get only a meal a day in the middle class kitchens. They serve soup, some vegetables, a dessert, and occasionally a little fat meat for 3½ crowns.

It is the only thing warm most of these people have during the day. While it is nourishing, it is not enough to assuage hunger.

DEFENSE COUNCIL TELLS OF PEACE AND WAR CAREER

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—Declaring "there has come into being a new vital thread running through the social fabric of the country as the result of an emergency effort born of the war," the third annual report of the council of national defense, made public today, outlined the diverse activities of the council during the war and described the organization perfected to aid in the work of reestablishing the nation on a peace basis. The report estimated the total cost of the council from its inception in the winter of 1916 to to date at $1,500,000.

Summarizing the results, the report said the council unified the people at home; helped to mobilize industry; aided in the demobilization of the army and reemployment of soldiers and sailors; mobilized the business of the nation for peace time readjustment; organized women for war work; helped in making war finance drives successful, and engaged in hundreds of minor activities vital to war time success,

WILSON ILLNESS GIVES DELAY ON TREATY BATTLE

Hitchcock Fails to Obtain Talk and Prepare Plan.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—With congress on the eve of reconvening, President Wilson's condition today was such that his conference with Senator Hitchcock to formulate the administration's course in the treaty fight in the senate was called off. Secretary Tumulty said tonight that the president would receive Senator Hitchcock "as soon as he was able to see him." Dr. Grayson, pressed for confirmation of current reports that the president is partly paralyzed, reiterated his statement to THE TRIBUNE yesterday that he "would neither confirm nor deny" them.

Treaty Stays Buried a While.

Today's development tended to confirm the persistent rumors that his condition is worse. It had an upsetting effect on the peace treaty situation.

The belief in the senate was that the treaty would remain buried for a while. The president's annual message to congress will not be ready until Tuesday, and, according to Senator Hitchcock, probably will make no mention of the peace treaty. This probably will be reserved for a separate message.

Stand Taken by Hitchcock.

Senator Hitchcock is still confident the president will withdraw the treaty and resubmit it with a special message to the senate.

The senator also hopes for the elimination of the preamble and a material change in the Article X. reservation.

"The Article X. reservation is the main stumbling block," he said. "If that could be straightened out all else would be easy."

The senator is standing pat on his contention that the obligation imposed upon the United States by Article X. must not be destroyed, while the reservationists, including even those of the "mild" group, insist that they would never agree to any compromise that permits this obligation to remain.

MIND BLANKED BY AUTO WRECK, WANDERS A WEEK

Professor Cannot Tell His Experience; Will Recover.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 29.—Knocked unconscious in an automobile accident, wandering about for a week, his mind a blank, his new automobile missing, his pockets bulging with $25,000 in Liberty bonds and other securities, and appearing suddenly today in an attorney's office here was the experience of a college professor. He is Donald C. Keister, member of the University of Wisconsin extension division faculty.

Keister is in a hospital here unable to give an account of his experiences, but physicians say the cloud will gradually recede from his brain and he will recall in sequence the events leading up to his present predicament.

On Way to Pennsylvania.

Prof. Keister left Milwaukee Nov. 19 in his machine for Mount Pleasant, Pa., where his wife had been visiting his parents, the Rev. Dr. Lawrence Keister. His failure to arrive alarmed relatives and a quiet search was being conducted.

Late yesterday Marvin Wallach, an attorney here, received a letter from "Martha B. Thornton," dated Nov. 25, and mailed from Indianapolis, saying a man bearing Wallach's business card was being cared for there by a wealthy family following injuries in an automobile accident. The benefactors wished to conceal their identity, she wrote, and asked that Wallach furnish addresses of relatives of the man whom she described.

Contusion on Forehead.

Today investigations were started in three states, but before they were well under way Keister suddenly appeared here. It was plain he was suffering from aphasia. A large contusion on his forehead was his only injury. The last thing he remembered, Keister says, was telegraphing his wife that he was very ill. Wallach has learned that Keister checked out of the Claypool hotel, Indianapolis, Monday night and was proceeding to Pennsylvania on the Lincoln highway when there was a collision with another automobile. It is believed the people in the car with which he collided befriended the professor and that he managed to evade their scrutiny, and board a train for Milwaukee.

Police authorities of Wisconsin, Indiana, and Pennsylvania were searching for him up to today. Now the police of Indiana are looking for his automobile.

ALDERMEN MAP CONSTITUTION HOME RULE PLAN

Seek Full Control of All Utilities; Limits on Taxes Removed.

Restoration of every right ever possessed or even claimed by the city to control its public utility companies and regulate their charges is to be sought from the constitutional convention when it meets in January. In addition the city will ask for enlarged powers of levying general and special taxes, which will enable it to deal more advantageously with the public utility corporations.

The city's program which will be pressed in the constitutional convention was completed yesterday. It was drafted by the council committee on constitutional proposals, of which Ald. John H. Lyle of the Thirty-second ward is chairman.

It will be submitted to the city council tomorrow morning as the report of that committee. Its indorsement by the council is regarded as certain and it will then be presented to the constitutional convention as the official version of "What Chicago wants."

Council to Fix Rates.

At present the thing that most interests Chicagoans in connection with the program is that, if adopted, it will destroy all power of the state public utilities commission as far as Chicago is concerned. Instead of that body fixing car fares, gas, electric light, and telephone rates, the city council will do so. It will be a complete return to the old system under which the city council was supreme, with this difference—the council will be granted by the state constitution rights which it only claimed before and which were subject to review by the state courts. Moreover, the city council will be able to do things in a financial way which it only threatened to do before.

Here is the nub of the committee report as it affects the control by the city of its public utility companies:

"No law shall be passed by the general assembly granting the right to construct and operate a publicity utility requiring the occupation of city streets by permanent fixtures without requiring the consent of the city.

Exclusive Power to City.

"The city shall have exclusive power, either by the exercise of its legislative authority or by contract, to regulate the rates to be charged and the service to be rendered by persons or corporations supplying transportation, communication, light, heat, power, or other public utilities to the people of the city and enjoying special street privileges for that purpose.

"No state law shall be regarded as general which by reason of the conditions of its application is operative only in the city of Chicago.

"No law shall be questioned by reason of not being general if the city council by resolution shall accept the same."

Remove Limit on Taxes.

The last two paragraphs are aimed at the passage by the legislature of special legislation for Chicago which, to render it constitutional, is disguised as applying to "all cities with more than 500,000 population," of which, of course, Chicago is the only one in Illinois.

Next in interest to the city are the provisions of the report dealing with taxation. These practically remove all limits upon the tax rate in the city, except such as may be imposed by the city council, and give that body revenue raising rights which it has long sought.

The provisions relating to taxation are:

"The general assembly may vest the corporate authorities of the city of Chicago with power to make local improvements by special assessments or by special taxation on contiguous property, or otherwise.

Governor Must Approve.

"The city of Chicago may fix the limit of the annual tax rate on real or personal property in excess of the limit prescribed by law, with the approval of the governor, to be given only upon taking into consideration the recommendation of the tax commission (or authority performing the functions of the tax commission), such recommendations to be made only after a public hearing and by a written opinion.

"The excess maximum rate of taxation thus fixed shall be effective for a period not longer than five years, as prescribed by ordinance, but subsequent increases may be authorized in a like manner and for not exceeding a like period.

"The maximum rate so fixed may be inclusive or exclusive of taxes levied to meet indebtedness or interest thereon as the ordinance may determine."

Provides for Tax Referendum.

The exercising of the right of taxation is protected by a further provision:

"No law requiring governmental functions to be carried out in the city of Chicago, whether for a new activity or the enlargement of an existing activity, which shall impose a financial burden upon the city shall take effect in the city of Chicago until three months after its enactment, and if within that time the city council demands a submission of said law to the voters of the city, not until the same shall have been approved by the voters in accordance with general provisions made for that purpose."

There are several provisions for the extension of the bonding power, the most important of which are:

"The city of Chicago may borrow money for corporate purposes and issue bonds or other evidence of indebtedness therefor."

Submit Bonds to Voters.

"The aggregate indebtedness of the city of Chicago, including existing indebtedness, shall not at any time exceed the limit fixed by city ordinance, which limit may be expressed therein as a stated amount or by reference to the taxable resources of the city."

Provision is made that all bond issues shall be submitted to the voters. The really important point in connection with the proposed bond issue legislation, however, is that it leaves it in the hands of the city council to fix the limit of the bonded debt, instead of letting it remain with the legislature, or having it stipulated by the constitution itself.

Consolidation of the city with the other taxing bodies is provided for by the following paragraph:

"The charter may provide for the consolidation with the city of the municipal corporations, other than the county of Cook, now exercising taxing powers in any part of the city of Chicago or any of them."

May Consolidate with County.

Further provision is made for the possibility of the consolidation of the city and county governments.

Other provisions of the report are largely technical.

The council committee has been at work on its report for several months, assisted by experts.

BATES COLLEGE CALLS CHICAGO PASTOR AS HEAD

MABEL SYKES
THE REV. C. D. GRAY

The Rev. Clifton D. Gray, Ph. D., editor of the Standard, a Baptist national weekly published in Chicago, has been elected president of Bates college, Lewiston, Me. Because of pressure of other business he will not be able to take up his new duties until next May.

Dr. Gray has also been elected managing editor of a new official Baptist newspaper to be issued under direction of the general board of promotion next spring. He will accept that position only temporarily, until the new publication is organized.

Dr. Gray is a graduate of Harvard and Newton Theological institute. He received the degree of doctor of philosophy from the University of Chicago in 1901. He has been pastor of the First Baptist church at Port Huron, Mich., and of the Stoughton Street Baptist church, Boston.

HUNGARY VOTES ON KINGDOM OR REPUBLIC SOON

BUDAPEST, Nov. 29.—The first important act of the new provisional government of Hungary will be to call a plebiscite to decide between a constitutional monarchy and a republic, according to Karl Husar, the new premier, today.

In his first interview since assuming office he declared:

"After five years of war, revolution, and bolshevism, my government is the first lawful one not resting on force, but on the support of all parties. Hungary therefore finds itself on the way toward regeneration.

"A great work awaits us, and my first duty is to carry out the elections and then convoke the national assembly.

"Simultaneously with its first meeting a plebiscite along democratic lines will be held, in order that the people themselves may decide whether Hungary will be a kingdom or a republic. In this connection I have the assurance of the Socialists that if the plebiscite is really carried out along democratic lines they will submit to the will of the majority and to the choice of a ruler. If Hungary is to be a kingdom it will be along absolutely democratic lines."

He added that his government was merely provisional.

PARIS DIVIDED ON U. S. WITHDRAWAL

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Cables from Washington intimating the probable withdrawal of American warships from the Adriatic have produced mingled emotions in Paris. Some Americans who hold that the Italians are right in considering the presence of our ships in the Adriatic a dire menace to Balkan peace are overjoyed at the prospect of withdrawal. Others are criticising the administration for its policy of starting things it is unable to finish and being forced into a delicate situation by superior allied diplomacy. They point to the proposed withdrawal as typical.

OPEN LEGION CLUBHOUSE

The first American Legion clubhouse in the city is now open in South Chicago. A temporary organization of the 225 paid up members is headed by William Purdy as temporary commander.

Aided by the South Chicago Business Men's association and the district's Council of Defense, the South Chicago post is now "sitting pretty" in the old telephone building at 9117 Houston avenue. A restaurant and lounging rooms with library furniture, including piano, are already fitted up. A gymnasium, shower baths, and other features will follow. The cost has been about $7,000.

An Americanization committee, headed by a young fighting man of Polish birth, will become active at once.

It is expected this "dugout" will be emulated in all parts of Chicago.

BERLIN TRIES TO ESCAPE BLAME FOR SCAPA CASE

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—[Havas.]—The government has sent to the peace conference at Paris a supplemental memorandum with regard to the sinking by their crews of the German warships interned in Scapa Flow, and the conference demands for indemnification for the loss of the vessels.

The memorandum asserts that the internment of the fleet in Scapa Flow did not constitute the final disposition of the warships, the sinking of which must not be charged to Germany, but to the allies who interned the fleet in a British port and not a neutral port, which was contrary to the stipulations of the armistice.

Admiral von Reuter, the memorandum declares, was deprived of means of communicating with Germany and believed that the armistice ended at noon, June 21. Therefore, in accordance with maritime custom, he began sinking the fleet. The memorandum raises the additional point that Von Reuter was a prisoner; he had lost his command and, therefore, Germany's responsibility for his acts ceased to exist.

COL. BERMOND IN LEAGUE WITH WHITE RUSSIANS?

BY AXEL MOOS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 28.—Delayed.—It was learned from Mitau today that letters and papers discovered in the possession of Col. Bermond, former commander of the German and Russian forces, indicate the invader of Letvia was working in league with Gen. Denikine, Admiral Kolchak and Gen. Yudenitch. The letters prove a close bond between these generals who united in a military and political program to rule Russia. One letter from Gen. Yudenitch, referring to a proclamation issued by him that Bermond was not Russian, tells him to disregard his public utterances, which were politically necessary.

Russian soldiers captured by the Letts from the Bermond forces are being permitted to join Gen. Yudenitch, several hundred having gone to the front already. Arrangements are being completed for a passage of 6,000 of Bermond's troops through Letvia to fight the bolsheviki. American Commissioner Gade is making arrangements to feed them.

CHANGE IN FARE DUE IF TICKET PLAN IS FAILURE

Utilities Board to Act if Car Lines Earn Too Much.

A change in the surface lines' new rates of fare, it became known yesterday, may shortly be expected, if the 6 and 6½ cent ticket selling arrangement, which will go into effect at midnight, produces more revenue for the companies than the public utilities commission intended—6¼ cents a passenger.

Members of the commission will watch closely the public's purchases both of the ten ticket strips for 65 cents a strip and of the fifty ride bearer books at $3 each.

And should the public spurn the new opportunity to economize, so that the companies' income remains substantially as if all fares were 7 cents cash, another order of the commission will be issued.

Straight Fare Prospect.

In that event, a straight 6¼ cent fare will probably be decreed by the sale of four tickets for 25 cents, and in multiples thereof in number and price. Nor will the commission lose any time in putting the new system into effect.

Its personnel is considerably perturbed lest the volleys of unfavorable criticism, which have been launched especially against the $3 bearer books, influence the public to shun them, with the result that the surface lines' revenue again will greatly exceed the commission's calculation—a situation which arose after the 7 cent fare was ordered.

The new tickets were delivered yesterday to all the 163 sales agencies which the companies have designated, but some of the stores closed, not to reopen until Monday morning—eight hours or so after the utilities board edict is in operation. Banks in outlying districts took care of their customers last night, however, and cigar and drug stores will be open to the car riders today.

Preliminary indications were that the $3 books would be popular. They were purchased in considerable numbers, at any rate, by well dressed folk. The principal objection raised against them is the fact that only the bearer and persons accompanying him may ride.

Family Needs Many Books.

Assuming that the father of a family uses the book to carry him to work in the morning, books must either be purchased for every other member of the household who has occasion to use the cars, or they must pay more than 6 cents to travel.

A number of amusing projects were reported by telephone to the traction lines by persons who sought advice as to their legitimacy. The owner of an apartment building, for example, said he would like to arrange to assemble at a certain hour each morning all of his tenants who desired transportation downtown. The number would about exhause a book of fares. Provided all the passengers boarded one car at the same time, he was informed, the conductor would tear tickets from the book for as many persons as he cared to designate.

"Agitators" Are Attacked.

Attorney Harry P. Weber, representing the traction companies, informed Judge McGoorty in the Circuit court yesterday that "it is not the car riders who are doing the complaining about the 7 cent fare; all the complaints are coming from the city hall political agitators."

Mr. Weber also averred the administration should carry its fight for a 5 cent fare before the state Supreme court, which has already taken jurisdiction of the controversy in connection with the city's appeal from the order of the utilities board, granting the 2 cent increase.

A decision from the judge, whom the city asks to order impounded all revenue received by the traction companies in excess of that which would be produced by a 5 cent fare, is expected early this week. The hearing was continued until Tuesday morning.

MAYOR PROPHESIES COLD WINTER AND PLANS FOR SKATING

MAYOR THOMPSON turned weather prophet yesterday and prognosticated that we're in for a cold winter.

Proceeding on this theory the mayor acted to provide ponds for the school children to skate. His letter to President E. S. Davis of the school board follows, in part:

"In the rule of averages our open winter last year will be followed by a cold winter this year, which means that skating ponds will be available for a considerable period during the winter.

"I am anxious to give the boys and girls of Chicago every opportunity to take part in this healthy recreation.

"I believe there are innumerable pieces of school property, playgrounds and in some instances school yards, which can be used for this purpose and in many cases the boys in the schools will volunteer their services to bank the lots before the ground is frozen and have them ready to turn on the water at the earliest possible date.

The mayor also directed that the fire marshal, the bureau of small parks playgrounds, and beaches, and the commissioner of public welfare cooperate with the school board in the plan to create artificial ice skating ponds.

CARRANZA LIES! GERMAN LIES! U. S. HAS PROOF

Teuton Made Mexican Guns, Shells; Pair of Wireless Stations.

BY CAPT. KENT HUNTER.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Protestations of the Carranza government that no Germans held official position under the Mexican government and that no German wireless stations were permitted in Mexico during the world war have been proved false by documentary evidence now in possession of the United States investigating forces.

One document in proof is a letter intercepted during the war from Maximillian Klos, a German general, recipient of ten German decorations. He was at that time, and continuing to the present date, in command of all the Mexican munitions plants. He personally designed a 240 millimeter gun to be used in the coast defense of Vera Cruz and Salina Cruz, and under his directions sixteen of these monsters were manufactured and delivered.

Planned Visit to Germany.

Klos' letter told of how he intended to visit Germany after the war on an official mission for Mexico and how he had been in conference with the German minister in Mexico on several occasions.

The story of the German-built and formerly German-operated wireless station at Alamos, Sonora and Mazatlan, Sinaloa, is contained in another investigation report. It states that the two stations are still in operation, though now by Mexicans and with less success than could be obtained by use of the latest wireless apparatus.

Though the documentary proof is not disclosed, it has been learned that Klos has perfected a gas shell, and should the United States become embroiled with Mexico in war, this country's soldiers would have to face the same brutal brand of warfare that was loosed upon the world by the Germans.

Here's the Klos Letter.

The Klos letter reads in part as follows:

"My Dear Parents: I have just been appointed engineer general, and now have all military factories under my control, with 25,000 workers and full responsibility to the nation. At the end of this month I am going to New York, U. S. A., to purchase various materials.

"I am on very friendly terms with the German minister, and my wife and I have spent several evenings at his villa. I am the first honorary of the powerful German colony, and held in high esteem by all.

"I am sending some photographs of the cartridge factory and of the gun foundry. I have now been promoted to the rank of general and possess nine decorations and three high orders to wear in my buttonhole and the cross of honor (Verdienstehrenkreuz) around my neck. As soon as the war comes to an end I shall be sent on a mission to Germany."

On the back of the larger photograph inclosed was written:

"My model of the 240 millimeter guns for harbor and coast defense in Vera Cruz, Mexico, set up in the national artillery museum. Up to the present sixteen guns have been constructed."

The letter was addressed to Gen. Klos, Father, Mr. Herman Klos, Albrecht Strasse, 30 Berlin Stegliz, Germany. Inclosed with it was correspondence from the imperial German consulate in Mexico, federal district, to the foreign office, Berlin, addressed under cover to "Mr. F. Gersdorf, Martensalle 5, Copenhagen, Denmark." The postmark was "New York, 23, 3, 16," and indorsed on the back "G. Schadt, 11 Broadway, New York."

up the question of the most recent killing of an American citizen by a Carranza soldier in Mexico.

It is understood that the latest offense may not be taken up at all until the Jenkins case is disposed of, as it is not desired by the state department to give wider latitude to the existing issue that is being considered—the Jenkins case, in a manner, being made to represent compositely the apex of the long series of crimes against Americans in Mexico.

Native Law Unimportant.

It was intimated today that this government could not concern itself with the provision of the Mexican constitution which placed jurisdiction over foreign consular officers entirely in the hands of the federal judiciary, as construction of Mexican law is a matter solely for the Mexican authorities, foreign powers being obliged to treat solely with the federal government as represented by the executive.

The Mexican government, it is reported, wants America to arbitrate the Jenkins dispute. This expectation, it was hinted in a high administrative quarter, will be disappointed if the Mexican government fails to meet the requirements of the United States.

"Murder," an authority declared, "cannot be arbitrated; that was made evident by the United States in the case of Germany. A nuisance cannot be arbitrated, either; but must be abated."

There were said to be other recognized legal grounds that would justify nonarbitration by the United States, the treaty with Mexico permitting a refusal to arbitrate by the aggrieved party if arbitration should be deemed incompatible with the nature of the dispute.

A B C to Mediate, Belief.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Nacion today says it has learned from well informed diplomatic circles that there is a possibility of mediation by the governments in the A B C group (Argentina, Brazil, and Chile), with the object of composing the differences that have arisen between the United States and Mexico over the case of Consul Jenkins.

Won't Press Bandit Charge.

Laredo, Tex., Nov. 29.—The state of Puebla, Mexico, has no intention of trying Consular Agent Jenkins on a charge of conniving with bandits in his recent abduction, Gov. Cabrera declares, according to Excelsior, a Mexico City newspaper.

The only charge against the consul, the governor is quoted as saying, is that of perjury, which is solely within the jurisdiction of the court where the offense is committed.

YAQUIS AMBUSH FEDERALS; 200 KILLED, REPORT

Nogales, Ariz., Nov. 29.—Two hundred soldiers and several high officers of the Mexican federal army were killed in a recent ambuscade by Yaqui Indians at Onavas, near the eastern border of Sonora, according to advices to Francis J. Dyer, American consul at Nogales, Sonora, opposite here.

Villa Vengeance Told.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Pancho Villa has sent to the border for publication to the American people his plan of vengeance for the killing of Gen. Felipe Angeles.

"Every man who testified against Gen. Angeles, or who sat in silence at the court martial which sentenced him, will be captured and burned at the stake," says the Villa declaration, according to La Republica, a Mexican paper published here. "And for the members of the Home Defense league, who, through treachery, captured him, another death will be meted out. They accepted 1,000 pesos each for their reward. For this I will exact for each peso a drop of blood, one drop at a time."

Villa's threats are accepted seriously here.

BOY'S SKULL IS FRACTURED IN POOLROOM ROW

An alleged violation of a law may result in the death of Robert Scrivens, 14 years old, of 219 North Artesian avenue. He is at the county hospital suffering from a fractured skull. The injuries were received when he was attacked by several minors in a pool room at 1534 North Crawford avenue.

Early last evening several boys carried Scrivens to the office of Dr. Robert A. Oakes, 4005 West North avenue. He was unconscious and bleeding. The physician took the boy to the county hospital and from what information he could gain from the boys who had brought Scrivens to him learned Scrivens had been attacked in a fight in the pool room.

Capt. Wesley H. Westbrook of the Austin station ordered an investigation, as it is against the law to allow minors in pool rooms.

WIFE'S COOKING MOVES HUSBAND TO BITTER TEARS

Allowed to Smell but Not to Eat, He Seeks Court Aid.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

The man who spent the most miserable Thanksgiving in Chicago, so miserable that he cried about it, right out in public, is William Koss, who lives at 2509 North Crawford avenue. William has had three wives, but this one—

Three weeks ago William and Clara told the whole sad story to Judge Sheridan E. Fry of the Court of Domestic Relations. The court listened, and after hearing about other quarrels, all of them leading to conferences in which a referee was needed, advised them to live the way Clara suggested: William on the second floor of their two story home, and Clara and the seven children on the first floor.

Food Causes Trouble.

It so happens that the cook stove is on the first floor. William had a comfortable bed, but he had to go to restaurants for his meals, which were none too good. While leaving the premises, he would smell the savory dishes his wife prepared for the other eight-ninths of the family. He paid a weekly allowance to buy these things that he could smell but not eat.

Friday William visited the home of Charles H. Brayne, the Humane society officer who had the case in hand. Tears ran down his cheeks and he told how miserable he was.

"Yesterday was Thanksgiving," and he sobbed some more. "Clara wanted me to be even more miserable than usual, so she sneaked up stairs when I was out, took all the bedclothes, and stole my shirt and my underwear. That meant I had to stay indoors all day Thanksgiving and smell the dinner down stairs and not eat. It was terrible."

Mr. Brayne admitted that it was, and he said he would have to call another conference with Judge Fry to determine what could be done with Clara.

Wife Asks Help.

Mrs. William Nash of 710 South Kostner avenue made a pitiful plea yesterday to Judge Sheridan E. Fry to help her to a life that was worth the living my making her husband support her and her child and leave them to live alone. "I want to be something more than a maid in the house. I'm a young woman," and Mrs. Nash cried. "I care for the house and do all my own work, and wash on Sundays, and he doesn't even give me a bit with the work. I can't see anything ahead but work, and he won't give me enough to buy the comforts of life, to say nothing of any luxury, such as a little amusement once in a while."

Further questioning by Judge Fry brought out the fact that Mrs. Nash is the second wife, and that there is a grown son by a former marriage, in whom the father's interest centers. "He has deeded his property to his son, and his insurance is his son's.

Judge Fry continued the case.

Girl Locked Up.

A woman's everlasting desire to have the last word resulted yesterday in Ida Weinberg, 16, being turned over to the juvenile authorities, with orders from Judge Sheridan Fry that she be locked up in the Detention home until her case could be heard.

Ida was brought into the Court of Domestic Relations, where she charged Frank Ug, aged 40, a Chinese, with contributing to her delinquency. While the case was pending she went to Crown Point and married Frank. Judge Fry fined Frank $200, but remitted the jail sentence. Ida would have walked out in peace if she hadn't felt an irresistible desire to say something not quite nice to Assistant State's Attorney Micheael Rosinia. She said it in no weak terms. Judge Fry ordered her brought back and she was locked up.

A REAL ROMANCE

Chicago Stage Dancer Becomes Bride of Railroad Aid She Met While Studying Business World.

Mrs. George W. Campbell (Miss Treva Barretta)

The marriage of Miss Treva Barretta, a University of Chicago co-ed, to George W. Campbell of 6622 Greenwood avenue, is a story of real romance.

Last summer Miss Barretta, in quest of experience in the commercial world, accepted a position in the general offices of the Illinois Central railroad. Mr. Campbell worked for the same company, but was employed on the seventh floor, while Miss Barretta was on the ninth.

Business between the two officers seemed to increase astonishingly a short time after the advent of Miss Barretta, and George found it necessary to visit the ninth floor office several times daily.

In the fall Miss Barretta returned to the university and in addition took up the study of stage dancing. So proficient did she become in the latter that she accepted an offer recently to join Marie Dressler's "Tillie's Nightmare" company, then playing in Cleveland.

When the show reached Chicago last Sunday Mr. Campbell was at the train to meet it. Last Wednesday Miss Barretta became Mrs. Campbell.

Boy, 3 Times a Runaway, Flits Again, with $420

Max Siegal, 18 years old, of 1236 Newberry avenue, tired of Chicago's wintry breezes yesterday and departed for California after he had taken $420 belonging to his father.

Twice before Max decided New York was a good place to visit and then again he went to Cleveland.

"Max is a tramp of the rails," said his father to Sergt. Frank Dubec at the Maxwell street station last night. "He's been good for six months. Now he has taken my money and gone to California."

RECEIVER ASKED FOR MACQUEEN BROKERAGE FIRM

Concern Head, Charged with Diverting Gains, Assails Accuser.

Proceedings were begun before Judge Charles M. Foell yesterday to have a receiver appointed for the investment banking house of W. N. Macqueen & Co., with offices in the Otis building. According to the bill, Mr. Macqueen is alleged to have fraudulently diverted funds for his personal profit.

Although two stockholders, Katherine Guest and John McGinnis, are the authors of the bill, the main figure on the petitioning side is Everett R. Kraft, 926 Lawrence avenue, discharged secretary of the company. He accuses Mr. Macqueen of unlawful business operations. The latter charges Mr. Kraft with trying to disrupt the business he has spent his life in building up and says he tried to "blackmail" him.

Charge "Dummy" Investors.

According to the bill, Mr. Macqueen, a real estate broker, organized a corporation in April, 1914, for the purpose of purchasing bonds and transferred his private business to the corporation. His mother-in-law, Wilhelmina C. Eckhardt; his wife, Amanda H. Macqueen, and a lawyer, Jacob E. Replogle, were named as stockholders, with Mrs. Eckhardt owning 998 shares. The bill alleges they were not bona fide subscribers, but were given the money to purchase the stock as "dummies" of Mr. Macqueen. The latter denies this.

Electing themselves directors, the three stockholders authorized the purchase from Mr. Macqueen of his business, assets, and good will for $100,000. But, says the bill:

"Said corporation did not actually pay to W. N. Macqueen the sum of $100,000, but the actual consideration was the transfer of capital stock."

This statement also is denied by Mr. Macqueen.

"Diverted $75,000," Charge.

Shortly afterward the stock was increased to $200,000, and Mrs. Macqueen resigned as president of the corporation. Her husband was made president, treasurer, and general manager. The bill goes on:

"On March 23, 1917, said W. N. Macqueen . . . did pretend to organize a co-partnership, under the title W. N. Macqueen & Co., . . . and by that means has wrongfully and fraudulently diverted from said corporation unto his own use large earnings and profits to upwards of $75,000."

His method, according to the bill, was to act as middleman between the corporation and persons who issued bonds, buying at 90 cents, for instance, and selling to the corporation at 95. The total of bond issues handled in this manner was declared to be $459,500, with a personal profit, exclusive of interest, of $22,975.

Macqueen Gives His Side.

Mr. Macqueen's version differs materially.

"I formed a co-partnership with E. S. Klack for the purpose of loaning money for constructing buildings," he said last night. "The bonds were sold to the corporation, it is true, but after the accounts were balanced the profits of the co-partnership went to the corporation and thence to the stockholders."

He explained an assertion in the bill that he had taken bonds of the corporation to the amount of $6,300 and entered the amount on the books under the fictitious name of William Smith.

"There was a $6,300 loss on a building we were interested in," he said, "and Mr. Kraft, who had charge of all the books, suggested the loss be charged to William Smith. This was done. Then, when we made money on another building, $6,300 of the profits was credited to Smith in order to offset the loss.

Assails Former Aid.

"I took Kraft into the business more than a year ago at $25 a week. Then, about last Christmas, I decided to make him secretary. A few weeks ago I found out he was trying to raise dissension among some of the stockholders by circulating false rumors. Last Tuesday I called him into my attorney's office and discharged him.

"He told me he was going to have the corporation placed in the hands of a receiver. He promised he would let the matter drop if I would give him $25,000 and resign the presidency, which he wanted for himself."

Mr. Kraft scoffed at Mr. Macqueen's accusation of attempted "blackmail."

Mr. Macqueen has promised all indebtedness, in case any is found, will be promptly met. His attorney, J. Sherman Dudley, has stated all his client's actions will be justified and no stockholder will lose, "unless those seeking to wreck the company are successful."

Eddie the Immune—You're Right—He's In Again

"Eddie the Immune" is in again. Eddie—his real name is Edward Jackson—was picked up last night in front of his home at 1221 West Madison street to see whether he could explain a number of recent pocket pickings on Madison street cars. He has been arrested on an average of once a month since 1894 in Chicago, New York, Indianapolis, Detroit, Milwaukee, Cleveland, and other cities. Records show few convictions.

TRANSFER FOUR POLICE CAPTAINS IN NEW SHAKEUP

Cudmore Gets Big Job in the Warren Avenue Station.

Proposed and completed investigations of various police districts caused Chief of Police Garrity to make the following shift of police captains in a general order issued last night:

Thomas J. Caughlin, from Grand Crossing to Cottage Grove.

Joseph C. Mullin, from Cottage Grove to Irving Park.

William W. Cudmore, from Irving Park to Warren avenue.

Fred C. Gurney, recently promoted to a captaincy, to Grand Crossing.

The transfer order gives to Capt. Cudmore the job of cleaning up vice and gambling conditions along West Madison street, which were exposed in the recent investigation of the Warren avenue district, resulting in the dismissal of former Capt. Thomas F. Cronin.

Garrity "Expects Howl."

"I expect to hear a howl from Capt. Cudmore, but he has had it easy out in Irving Park long enough," said Chief Garrity.

The shift of Capt. Mullin from the bright lights of the black belt to the peacefulness of Irving Park was taken by some to mean that the Cottage Grove avenue district would be the next division of the department hit by the city civil service commission. Chief Garrity has made a number of reports to the commission tending to show lax conditions in the district.

"I thought it best to get Mullin out of there as long as the commission is considering the district," said Chief Garrity.

Moves to Outwit Robbers.

To prevent a repetition of the Saturday night crime wave of a week ago Chief Garrity yesterday ordered all commanding officers to shift every patrolman on the early watches—that is, the men who work from 6 p. m. to 3 a. m. and from midnight to 8 in the morning. He believed, he said, criminals had become too thoroughly acquainted with the habitual routine of the patrolmen.

Chief of Detectives Mooney ordered all day men to report for duty last night and they were scattered in squads all over the city with orders to round up known criminals and suspicious persons. Three rifle squads toured the streets. Only six automobile thefts were reported by midnight, as against twenty-five a week ago.

Seek Data from Mooney.

A questionnaire, preliminary to an investigation of the detective bureau announced by Capt. Coffin, president of the merit board, two weeks ago, was submitted to Chief of Detectives James L. Mooney yesterday by Chief Garrity.

The bureau head was requested to report what results his men got from their investigations of several pages of complaints which were assigned to them during Chief Mooney's term at the bureau.

"Stories that I am planning to blow up the detective bureau are without foundation," said Chief Garrity. "I am going to find out what was done with every complaint assigned to the bureau since Mooney was made chief, however."

Coffin to Investigate.

Capt. Coffin and Chief Mooney conferred yesterday afternoon on the data to be included by Chief Mooney in his report. It will take four men several days going over the bureau records to compile the desired information. Chief Mooney discussed bureau conditions with Capt. Coffin, but the latter said that his determination to investigate the detective bureau was unshaken.

"We intend to take up another division of the police department next week," said Capt. Coffin. "What district that will be depends on reports from our investigators during the next three or four days."

Patrolman Faces Charges.

Patrolman Louis C. Johnson of the central station must explain to the trial board why he was found in the company of three alleged pickpockets on Nov. 23.

Police Chief Garrity filed charges with the city civil service commission against the patrolman, alleging neglect of duty.

Charges also were filed against Patrolman William Nape of the Chicago avenue station. He was playing cards in the saloon of John Brichetto when the police raided the place and arrested Brichetto and four other men as gamblers. Brichetto was later fined $25 and his fellow card players $3 each.

GIVES BLOOD TO SAVE WOMAN HE SOUGHT TO KILL

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—Mrs. Florence Robinson, a young matron, lying near death, and Grover Gordon, little more than a youth, who, because, he said, he loved her, yesterday shot the woman, and who for the same reason twelve hours later kept her alive by giving his blood for transfusion to her veins, today are the principals in one of the most remarkable crime incidents in Washington police history.

Following a jealous quarrel Gordon went to the home of the young woman, who some time ago had separated from her husband, to bid her final good-by, as he expected to leave for his home in Wheeling, W. Va. As she stood in his embrace Gordon fired a revolver shot through her body.

After his arrest Gordon was told Mrs. Robinson would die unless some one volunteered to submit to blood transfusion. He eagerly offered himself and requested only that, if the patient still were conscious, she be told of his action.

Physicians today said it was too early to state whether the operation would save Mrs. Robinson's life.

Toledo Is Still Tied Up Over Street Car Fares

Toledo, O., Nov. 29.—The prospect of restoration of street car service here was dark today, with the city opposed to the plan of Federal Judge Killits for temporary operation at 8 cents fare plus 2 cents for transfers.

When the cars were taken into Michigan, the fare was 6 cents plus 2 cents for transfer. This was an increase from a previous fare of 5 cents plus a penny for transfer.

It was because of this increase that the people voted for an ouster ordinance that led to removal of the cars.

POLICEMAN SHOT AT MERRY WIDOW BAR TO RECOVER

Policeman Michael Duffy, shot Friday night, woke late yesterday in St. Bernard's hospital. Physicians stated he might recover.

At the same hour the police were holding six women and six men and were searching for the assailant, believed to have been George Rogers, a Minnesotan who came to Chicago to spend the money he got for a farm.

The shooting occurred in the "Merry Widow's" saloon at 6135 South Halsted street, owned and run by Mrs. Josephine Barron.

Rogers, it is said, had been riding around the city, drinking and spending money on girls during a stretch of thirty hours. He had accused one of the girls of stealing from him and had drawn a revolver. Duffy was called and, it is said, was shot as he opened the door. Rogers, witnesses say, uttered no word as he fired.

TO AID PALESTINE HOSPITAL.

The Committee for Palestinian Welfare announced last night that an open meeting will be held on Dec. 10 at the home of Mrs. Julius Rosenwald in connection with an urgent appeal just received from the hospitals of Palestine where a serious shortage exists in supplies, particularly in towels, soap, and wash cloths. Mrs. Albert H. Loeb is honorary chairman of the committee and Mrs. Rosenwald is treasurer.

POLICEWOMAN FINED WHEN SHE DELAYS WEDDING

Clash with Judge Hayes Costs Mrs. Faubel $50.

Judge Howard Wood Hayes, who presides over the South Clark street branch of the municipal court doesn't like to be hampered in doing what he believes is the right thing, which is his explanation of why he fined Policewoman Alice Clement Faubel $50 yesterday morning on a charge of contempt of court.

"I like to see brains in a woman," said the judge, "especially in a policewoman. Sometime ago Thomas Fisher was arrested on complaint of Elizabeth Georgis, 14 years old. He was willing to marry the girl. She was willing to be married. Her parents agreed to the ceremony. Everything was ready, and everybody in town was willing, except Mrs. Faubel.

Takes Girl Out of Court.

"She took the girl out of court. She says she didn't hear me say the girl was to stay in the courtroom while the man went out for the license. It wasn't for that reason the fine was imposed.

"Mrs. Faubel called me up and represented that the man had been divorced only a month ago, and that he had transmitted a disease to his former wife. Later I found that this was untrue. There was nothing to hinder the marriage, and I married the couple.

"I fined the policewoman because she sought to obstruct justice. I see by an afternoon paper she said she'd rot before she paid the fine. Well, a few minutes after that was printed she paid the fine."

Mrs. Faubel Gives Version.

"I wasn't given a fair chance to tell my side of the story," Mrs. Faubel said last night, "and I think this is a gross injustice. I brought the girl to Judge Hayes' court, accompanied by Detectivs Cartan and McFarland, and it was my duty to take her back to the Juvenile home. Those were my instruction from Assistant State's Attorney Robert Hogan. I didn't think it best for her to be married to this man, and I didn't hear the judge tell me to leave her in court. Neither did the detectives.

"No lawyer appeared for me today. I wasn't given the slightest opportunity to defend myself. Neither Mr. Hogan nor any city prosecutor was present. The assistant corporation counsel who was to appear for me, didn't arrive until after the judge had fined me."

AGRICULTURAL "FRAT" ELECTS.

C. B. Hutchinson of Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., was reelected high chancellor of Alpha Zeta fraternity, and Minneapolis was chosen for the tenth biennial meeting in December, 1921, at the closing session of their ninth conclave in the Hotel La Salle yesterday afternoon. The society is an honorary agricultural fraternity and embraces a membership of students at the various state colleges of the country.

SHOPPERS SEE WOMAN KILLED BY LOOP TRUCK

Autos Claim Two Lives; Pair Injured; Two Drivers Held.

Deaths in Chicago by Automobiles in 1919 to date 381

Motor vehicles took a toll of two lives yesterday. A third victim is not expected to live. Automobilists carried away a man their machine had struck on the southwest side.

Mrs. E. M. Hibbard, 69 years old, formerly of 4434 Calumet avenue, was struck and killed by an automobile truck driven by Bernard Semper of 6940 Blackstone avenue.

A large crowd of shoppers witnessed the accident, which occurred in Wabash avenue near Madison street, and traffic was blocked for several minutes. Mrs. Hibbard had been standing near a pillar of the elevated railroad structure and Semper said she stepped in front of the truck before he could apply the brakes.

Driver and Aid Held.

A front wheel passed over her head, causing fracture of the skull. Semper and his assistant, Joseph Winchester, are being held by the police pending the verdict of the coroner's jury at the inquest this morning.

Mrs. Hibbard had just returned from Glen City, where she had been staying for two weeks. Before that she had been visiting with her son, Charles M. Hibbard, in New York.

Mrs. Albertine Menctofel, 54 years old, of 1215 Macedonia street, died in St. Elizabeth's hospital of injuries received Oct. 7 when she was struck by an automobile at Halsted street and North avenue.

Mrs. Julia Dunn, 200 East Erie street, was struck by a motor truck driven by Charles Mancuss, a commission merchant, at Wabash avenue and Lake street. She was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where it was said she probably would die. Mancuss was held.

Takes Victim to Hospital.

Andrew Evarson, 53 years old, 1829 West Twenty-third street, sustained fractures of both legs, dislocation of the left shoulder and probable internal injuries last night when he was struck at Blue Island avenue and Wood street by an automobile driven by Julius Petran, 2366 Blue Island avenue.

Despite the protestations of George Baldwin, 1837 West Twenty-second street, who notified the police, Petran placed the injured man in his car and drove away with him, Baldwin charges.

DEBUTANTE TRIO MAKES FORMAL BOW TO SOCIETY

Misses Chase, Shortall, and Bartholomay Are Presented.

Three debutantes were presented to society yesterday. Two were introduced at afternoon receptions and the other at a supper dance.

Miss Elizabeth Chase, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase of 3204 Sheridan road, was presented at a tea given by her parents and her grandmother, Mrs. Benjamin F. Ayer, at Mrs. Ayer's residence at 20 East Goethe street.

Miss Chase wore a frock of cream lace over flesh color satin. Among the young girls who poured were the Misses Barbara and Martha Granger, Lucretia Green, Mary Rend, Emily Bissell, Mary Landon Baker, Caryl Dunham, Elizabeth Carpenter and Mrs. Preston Boyden [Polly Chase.]

Miss Shortall Makes Debut.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Shortall introduced their daughter Margaret at a reception given at their residence, 339 Barry avenue. The honorée wore a simply made frock of turquoise blue satin.

Receiving with Mrs. and Miss Shortall were Mrs. Lynden Evans, Mrs. Frank Dickinson and Miss Dorothy Stirling.

The Misses Lila Hotz, Cordelia Carpenter, Helen Perkins, Margaret Perkins, Sophia Morris, Frances Stuart, Annette Washburne, Priscilla McIlvaine and Elizabeth Russell of Detroit, who is a house guest of Miss Shortall, poured.

Give Supper Dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bartholomay of 1455 North State parkway gave a large supper dance and reception for their debutante daughter, Catherine, at the Woman's Athletic club.

Preceding the dance they entertained a party of young people at dinner at their residence.

Among other dinner hostesses before the dance were Miss Louise Hessert and Miss Rebecca McDoel Hickman.

Miss Bartholomay's gown was of silver and blue brocade.

JUDGES FAVOR REDUCTION IN COURTS' NUMBER

The State Association of Probate and County Judges wants one court of first instance in a county, instead of six, as at present in Cook county.

They decided to make this recommendation to the coming constitutional convention at their conference held yesterday in the Hotel Sherman. The conference was called to decide what suggestions shall be made tending toward changes in the present judicial system.

Judge R. H. Lovitt, Peoria county, in an address to the body declared that one court of initial appeal in each county was favored by a majority of jurists as a means of simplifying litigation.

"Under the present system," said Judge Lovitt, "litigants sometimes carry a case to a higher court and find that the court through which they carried their case had no jurisdiction over it.

"If there were one court of first instance, litigants could find just where to take a case."

NEW WITNESS PICTURES SLAYER OF GALLAGHER

The most minute description of the murderer of Attorney James P. Gallagher was supplied to Morris Wilson, chief investigator of the state's attorney's office yesterday by Henry Friedman, 5220 Prairie avenue, a hitherto unnamed witness.

"The man was of medium height, about 5 feet 5 inches tall," Friedman said. "He was dark skinned and unshaven. I should judge his age to be about 26 or 27. He wore a long dark overcoat of the waterproof variety and a light cap pulled down over his eyes."

Friedman is a salesman for an automobile company at 2612 South Michigan avenue. He was in his store when he heard the shot that killed the lawyer. According to his statement to Investigator Wilson, he ran to the street and was the first to reach the dying victim's side.

Edward Clark, 4930 Calumet avenue; Adolph and Benjamin Nudelman, three witnesses who were passing in an automobile when Attorney Gallaghr was attacked, were also questioned.

STELK MORE THAN DOUBLES SPEEDING FINES

Judge John Stelk, who has presided in the Speeders' court since the autumn of 1918, had collected $103,458 in fines in 1919 up to Nov. 1. In all there were 23,027 complaints. In the year previous there were 26,628 and the fines for the year totaled $41,751. In the ten months of the present year Judge Stelk imposed costs of $29,042 in connection with the fines, far outdistancing his predecessors. He has been assigned to hear jury cases and those of vagrancy. Judge Hazen will succeed him in the Speeders' court tomorrow.

Christmas Tree Ship with Woman Skipper Due Soon

One of these days soon a long, flat, ungainly lake freighter will ease alongside the river docks, just below the Clark street bridge. You can't help but observe. From stem to stern it will bristle with green trees—Chicago's Christmas trees. They are brought here every year by Mrs. Barbara Schuenemann and her daughter, Elsie. The mother is skipper of the ship, having filled the office successfully since her husband perished eight years ago in a lake storm, while bound for Chicago with a cargo of trees.

DRUG VICTIMS HAUNT MEETING DECIDING FATE

Sigh as Leaders Outline Relief but Deny the "Dope" They Crave.

Representatives of the city, the churches, social workers, physicians, and agents of the revenue service yesterday attended a meeting called at the Peoples hospital, Twenty-second street and Archer avenue, by Dr. I. C. Gary, president, for the purpose of formulatng a plan for the legal treatment of drug addicts.

While the meeting was in progress sixty-nine addicts thronged the corridors, awaiting the result of the meeting in the hope they would be able to get the prescription for which they craved. They were only a few of the 186 regular narcotic patients of the hospital.

Seek Legalized System.

"Many of these can be cured," Dr. Gary said. "Others will die if their drug supply is cut off."

"A great many will commit crimes to obtain it if it cannot be procured in a legal manner," said J. V. McMillen, internal revenue inspector.

"With my assistants, Dr. C. R. Larraway and Dr. H. J. Eckwall, I have been trying to get the municipal or state government to take care of the addicts," continued Dr. Gary, "so they may obtain the amount of drug that is absolutely necessary to their existence without too much expense and without jeopardizing the standing of physicians who prescribe."

It was decided to appoint a committee to urge state control and to recommend that the incurables be given regular treatment as heretofore, those who can be cured, but will not help themselves, being sent to Dunning until cured.

No Drugs—Despair.

A sigh of despair among the waiting addicts greeted this news. No "treatment" for them that night, they concluded. They must endure until morning, they were informed, when they could report to Dr. William J. Hickson, superintendent of the Psychopathic laboratory, 1109 City Hall, for an interview. They filed out, dejected.

Among the civic leaders at the meeting were Dr. Gary; Miss Lyda O'Shea, R. N., superintendent of the hospital's training school; the Rev. Johnston Myers, Immanuel Baptist church; the Rev. Frederick Siedenberg; Dr. J. P. Brushingham of the city morals commission; Dr. and Mrs. Hickson; Dr. Stubbs, St. Anthony's hospital; the Rev. J. Dondonville, pastor of St. John's church; Judge Daniel P. Trude, Municipal court; Miss Kate Meade, director, county bureau of social service, and Miss Mary R. Fugate, social service secretary of the Boys' court.

Two north shore women left last night on a relief mission to Serbia. They are Miss Lucy M. Morehouse, acting superintendent of the Evanston hospital, and Dr. Alice Barlow Brown of 628 Lincoln avenue, Winnetka.

Miss Morehouse for eight months was attached to base hospital unit No. 11 of the A. E. F. in France. Dr. Brown spent a year in relief work in Belgium on funds provided by the First Congregational church of Winnetka.

This church is furnishing the means for both women to go to Serbia.

The mission is made possible largely through the efforts of the Rev. J. W. F. Davies, pastor.

SLEEP SICKNESS CLAIMS VICTIM ILL THREE WEEKS

Disease Attributed to a Nervous Collapse Instead of "Flu."

William Thoms, founder of Thoms Brothers Paper company and a leading church worker, is the latest victim of "sleeping sickness." He died in his home, 611 N. Oak Park avenue, Oak Park, on Friday, after a three weeks' illness.

Dr. J. Warren Van Derslice of Oak Park, who attended Mr. Thoms during his last illness, said that his was a typical case of lethargic encephalitis, or sleeping sickness, which came as the aftermath of a nervous breakdown. It lasted about three weeks, during which time the patient slept practically all the time.

Followed Nervous Collapse.

"Sleeping sickness," said Dr. Van Derslice, "usually follows an epidemic of influenza, although in this case it was the direct result of a nervous breakdown with no previous attack of influenza. There have been five epidemics of influenza in the history of the United States, and each epidemic has been followed by a number of cases of sleeping sickness. Last winter there were fifty cases in this country, with a death rate of over 60 per cent. This year there are about as many cases, but they seem milder and the death rate is considerably lower. There are at present three cases of the sickness in Oak Park.

Dr. Van Derslice was asked about the French serum which was administered for the first time in Chicago last Friday by Dr. Samuel Stein in the treatment of William Morrison of 8915 Exchange avenue, South Chicago, for sleeping sickness.

No Recognized Cure.

"Up to date there is no recognized cure for this disease," he said, "as the analysis of the spinal fluid always shows negative, and thus gives no indication as to what kind of a serum should be used in combating the bacteria. The French serum may show improved condition in the patient by stimulating heart action, just as a number of other stimulants would do, but we do not recognize it as a cure."

SOCIETY WAITS IN VAIN FOR PROOF OF NURSE'S HEROISM

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

MRS. GEORGE COOK-ADAMS, president of "The Ladies of the British Empire," is still watching the mails. Henrietta Hulme, the nurse who was supposed to have saved hundreds of Belgian babies, and been shell shocked and gassed, and who won her way into the hearts of "The Bhitish Empire," and joined their society, has promised to send Mrs. Cooke-Adams her credentials.

Henrietta said she belonged to both Canadian and American Red Cross, but the American Red Cross doesn't agree with her. Now the Canadian Patriotic Funds in Ottawa, Ontario, says: "Henrietta Hulme not known here. Suggest you communicate with headquarters Canadian Red Cross, Toronto.

Inquiries to Toronto brought this answer: "Officials here have no record of this girl."

"We wanted to be kind to the young woman, because she had no mother or father in this country," Mrs. Cook-Adams told me. "Our society tries to make English girls alone in Chicago feel that they have friends in us, and that we will help them. This girl did act peculiarly, but the members always excused her by saying, 'We must be patient. Just look what she has been through.'"

"The girl went to Naperville," said Mrs. Cooke-Adams, "and I hope to hear from her."

At the Edwards Sanitarium in Naperville, Miss Hulme is nursing again, and at the Chicago Tubercular institute, from which place nurses are hired for the sanitarium, it was said last night that the hospital authorities considered there must be some mistake, that Miss Hulme appeared to be all right, and that she would continue to stay at the sanitarium.

MRS. WILSON IS FIRST TO HELP CAMP FIRE GIRLS

The announcement will be made today by Camp Fire guardians, speaking in sixty Chicago pulpits, that the first associate membership obtained by the Chicago district was that of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, sent from the White House.

Among the churches to invite speakers to explain Camp Fire influence in home work and play were the following: Hyde Park Presbyterian, Hyde Park Methodist, Maywood Congregational, Austin Baptist, Oak Park Congregational, Second Baptist, Buena Memorial, Church of the Covenant, Belden Avenue Baptist, Glencoe Union.

LETS LOOSE OF DIVORCE MILL CRANK; HAPPY!

Judge Barrett Frees 845 Couples; "Hardest Job I Ever Did."

Judge George F. Barrett sighed shortly after noon yesterday as he stepped down from his bench and slipped into a chair in his chambers. He was weary—but he was happy.

For yesterday ended Judge Barrett's period of service in the divorce courts, for this year at least. From now on he will hear law cases. Intricate questions of law are simple compared to the tangles of ruined romances, broken homes, the jurists say.

Judge Barrett spent eleven strenuous weeks hearing divorces. During that time he heard and divorced 845 couples. He gave ear to and arbitrated 3,027 motions, some contested.

A report shows:

Month—	Decrees signed.	Motions heard.
September	260	900
October	342	1,168
November	343	909
Totals	845	3,027

"I don't see how Judge Brothers ever lived through two years in the divorce courts," Judge Barrett said. "It is the hardest work I have ever done. Lawyers constantly bickering, witnesses often lying, children crying, mothers screaming. O, it's terrible.

"I'm mighty glad that I'm through with it."

Judge G. Fred Rush, recently elected, will take the divorce calendar for a few days until Judge John P. McGoorty has finished with the traction hearing now in progress before him.

Down on the second floor of the county building the corridors of the marriage license bureau were jammed with young couples.

"Ah, look at 'em," said Gus Wedemier, clerk of Circuit divorce court. "Just like a tidal wave, eh? Crowding, jamming, fighting for the slips. In a year a lot of them will be in my court fighting the same way for divorces."

The Best Selling Pianos

RECENT purchasers of Cable-made Pianos and Inner-Players realize that there has been a decided scarcity of these fine instruments.

The overwhelming demand has increased so rapidly that our great factories have been unable to produce enough instruments.

In spite of the shortage, thrifty buyers insist on Cable-made Pianos and Inner-Players, often making their selection weeks in advance of any delivery date we can promise.

It has been no uncommon occurrence during the past months for customers to select a Cable-made Piano or Inner-Player from a floor sample without seeing the actual instrument to be delivered to them.

In many instances selections were made from our catalogues —with full confidence that the instrument, when delivered, would meet every expectation.

Such confidence of the public in this institution is something of which we are exceedingly proud.

The shortage of Cable-made Pianos and Inner-Players, however, is gradually being relieved. At this season of the year, factory production reaches its maximum, and new instruments are being placed on our display floors daily.

If you are planning to have a Piano or Inner-Player in your home for Christmas, we want to impress on you the necessity of making your selection now.

Christmas buying has already begun and the holiday demand is bound to clear our floors quickly.

Any instrument selected now may be held for Christmas delivery.

PRESS AGENT STUBS HIS TOE ON BOARD WALK

Drops from Clouds with This Effusion; You Figure It Out.

The press agent is a high flyer. He soars daily into the clouds and above. After one of these flights yesterday the press agent for the Atlantic City Boardwalk bombed The Tribune office with this effusion:

"Even if it is a week of dismal weather Chicago need not complain. For Saturday at 1 p. m. the Coliseum will be ready to shelter the frozen or soaked amusement seekers to the Atlantic City Board Walk. There, under a summer moon, by a brilliant sea with every melody and summer gayety, winter will be defied by the Passavant hospital, which has been arranged by society women under direction of Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman.

"The project, which is to be the most pretentious ever attempted is a reproduction of Atlantic City on a midsummer night. The famous board walk will welcome strollers, the gay beach parasols will afford tete-a-tete retreats, the 'prams,' pushed by society men disguised as darkies, will give a new thrill to those who have tired of taxis. And even the most fagged fancy will find a new delight in the thirty-two shops, where society's leaders will preside over the most fashionable and wealthy array of shop girl talent ever gathered under one moonlit sky.

Every Day a Bargain Day.

"For all the women in the various shops have devoted as much attention to their work frocks as they have to the bargains they will offer. Most of the stocks in trade have been donated, and that is why every day from Dec. 6 to Dec. 15 is to be bargain day on the boardwalk.

"The greatest scenic effect, of course, is to be the shore and the sea, as designed by Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, distinguished colorist. Though a blizzard may whistle without, youngsters at the boardwalk can dig on the bright beach and the 210x50 foot canvas will tempt those fond of a dip.

"At the north end of the beach will be the photo gallery, where photo cards will be taken in prams and all the scenes of Atlantic City the Second will be sold. Then the movies, with Mrs. Edward Leight as producer, will offer real movie stars. Next to it a green, yellow, and blue pagoda will house Mrs. Marshall Field's Chinese shop.

"The rest of the walk, too, will be crowded with shops familiar to those who frequent Atlantic City.

Not a "Bored" Walk.

"But the trickets and curios offered in Mrs. Richard T. Fox's Curio shop will not be the trifles of Beach No. 1. They will be real treasures at bargain prices, and so will the antiques Mrs. Potter Palmer will sell.

"It'll not be a "bored" walk either—either for the sales women of the patriot. At night there is the cabaret conducted by Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank. And society's buds may have a lark there when off duty. Every theater in town is to supply talent for the performances.

Will Sell Balloons, Etc.

"There is to be other fun, too. Balloons will be sold by Mrs. Frank C. Letts, soda dispensed by Mrs. Jacob Baur and Mrs. Frederick Countiss, and a corps of soda girls. The tobacco shop conducted by Mrs. Ford Carter is to have a real Indian as a sign and Turkish girls as sales girls. Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham's image shop will have girls costumed as cats, and the toy shop is to be just as odd. Every girl there will dress as a toy. Miss Olga Mena's music shop will have a continuous song performance.

"Then during the show there will be Neptune night, a night when a sea serpent will appear, and other fun a beach, mermaids, and a bathing girl contest can give. And a bathing suit contest among the society girls."

WILL DISCUSS "ZONING."

"City zoning" will be discussed at a meeting of the Western Society of Engineers in their headquarters, 1735 Monadnock block, tomorrow (Monday) evening, according to an announcement yesterday by Edgar S. Nethercut, secretary of the society.

At a meeting of the Junior league yesterday at the Casino Miss Gladys High was named president pro tem, to fill the unexpired term of Miss Virginia Chandler, resigned.

Miss Lila Hotz was elected secretary, Mrs. Richard D. Stevenson treasurer, and Miss Isabella Holt, a director, all to fill vacancies since the last election.

Miss High announces the winter will be devoted largely to work by the league in connection with the Chicago Council for Social Agencies, a clearing house for Chicago charities.

STOLEN CAR LEFT SO LONG OWNER MAY NOW GET IT

Her voice sounded quite sweet to the reporter over the phone.

"For three days," she said, "there has been standing at 4009 Kenmore avenue, in front of our door, a big automobile. Nobody seems to pay the least attention to it. On Thanksgiving day I did notice a policeman looking at it. Yesterday I saw two men who looked like detectives examining it. But it's still there. Perhaps it has been stolen or something. The license number is 69349. I thought I'd tell THE TRIBUNE."

The reporter called up the vehicle bureau: "That license number," said the man in charge, "belongs to Charles O. Kawin, 920 Edgemore avenue, Evanston."

"Why, yes," said Mr. Kawin a few minutes later, "my car was stolen. They took it from in front of 5700 Kenmore avenue last Wednesday evening about 10:30.

"I reported it immediately to the police. On Thanksgiving day they called me up from the Summerdale station and told me they had recovered it. Later they called up and said it had gone astray again. I guess I had better call up the police and tell them where to find my stolen car."

FOUR MINUTE MEN TO SPEAK IN AID OF ACTORS' FUND

Chicago theaters will interrupt their performances tonight to permit "four minute men" to speak for a theatrical charity, the Actors' fund, which dwindled dangerously low during the war, when all the efforts of actors and managers were centered upon patriotic propaganda.

Judge Hugo Pam will auction seats and boxes for the matinée on Actors' Memorial day, Dec. 5, at the Illinois theater tonight, when George White's "Scandals of 1919" opens.

During the week "four minute men" will appear in the loop theaters nightly urging the crowds to purchase tickets.

ILLINOIS BACKS TREATY ACTION, M'CORMICK SAYS

Numerous Letters from Home Tell Senator He Did Right.

Senator Medill McCormick arrived in Chicago from Washington yesterday morning, expressing his own firm conviction that his vote in the senate against ratification of the peace treaty has the approval of a large majority of the citizens of Illinois.

"Two out of three of the letters and telegrams I have received from all over the state, the total reaching into the scores, indicate that my position reflects, substantially, the opinion of Illinois," Senator McCormick said.

"The country is not now interested in foreign affairs, but buckles down in a critical effort to solve the tremendous domestic problems that have to be handled by somebody.

Extravagance Rules.

"The country is becoming conscious that the present economic situation cannot continue without disaster. Today's trade review reports heavy demand for luxuries and high priced goods generally. The hotels are crowded; the fast trains are running full; the theaters are playing to capacity, and industrial production is diminishing.

"The situation in America is not very different from the state of affairs in France and England, where extravagant holiday crowds are thronging Paris and London.

"The international labor-economic congress just adjourned in Washington has elected as its permanent head under the league of nations an acquaintance of mine, Albert Thomas. He is not a labor leader, as the newspapers say. He is an internationalist-Socialist, as ignorant of America as I am of Beluchistan.

Must Think First of Home.

"Now is the time, as Kipling said, for the American 'to turn his keen untroubled face home to the instant need of things.' If the president had kept his hands off, the treaty doubtless would have been amended and ratified. Amended to provide that America should have as many votes as any other power in the league.

"It is fruitless to abuse Senators whose convictions forbid them to concur in a treaty which in their judgment threatens the peace and security of America. The intertwining of the covenant with the treaty was as unwise and arbitrary as the action of the administration in refusing to do anything to anticipate the present industrial troubles of the country or to tide over the transitional period following the armistice."

SUFFRAGE CHIEFS AWAIT WYOMING GOVERNOR'S VISIT

Word was received yesterday at suffrage headquarters in the Lake View building that Gov. R. D. Carey of Wyoming would arrive in Chicago tomorrow. Members of the suffrage campaign committee have announced they will meet him and "stick with him" until he changes his mind about not calling a special session of the Wyoming legislature to make suffrage ratification possible. Wyoming legislators have expressed their willingness to approve the federal amendment as soon as a session is called.

With the ratification measure already passed by the North Dakota senate and house, that state is expected to become the twentieth "ratifier" before the end of this week.

SOUTH DAKOTA TO ACT.

Pierre, S. D., Nov. 29.—Gov. Norbeck this evening issued a call for a special session of the legislature to meet on Tuesday to act on the federal suffrage amendment. A majority of the members agreed to attend the session at their own expense.

LABOR WILL BE BIG FACTOR IN 1920 CAMPAIGN

Coal Strike Causes Break with the Democratic Party.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—The attitude of organized labor bids fair to be a big factor in the 1920 presidential campaign and in the nomination of candidates for the presidency next summer.

While labor is bringing forward new issues, such as the Plumb plan for workers' control of the railroads and the nationalization of the coal mines, Samuel Gompers and his union followers appear to have reached the parting of the ways with the Wilson administration on matters of more immediate concern.

Gompers Wrote Planks.

Whether this means a complete break eventually between organized labor and the Democratic party has become a subject of interesting speculation as a result of recent developments. Among the possibilities are increased labor support of the Republican party and the formation of an independent labor party, neither of which developments augur well for Democratic success next year.

Gompers and President Wilson have worked hand-in-glove for seven years. Gompers wrote the anti-injunction and other labor planks of the Democratic platforms in the last two Democratic conventions. President Wilson put through labor legislation desired by the federation of Labor. Gompers has been a power in the administration since the first election of Mr. Wilson and influenced organized labor to vote the Democratic ticket in 1912 and 1916.

Love Is Cooling.

The manner in which the president drove the Adamson bill through congress in 1916 won the railroad brotherhoods' vote for the Wilson ticket and further strengthened the alliance of labor and the Democratic party. Now, however, the devotion of organized labor to the Democratic administration is cooling. The rift first became apparent last summer.

Encouraged by the president's recommendation in his message to congress last May of legislation for the democratization of industry, the railroad brotherhoods brought forward the Plumb plan. But they soon learned that the president thought they were going too far. Then the rail workers said they must have more pay or a reduction of the cost of living. Mr. Wilson said he would bring down the living cost and induced the railroad shopmen to forego a strike for higher pay pending his efforts in this direction. Recently labor has been intimating that the president has not made good, that the time is about up, and that the wages must be advanced in default of a reduction of living costs.

Brought Crisis.

The mine strike brought on a crisis in the relations of Gompers and the administration. The action of the administration in procuring an injunction of the strike aroused labor to denunciation of the Wilson régime and in particular Attorney General Palmer, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president.

Gompers charged the administration with breaking faith and cited the promises of Attorney General Gregory and the president himself not to invoke the Lever law against organized labor.

The administration became still more unpopular with labor in the negotiations between the miners and operators for a settlement of the wage dispute. The cabinet repudiated Secretary of Labor Wilson's stand for a 31 per cent wage increase and lined up with Attorney General Palmer and Fuel Administrator Garfield, whom labor regards as inimical.

McAdoo to Front.

With the whole alliance between the administration and organized labor going to the dogs, former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo took alarm and leaped to the front in defense of the miners with charges that the operators were taking indefensible profits. That convinced almost everybody hereabouts that McAdoo really is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president and was animated not only by a desire to line up labor in his own support but to heal the breach between the unions and the Democratic party.

Gompers is on the warpath against the administration and he is a formidable fighter. His rule has been to support the party that supports him. If the administration beats a retreat he may forgive. Otherwise he will call upon the Democratic convention to repudiate the administration, in default of which he will repudiate the Democratic party.

THEATER MANAGER DIES.

Anderson, Ind., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Michael Heffernan, 45, stage manager of the Lexington theater, New York, died of pneumonia today at Syracuse, N. Y. The body will be brought to Anderson, where he lived until a few years ago. He was a brother of John Heffernan, manager of the Riviera theater here, and Police Captain W. J. Heffernan.

SOUTH DAKOTA PARTIES CONVENE NEXT TUESDAY

Pierre, S. D., Nov. 29.—Former United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois will represent Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer here on Dec. 2, when the Democratic state convention will meet to decide upon its preferential choice for candidate for president. Attorney General Palmer had previously announced that he would be in Pierre, but word was received today that he would not be able to attend the convention, because of the coal strike situation.

State politicians active in promoting the candidacy of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood for the Republican presidential nomination declared today that they believed the choice of the Republican state convention, which also will be held here Dec. 2, is between Wood and Gov. Frank Lowden of Illinois. Gen. Wood will be represented at the convention by J. T. King of Massachusetts. Gov. Lowden's representative will be Fred Sterling, state treasurer of Illinois.

J. R. Bryan of Washington yesterday arrived in Pierre as the representative of Senator Poindexter, who has been mentioned as a Republican candidate.

Reservations have been made at local hotels by a number of political leaders from various states. It is understood that important conferences will be held here Monday.

Hits Girl; Fails to Report It; Autoist Gets Two Years

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 29.—The maximum penalty of two years in the penitentiary was given to M. A. Smith, charged with having failed to report an automobile accident as required by law. Smith's machine fatally injured a little girl several weeks ago. He pleaded guilty to having failed to stop or report the accident. The conviction is believed here to be the first of its kind in the state in which the maximum penalty was given.

Come Out and See "What Makes Chicago"

Did You Read This Editorial?

WHAT MAKES CHICAGO?

Go out to Dexter Pavilion at Forty-second and Halsted streets next Saturday or during the week following and see what Chicagoans might well call "the greatest show on earth."

Why? Because agriculture is the foundation of Chicago's prosperity, and the live stock show—its formal name is "International Live Stock Exposition"—is a huge exhibition of that branch of agriculture which is essential to the middle west. American city folks are largely from the farm and they will appreciate this wonderful display of prize cattle—twenty acres of exhibits—and every night a horse show, which will remind you that the automobile has not abolished the horse and never will.

But we should like Chicago to go to the live stock show because city people, whether city or country bred, should never forget the great industry from which this city draws its giant strength. A few weeks ago a great dairy exposition was held to remind us that Chicago is in the midst of one of the greatest dairying regions of the world. At the live stock show beef cattle and horses are the feature, but there is also a grain and hay show in connection. So we can learn, if we will, what is going on in agriculture, the basic industry of America and the world, and the bounteous mother of our own city.

Go and see what science, experience, and devotion are doing for the world in this, the most essential of human occupations. Go and see what the problems are which the farmer and stock breeder are working out for our common benefit. Go and meet the folks from the country and talk things over. Chicago belongs to the farm. Some day, we hope, there will be a great agricultural capitol building here, where all branches of agriculture will have their official center and meeting place, where all conferences will be held and activities recorded. Meanwhile, let us show that we are interested by attending such exhibitions as the live stock show.

—Chicago Tribune, Nov. 26, 1919.

How to Get There

Take any south bound elevated train in the loop, change at Indiana Avenue to a Stock Yards Train, and get off at Armour Station.

Or take any south bound surface car, transfer at Root Street, and take car direct to Stock Yards entrance.

Halsted Street and Racine Avenue surface cars will take you direct to the Stock Yards.

Visitors' entrance at Armour's opens at 8 A. M. Experienced guides will be at your disposal.

A THOUSAND industries have contributed to the making of Chicago as it stands today. But the bedrock upon which all its foundation stones were laid, and which still underlies and supports this great city, is the livestock and packing industries, the two great activities that are inseparable and indispensable to the food supply of the nation and the world.

For nearly half a century the name of Chicago has stood for "Food Supply" to informed men the world over. Visitors of importance from all over the world, dignitaries and government representatives, consider the Stock Yards as the outstanding feature of Chicago's greatness, and a visit to them as the crowning event of their sojourn here.

Of all times in the year, this week, up to Saturday, December 6, offers the greatest opportunity to study both phases of the business of producing and preparing the world's meat supplies.

The great International Live Stock Show is on at Dexter Pavilion at the Stock Yards. There is being exhibited the greatest showing of the best fat stock types that the world produces.

At the very doors of the pavilion are the great Armour packing plants whose wonderful organizations turn every scrap of meat animals into foods and a hundred other useful articles for human use.

Armour & Company invite and urge all Chicagoans and Chicago's guests of the week to visit their great plants and see how carefully the food for their table is prepared. How they co-operate with the United States government in supplying wholesome, cleanly and healthful meat products.

You owe it to yourself to see how your meat is prepared. You, like thousands of others, no doubt, want to inspect Armour's packing plant "sometime." Why not now? This week, visit the International Live Stock Show—and take that long promised trip through the Armour plant.

A visit to and study of the Live Stock Show and the Packing Industry this week can be made an important part of the education of every American who is privileged to be in Chicago at this time.

This is to be a Pearl Christmas

YES, this is to be a Pearl Christmas.

The suspicious action of Santa Claus around our Pearl Department indicates it.

The pearl is the jewel de luxe of all the precious gems.

The Fashion leaders of the world are becoming even more infatuated with pearls than ever before. This is not strange when you consider that pearls really appear to have a personality---a seeming responsive appreciation of the "pettings" and "lovings" bestowed upon them by the adorable sex.

Pearls refine, illumine and enhance a woman's beauty, and are the only ornament that she may wear with propriety at any time and on any occasion. Pearls are frequently referred to as "the adorable playthings of the rich," which is not at all surprising when we consider the fictional romance and mysticism so ingeniously woven about them.

PEARLS AS AN INVESTMENT

Potentates reigning B. C. and Kings and Emperors of later eras invariably put their surplus wealth into pearls as the safest and best of all investments.

Pearls have tripled and quadrupled in value within the past ten to fifteen years. A Pearl Necklace sold by us in 1906 for $6,000 is today valued at $25,000, and this is but one of a number of equally striking illustrations of the enhancement of Pearl values.

Their scarcity in the face of an unprecedented world-wide demand augurs well for even a greater enhancement in the future.

As one of the foremost Pearl Houses of the world, we invite an inspection of our superb stock, whether you contemplate purchasing or not.

INDICT SENATOR NEWBERRY AND 133 FOR FRAUDS

Grand Jury Charges Vast Conspiracy in Michigan.

uals are mentioned as having committed "overt acts." B. Frank Emery of Detroit, who formerly was superintendent of the state park at Mackinac island, is charged with five acts. One of these allegations relates that at various times he gave to Guy L. Ingalls of Detroit sums aggregating $2,750.

Roger M. Andrew, publisher of the Menominee Herald-Leader, is accused as is Will S. Darling of Cross Village.

Others whose campaign activities are listed as "overt" are William Cainon, former newspaper reporter in Detroit; John M. Harris of Charlevoix; George W. Welsh, an avowed candidate for speaker of the next state house of representatives, and Elbert V. Chilson, an organizer for the national Republican committee, now stationed in Chicago.

Violate U. S. and State Laws.

The first of the two blanket indictments charged that both federal and state laws were violated in that sums far in excess of legitimate expenses were used in the campaigns. The second indictment cited the affidavits which Senator Newberry made while serving at the Brooklyn navy yard in which he swore that no campaign money had been spent by him or with his knowledge.

Six Counts in First Indictment.

This affidavit, the indictment charged, was a part of a general conspiracy to aid the senator to obtain office illegally and to aid him also in concealing violations of election statutes.

There were six counts in the first indictment. The first four were devoted to charges of excess campaign expenditures. The fifth alleged conspiracy to violate the federal corrupt practices act of October, 1918, which penalizes payment of money to voters.

The sixth count, to which Frank C. Dailey, special assistant to the attorney general, attached especial significance, alleged that the mails were used "to defraud all the people of the state of Michigan."

This count also charged that honest campaign contributors were also victims in that they were misled into believing that the legal limits of expenditures had not been exceeded. It also charged that more than $100,000 of the contributed funds was converted to the private use of some of the campaign managers.

This count also contained a clause charging that James Helm, former state dairy and food commissioner, and opponent of Henry Ford in the Democratic primary, received from the Newberry organization funds "for his compensation and expenses in seeking nomination to said office of senator" at the primary, the alleged purpose being to aid the Newberry cause by preventing Democratic voters from lining up with Ford in the Republican primary.

In a list of thirty-eight "overt acts" attached to the indictments was an accusation that Helm's "compensation" for his candidacy was $50 a week.

These thirty-eight overt acts were charged against the fourteen men named and carried accusations of having given rewards ranging from promises of "a good job" to payments of sums varying from $5 to $2,750 as returns for support or activity in the Newberry campaign. One country editor is alleged to have received a ton of print paper.

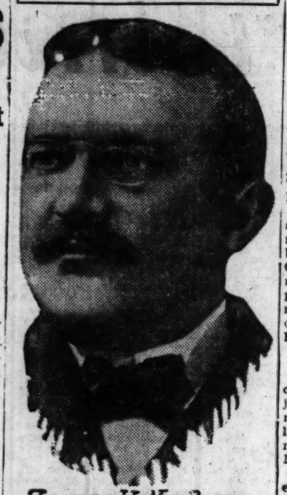
Salaries Paid to Workers.

In the indictment Paul King is charged with having hired Roman F. Giocheski and Rolla E. Prescott, Detroit, at salaries of $150 a month each to work in the campaign; with giving A. K. Moore of Detroit $100; with having hired Elmer O. MacLane of Detroit at $200 a month for four months' campaign work; with having given Charles Tufts of Detroit $400; with having hired Terry T. Corliss at a salary of $75 a week for five months, and with having employed Thomas Phillips at a weekly salary of $100 to write newspaper articles and advertisements.

King later was made receiver for the Pere Marquette railroads.

INDICTED SENATOR

Michigan Leader Who, with 133 Others, Is Accused of Election Frauds by Grand Jury.



Truman H. Newberry

RESULT OF BITTER FIGHT

The indictments returned today are the outgrowth of one of the most bitter political fights in the history of Michigan. At the nominating primaries Henry Ford's name appeared on both the Republican and Democartic ballots. The Republican nomination was carried by Mr. Newberry after a hard fight. Mr. Ford received the Democratic nomination. The election campaign became bitter. Mr. Newberry was finally declared elected by a majority of 7,567, days after the election. The vote was: Newberry, 220,054; Ford, 212,487.

Mr. Ford filed a petition with the senate contesting Senator Newberry's right to a seat. A resolution proposed by Senator Pomerene, Democrat, of Ohio, asked a senate investigation, but received no action in the committee on privileges and elections to which it was referred. The resolution was reintroduced, but, at the suggestion of Mr. Ford's counsel, action was deferred.

Many Witnesses Called.

The grand jury investigation was ordered by the federal department of justice and was based, it was announced, on filed complaints and "public charges of fraud and corruption" made by the lieutenant governor of Michigan, and others.

Witnesses were summoned from every part of the state and represented both political parties. They numbered well into the hundreds and included both men and women. Chase S. Osborn, former governor of Michigan, and one of the Republican candidates defeated for the nomination by Mr. Newberry in the primary election, was the first witness.

HOW INQUIRY WAS MADE

Officials were a bit secretive as to how the alleged conspiracy was uncovered, but a general outline of their methods was made available. It was revealed that an attempt was made to repeat the suspected tactics of the Newberry campaign. Under this plan a corps of investigators was sent into the state under direction of Earl J. Houck, who with Frank C. Dailey, special assistant to the attorney general, was a central figure in the election fraud cases of Terre Haute, Indianapolis, Evansville, and Frankfort, Ind. These cases, beginning in 1915, resulted in some 200 convictions.

Dailey and Houck came to Michigan last August. Bank records were inspected and the visitors' lists of safety deposit vaults gone over. With the tale of these as a starter, the investigators were sent out. They visited "small fry" politicians first, offering them vague hints of what might come from a mythical campaign of a certain Michigan politician. Objections to small returns were followed by "confidential" comparisons with the Newberry campaign.

Claim Many Confessions.

Generally, it was said, these lesser political leaders fell into the traps, telling what they had received and explaining who "ought to handle the money" in given wards or towns. The next grade of political leader was then approached, and by this method, it was stated, a clear track was blazed to the "higher-ups." When brought into the grand jury room and confronted with accurate accounts of their conversations with the agents the men generally, it was said, repeated their stories.

The government's legal experts, headed by Mr. Dailey, H. Dale Sauter of Grand Rapids, a former assistant district attorney, and Oliver Pagin, indictment expert for the department of justice, took both state and federal laws as the basis for the indictments.

The federal corrupt practices act of 1910 limits the expenditures of senatorial candidates to $10,000, and requires that four statements be filed with the secretary of the senate, one preceding and following first the primary and then the election. The Newberry affidavit cited in the second indictment was filed in correspondence with this act.

Why State Law Was Used.

The second federal corrupt practices act, which the indictments alleged was violated, was passed in October, 1918. It made bribery of voters a crime, after several federal courts held that such an act was not an offense against the laws of the United States. This law came into being after the Michigan primary, but just ahead of the election.

The state laws were brought in because the act of 1910 provides that if a state limits campaign expenditures to less than the $10,000 named in that act, then the state law shall apply to campaigns within that commonwealth.

As it happens, the Michigan statutes limit campaign expenditures to a fourth of the yearly salary of the position sought for each primary or election campaign. An aspirant for United States senator in this state may, therefore, it was argued, spend only $1,875 on the primary and an equal amount on the election campaign.

The law forbidding use of the mails to defraud was first used in election cases by Mr. Dailey in the Terre Haute indictments. It was applied to the Newberry case as probably covering various letters sent to campaign contributors, which letters, it was charged, were worded so as to deceive the recipients as to the amounts already collected by the Newberry treasury.

Claim Newberry Knew All.

To meet a probable defense that Senator Newberry was ignorant of the amount of money and its sources used in his campaign, the government intends to use a statement issued by the senator's managers shortly after the first rumors of corruption began to be heard. This statement showed receipts of $178,856 and expenditures of $176,568. Of the contributions, John S. Newberry, the senator's brother, was credited with $99,900; A. Victor Barnes of New York, president of the American Book company and a brother of Mrs. Truman Newberry, with $25,000; Henry B. Joy of Detroit, another brother-in-law of the senator, with $25,000, and Mrs. Henry B. Joy, the senator's sister, with $10,000.

The government will attempt to show that all these persons conferred with Truman H. Newberry while he was a candidate, thus indicating his knowledge of the campaign. It also has a number of letters which he wrote to politicians while the campaign was on. Frederick Cody, formerly a Detroit school teacher, but now of New York and connected with the American Book company, was named as one with whom the candidate conferred.

CHARGES CONSPIRACY

These circumstances were also used as a basis for the allegation of the second indictment, that there was a general conspiracy to aid the senator to obtain office illegally. There are two counts to this indictment, one relating to the primary affidavits and the other to the election statement.

The second indictment starts with a count which charges expenditures in excess of the legal limit in the primary and election combined; the second count alleges the same charge with relation to the primary alone, and the third repeats it as to the election alone.

The fourth count charges violation of the state election law in that more than $6,750 was spent in the two campaigns. In this connection it was pointed out that while the federal law does not forbid advertising in newspapers, the Michigan statute specifically limits the amounts to be spent by candidates or their party in preelection campaigns. The statement of expenditures listed by the Newberry campaign managers includes items which total about $148,000 for newspaper advertising.

Claims Film Cost $8,000.

The count details that with the excess campaign funds, district and county agents and managers and numerous secret propagandists and detectives were hired and their expenses paid; moving picture films were bought and much literature distributed, all of which acts are alleged to be in violation of the Michigan law. The government agents said they had proof that one movie film alone cost $8,000.

The fifth count charges conspiracy to commit thousands of offenses against the federal act of October, 1918, forbidding payment of money to voters.

The sixth count bristles with accusations. It alleges that certain defendants each contributed more than the total amount allowed by law, knowing all the time that they were violating the statutes, and that certain of the defendants induced others to give by falsely representing the amounts already contributed to the campaign.

Says Politicians Got Much.

It alleges further that more than $100,000 of the amounts so contributed were converted to the personal use of certain politicians. It also charges that more than $100,000 was paid to newspapers, campaigners of congress, for office and hall rent, dinners and other entertainment.

The charge that James Helm was hired on salary and expenses to run against Ford in the Democratic primary follows, and then come accusations that Republican candidates for county offices were paid money on condition that they support the Newberry senatorial aspirations.

The count concludes with allegations of wholesale bribery of voters, election boards, and other officials.

NEWBERRY TO HOLD SEAT

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—Senators said tonight that the action of the Michigan grand jury in the Newberry case would not change the status of the petition that Mr. Newberry be unseated filed by Henry Ford and pending before the senate committee on privileges and elections. The outcome of the proceedings in Michigan would be awaited, it was said, as the senate hardly would be called upon by the committee to defend his title to his seat in both places at the same time.

Mr. Newberry, who is spending the senate vacation at Hot Springs, W. Va., was telephoned the news. He refused to make any comment.

Property Owners and Tenants

Janitors Demand 57% Increase

RENTS MUST GO UP

Unless You Heed the Following—

The janitors' union is threatening to strike and to abandon all service in apartment buildings unless numerous unreasonable demands are granted.

Coercion is threatened. The janitors will win unless the owners take united action and stand together. Owners who are afraid to take a decided stand for fear they will get into trouble will find that the janitors will make no exceptions, as they intend to include the entire city in their campaign.

There are about 7,000 janitors and 200,000 property owners in Chicago, as well as 1,500,000 tenants. Are the owners going to stand tamely by while the janitors impose conditions that will make rents much higher?

If the owners will make a decided stand they can throttle the janitors' move at the start. Remember that thejanitors mean fight. Don't waver.

Don't sign the agreement which the janitors are trying to force upon you.

If you act as individuals it will mean victory for the janitors. The Chicago Real Estate Board has formed a strike committee which is elaborating plans for defense and needs funds. It is seeking to secure a fair and equitable settlement.

Join the great body of owners who are backing up the Strike Committee in its work. The charge is only fifty cents a flat per year. The janitors will take an extra $2.00, or more, for each flat, out of your pocket every month if they are allowed to win. The fifty cents is only 1-48th of what the janitors plan to take from you annually.

Some janitors will make more than $7,000 a year under their new plan. In addition, they will have living quarters free and many gratuities. The janitors are trying to get from 10 to 20 per cent of the gross receipts of all apartment buildings.

By joining the organization you will become an affiliated member of the Chicago Real Estate Board for one year and will have a powerful body of property owners to fight your battles.

Don't wait until conditions become intolerable before trying to stop what cannot then be prevented.

By acting in time, this drive against the property owners and tenants of Chicago can be stopped.

Fill out the attached coupon and send it with your check to the Chicago Real Estate Board.

LIVE STOCK SHOW BREAKS RECORDS ON OPENING DAY

Number of Exhibits and Features Greatest in Twenty Years.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Although the International Live Stock exposition is only a day old, it has smashed several records already. The crowd poured through the doors and along the aisles all day yesterday. At night the horse show was an exceptionally brilliant affair.

There are several hundred more entries in the live stock division than there has ever been before in the twenty years' history of the International. The list of 250 horses for the horse fair is the largest, and at the "Victory exposition" the first exhibit of hay—a mighty power in industry—is being shown.

The Live Stock exposition will be open all day today. The Great Lakes Navy band will give a concert at 2:15 this afternoon.

Students Compete.

Keen competition marked the students' judging events that were held in the arena during the day. Teams from eighteen agricultural colleges had their fling. Awards will not be announced until later.

"The hay and grain exhibit is the largest we have ever had," said G. I. Christie of Purdue university, who has charge of the Hay and Grain show. "While this is the first time hay has ever been exhibited at the International, it has already proved a worth while feature."

Horse Fair Winners.

Woodin Farms, Wilson, Ill., are making another spirited bid for high honors in the hunter class at the horse fair. Last night they captured first and third places in the event for hunters, carrying 170 pounds, with Jasbo and Black Watch.

Last winter Woodin Farms won the first leg of the French High Commission Challenge cup, presented for the best saddle horse, hunter type, shown over four jumps, with "The Master." This animal is the entry for the hunters' event Tuesday night, and may be a post entry for the second running of the French trophy.

Thompson Horses Win.

Nancy O'Neil, John R. Thompson's prize mare, took the combination harness and saddle class event. Dink Stover, entered by J. K. Dering, was second, and O. W. Lehmann with Mildred Star third.

Mr. Thompson won first and second honors in the driving horse class. Fleeta Regal was first and Glona von Orchid second. Caynton Phyllis, entered by R. P. Stenicker, took third.

Sorrell Tom, shown by Norris Cochran, won the blue ribbon in the saddle class. Fred S. Arnold's Man o' War took second. Bay Major, shown by Abe Pfleger, was third.

J. K. Dering won in the riding team class with Watchful and Dink Stover. Ella May and Parr, shown by O. W. Lehmann, took the red ribbon. Sparkle and Gen. Clinton, the entry of E. A. Faulkenberg, was third.

J. K. Dering's Sunshine won in the ladies' saddle horse division. Teddy Roper, owned by Charles P. Dryden, was second and Black McDonald, entered by Ed White, third.

Blues Win Polo Match.

The Blues drew the first blood in the polo match, defeating the Reds by 2 to 1.

John R. Thompson's third first prize came in the ladies' saddle horse class, where Miss Grace Braunton drove Nancy O'Neil to victory. Watchful, entered by J. K. Dering, was second and Homestead Choice, shown by Mrs. Joseph M. Harris, was third.

Plans for the rehabilitation of America's sheep industry, which has suffered from the war, were discussed yesterday at a meeting of layman sheep raisers in attendance at the stock show.

Government aid was promised by representatives of the animal industry of the department of agriculture.

Curtis Hand Built Tires

The hand-spun yarn of many centuries past, possessed peculiar attributes not found in yarn today.

It seems that thru the hand-wrought care, peculiar, lasting qualities were found; and in that way, by hand and with great care, each Curtis Hand-Built Tire's made.

The patience of the trained and skillful hand works miles right into them.

That's why a Curtis "Hand-Built" lasts where other tires don't.

Yet Curtis "Hand-Builts" cost no more than other tires which don't last as long.

Vocalion Style 820

Features that contribute to making
The AEOLIAN-VOCALION
THE PHONOGRAPH SUPREME

THE one great fundamental consideration in a musical instrument is its tone. On its tone-quality alone it can rise to preeminence, or remain on the level of mediocrity.

The phonograph is not one musical instrument, it is a thousand. The myriad different instruments and voices it is asked to reproduce call for a tone quality and versatility infinitely beyond the requirements of other instruments.

THE Aeolian-Vocalion has risen to its position of world-supremacy on the strength of its marvelous tone. No other features of interest or convenience have been required to make it great. Its reproduction—particularly when playing the new and revolutionary Vocalion Record—of soprano or bass, tenor or contralto, strings, wood-winds or horns, possesses a richness, depth, purity and beauty that has brought the music world to a new appreciation of the value and meaning of the phonograph.

Universal Tone-Arm

The Grauuola

BUT the Aeolian-Vocalion has additional features that add their weight to its supremacy. It is the only phonograph made with a completely developed tone-control—the Graduola—which makes of every listener who desires, a performer also, which gives the privilege of personal participation in the music to all who wish it; and which makes the Aeolian-Vocalion a genuine instrument of artistic musical expression.

It provides the means in its extraordinary Universal Tone-Arm, by which all different makes of phonograph records may be played with equally good effect. Thus all great artists, all instrumentalists, all bands, orchestras and entertainers, have sung and played for the pleasure and entertainment of the owner of an Aeolian-Vocalion.

It exhibits a perfection of mechanical features that reflect the skill, the unparalleled experience of its makers. But one example—the Aeolian Automatic Stop—operating with positive precision—simple, sure and uncomplicated—illustrates the perfection of all its mechanism.

Automatic Stop

And lastly, it embodies a beauty, grace and perfect taste in its appearance that is evidence of a new and successful effort to conform the phonograph to the high standards of modern furnishing and decoration.

Vocalion Prices—

*Conventional models equipped with Graduola are priced from $165 upward; without Graduola, from $50. Many beautiful Period models, priced from $265. Convenient

45,000 SEE NAVY BEAT ARMY, 6-0, IN GRID CLASSIC

Two Field Goals by King Bring Victory and Joy to Middies.

BY JOHN ALCOCK.

New York, Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Football tradition says that rainy weather is Navy weather. Football tradition was right today. In Uncle Sam's first big service duel since the great war interrupted play after 1916, the lighter naval eleven triumphed over the husky Army squad, 6 to 0, at the Polo grounds.

Those Navy points represent two easy goals from placement. Both were lofted over the West Point bar by the diligent toe of Left Tackle Charles W. King. Mr. King is monarch of thousands of future admirals who are storming New York tonight.

At least 45,000 thronged to the Polo grounds for this most spectacular of football spectacles. From sullen skies rain pattered persistently, but could not dampen the enthusiasm of the mighty gathering. The irritating drizzle started shortly after noon, but the crowd flocked to the scene nevertheless.

Rain Makes No Difference.

Throughout the day the drizzle was varied only by an occasional more active downpour. But the great crowd stood or sat through the entire battle without complaint, and the great crowd waited afterward to watch the marvelous snake dance of several thousand joy crazed Navy lads.

The rain did serve to keep the spectators from a good view of the ranking officers of the Army and Navy, who sat on either side of the field. Gen. Pershing, with Secretary of War Baker, Gen. March, and members of the Washington staff, camped behind umbrellas the greater part of the time. On the Annapolis side, Secretary of Navy Daniels, Admiral Sims, and other high officers of the navy sought the same shelter.

Army Men Pay Respects.

Even this disappointment was offset when Gen. Pershing and the other Army leaders crossed to the Navy side between halves to pay their respects to the commanders of the rival fighting branch.

Against the heavy Army line the Annapolis backs gained probably three times as much ground as did the rival back field men. From the start the sailors hammered their way again and again through every possible point of the Army defense.

Between Kiefer and Travis at the left wing the middies seemed to gain almost at will. Kiefer was withdrawn early in the battle, but the substitution of White did not silence the Navy guns.

Old Game Prevails.

There was not a single point of the Army line that the sailors seemed unable to penetrate. Practically all their gaining was done by old fashioned plunging. The few forward passes attempted went wrong. Only one end run, a dash of nine yards by Clark just before the first field goal, had any definite bearing on the result.

An oddity of the game was that Capt. George of the Army never broke into action until right at the finish. Then it appeared Coach Daly sent him in only that George might say he led his team in a battle against the Navy.

Benoist, Koehlerfi Clark, and Cruise hit the soldier forward wall for repeated small gains, that made the march to their first score almost a walkover.

Army Has One Chance.

The Army flashed dangerously only in the opening period. Then it worked the ball well within Navy territory. The sailors held and McQuarrie attempted a field goal from the thirty-seven yard line. His effort was wide. That was the closest the soldiers ever came to a score.

Early in the second quarter the Navy received a punt on its forty-five yard mark, and started a march to the first field goal. Benoist, Clark, and Koehler tore and plunged their way through the line repeatedly, and Clark ejected his short end run for variety. At the nineteen yard line the soldiers halted the drive with the ball squarely in front of the Army posts. King was called back to the twenty-five yard mark to loft a cinch placement goal across the bar.

Trick Plays Fool Army.

In the third period the Navy unveiled some of its trick plays. Fake forward passes, a couple of plunges straight through center by Benoist and Koehler, and some clever dodging by all four Navy backs had the ball around the Army twenty yard mark when the final period opened.

Again the Army held for three downs, and once more the Navy called on King for an aerial score. This time the ball was close to the West Point twenty-five yard mark and squarely in front of the goal posts when King sped it across the barrier. Lineup:

FIVE LOSE LIVES IN 'GRID' GAMES SEASON OF 1919

Football, the roughest of American outdoor sports, claimed five victims during the 1919 season, which closed with Thanksgiving day games, according to Associated Press reports. The number of deaths—the lowest in years—was five less than in 1918 and seven under the toll of two years ago. There were eighteen lives lost during the 1916 season and sixteen in 1915.

Development of the open style of play to supplant the dangerous smashing game is mainly responsible for the decreasing number of fatalities, in the opinion of gridiron experts. The dangers of a dozen years ago, when the old style smashing game included hurdling, flying tackles, and vicious offensive tactics, have been almost entirely eliminated in the new style of football, with a corresponding decrease in the number of deaths.

Prep Players on Death List.

Virtually all of the victims of the 1919 season were players not participating in games conducted under strict physical requirements. Defenders of the popular college sport pointed out that, with one exception, the victims were high school players who entered the games without expert training. Lack of proper training and physical condition was declared to be the greatest menace to the sport.

The small number of fatalities this season was declared to be remarkable, the experts said, as the game was played more extensively than ever before pre-war days.

The List of Victims.

Paul Johnson, Wayzata, Minn., 19 years old, died Nov. 27 from concussion of the brain after being tackled in a high school game.

Lewis Moulton, Neodesha, Kas., member of a high school team, died Nov. 5 as the result of a broken neck received in a practice game.

Calvin Libisher, Urbana, O., 17 years old, died Sept. 29 from cerebral injuries sustained in a high school game.

Gardner Dow, New Haven, Conn., member of the Connecticut Agricultural college eleven, died Sept. 27 from concussion of the brain; injured playing against New Hampshire college.

Joseph Blancke, Moline, Ill., 16 years old, died Oct. 30 of blood poisoning which developed from an injury sustained in a neighborhood game.

BIG TEN STARS OF PRO GAMES FACE TROUBLE

Big Ten conference faculty representatives, disturbed by the action of certain players and coaches in playing professional football, are promising an investigation with a view to enforcing the terms of a resolution adopted by the conference Dec. 6, 1916, which prohibited such action.

At that time Ohio elevens were most prominent in the field and the pro game in Chicago had not reached the importance or attracted the attendance which prevailed this fall. What the professors regarded as a menace to college sport subsided during the war period.

The resolution adopted in 1916 read:

Resolved, 1. That all employés of athletic departments who take part in professional football games shall be thereby suspended from their employment.

2. That members of teams participating in professional contests before graduation shall forfeit their letters and be recommended to their faculties for further discipline.

Paddy Driscoll of the Northwestern coaching staff is the most prominent athlete, so far as known, who comes under the head of an employé. Driscoll's contract, however, terminated Nov. 22. He played with the Hammond All-Start Nov. 23 and Nov. 27, but thinks he was within his rights, as his contract had expired with the Purple.

If press agent reports of pro games are to be believed, a number of undergraduates may find themselves in trouble. Eight Big Ten players were said to have participated in a game at Davenport Thanksgiving day. From Ohio came reports that several Ohio State players had joined the pro ranks.

Paul Meyers, Wisconsin's crack end, played here with Hammond after the close of the conference season.

HERE'S ALL-STAR TEAM OF BIG TEN FOR 1919 SEASON

Harley Is Named Captain; 3 Iowans, 2 Illini, and 2 Buckeyes Picked.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

Following the most successful western conference football season since the adoption of the forward pass and ten yard rule in the winter of 1905-'06, a year in which the championship was not decided until the final games were played, it is a time honored custom to select the players who have done the most meritorious and consistent playing all season and place them on honorary elevens.

Opinions differ greatly as to the makeup of these mythical teams, but in general the critics agree on the majority of the players. The warriors are not chosen for their play in any one game, but for all around work throughout the season. It would be unjust to players who have taken part in every game to select other men who have played in only two or three of the seven struggles.

Great on Defense, Too.

In the selection of these teams every department of play must be taken into consideration. Not alone must the offensive ability of the men be weighed carefully but the defensive play is just as important, and in a number of positions more essential. It would be folly to select a team of eleven stars who are mediocre on the defense. It is the aim to select a team which could gain an advantage and then hold it by great defensive play combined with strong punting.

These teams should possess players who could gain by straight football tactics of the driving type, and should also have accurate forward passers and receivers. They should be able to use the open and close attack whenever the defense warranted. They also should be fortified with men who can kick goals from the field and punt the ball out of danger. The backs should be sure catchers of punts, especially those delegated to go back to catch kicks.

Injuries Debar Some Stars.

Before going into detail in the selection of these teams it is timely to mention a few players who would be considered for these teams if they had played throughout the season. Unfortunately early season injuries kept them out of important games, while other men of caliber were not discovered until the middle of the year. Others were continually shifted from one position to another, with the result they did not have the opportunity to show their true ability in one position.

Capt. Bob Koehler of Northwestern undoubtedly would have been selected for full back had he played through the entire season. The Purple leader was injured in Northwestern's first game with De Pauw and was not at his best until the close of the season. He played through only two conference games, those with Iowa and Indiana. He started in the Wisconsin game and finished the Michigan contest.

McGuire of Maroons Good.

McGuire of Chicago is a great forward, but played in only two Big Ten games. He was hurt in the Maroons' first game with Great Lakes and did not round into shape until Iowa was met. He played in the following game against Wisconsin. Scott of Wisconsin would have been chosen for the first team if he had played through the season at guard. He was shifted to tackle in mid-season.

Mohr of Illinois, who was chosen for the all-conference and western teams last year while playing guard, was used at end most of the season. It was an unnatural position for him and Coach Zuppke finally put him back at his old position at the end of the year. If he had played guard all season he would have been chosen for the first team.

Crangle of Illinois is a great full back, a player who will be heard from in the next two years. He did not, however, play the position all season as did Lohman of Iowa and Willaman of Ohio State. Other players in similar circumstances could be mentioned, but those cited above are the most prominent.

Chick Harley for Captain.

The honor of being captain of this team goes to Chick Harley of Ohio State. The Buckeye leader should be the unanimous choice of all critics for his old position at right half back, and he also should receive strong consideration from those who select All-American teams.

It must be admitted, however, that Harley did not accomplish the great feats expected this year. In fact, many believe he was better two years ago, but the fact must be taken into consideration he was a marked man in every game he played. Wisconsin stopped him, as did Illinois, but he did manage to get loose against Michigan and played good football against Purdue.

There is no questioning the fact that Harley is a great football player. He possesses a combination of gridiron assets which makes him dangerous at

BIGGEST EVENT OF C.B.A. STARTS; LASTS 23 DAYS

The biggest tournament in the history of the Chicago Bowling association opened at the Randolph alleys last night. It is the sixteenth annual competition for the city championships.

The usual ceremonies preceded the firing of the starting shot which sent them on their way for a twenty-three days' grind. Frank L. Pasdeloup, president of the local association, and Judge Howard, former president of the A. B. C., made short talks congratulating the organization on the big entry list for this tournament.

Many Teams to Roll.

During the next three weeks 480 teams will roll in the main event. The best previous record was in 1917 when 450 teams competed.

The minor events will open this afternoon, the shooting last night consisting of two squads of five men each. For an opening night the pin getting was exceptionally good, the Majestics running high with a grand total of 2,596 and the Howard Imperials ran third with 2,517.

INCREASE IN COIN FOR CARPENTIER DUE TO EXCHANGE

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Georges Carpentier will have a powerful ally fighting for him when he faces Joe Beckett at Holborn stadium Dec. 4—the rate of exchange. Carpentier will receive £5,000, win, lose or draw, according to unofficial reports. At the normal rate of exchange this would mean that the French champion would receive about 125,000 francs, but with the exchange rate as it is at present, running at about 40 francs to the pound, Carpentier's share will amount to almost 200,000 francs.

Carpentier has wagered £2,000, or approximately the difference between his share under normal rates and at present

ASSOCIATION OF ROWING CLUBS TO INCLUDE CHICAGO

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—A new rowing association, to be known as the Great Lakes Rowing association, is to be formed here early in December, to be composed of rowing clubs from Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, two St. Louis clubs, and the Grand Rapids Boat and Canoe club.

The organization is planned that this section might get some of the big annual rowing regattas which have been going to the Mississippi in years past. Organizers of the association declare that St. Louis, with seven clubs, and other Valley clubs, because of voting strength, dominate the award of events in this section. Charles McGuewan of this city is a prime mover in the new movement. It is also planned to organize new clubs in Milwaukee and Muskegon that they might enter the association. Invitations for the meeting are now being prepared.

FALLER WINNER OF SENIOR RUN; PORES IS SECOND

New York, Nov. 29.—Fred Faller of the Dorchester club, Dorchester, Mass., won the national senior cross country championship run over the Van Cortlandt park six mile course today. His time, 32:26 1-5, is a new record for the course, the best previous mark being 32:37.

Faller, who distinguished himself in the American exped.tionary force contests and holds the national ten mile title, led the field of thirty-two starters all the way and won handily. His time was remarkable, as the race was run during a heavy rain and the course was in poor condition.

Charles Pores, Millrose A. A., was second; W. Ritalo, Finnish-American A. C., third, and Jimmy Hen.gan, a clubmate of the winner, was fourth. Max Bohland, who held the title, had to retire from the race, owing to a recent injury to his right leg, after completing one round of the course.

WAR TAX DEMAND ON GREENS FEES STIRS GOLFERS

BY JOE DAVIS.

A demand by the internal revenue department on the Harlem Golf club for war tax on the money paid in greens fees has created a situation of great interest to golf clubs in all parts of the country.

If the contention of the department that the greens fee is not paid for rental but for admission, is upheld it would make the greens fees collected at private clubs taxable and also apply to similar charges made at resort courses and on a number of the municipal courses.

This tax would date back two years, and as there is a penalty of 50 per cent last year and 25 per cent, with 1 per cent per month interest this year, it would mean the collection of a large amount.

Here's Revenue Act.

The revenue act of 1918 reads as follows:

Section 800 [a]—That from and after April 1, 1919, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid, in lieu of the taxes imposed by section 700 of the revenue act of 1917:

1. A tax of 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission to any place on and after such date, including admission by season ticket or subscription, to be paid by the persons paying for such admission.

Treasury department regulations 43, dated June 19, 1919, gives the following examples:

2. A certain golf club charges guests and other nonmembers a "green fee" of $2 for each time they play on its course. As this amount is paid for the right to enter on the course and use it along with other people playing at the same time, it is clearly not paid for rental, but for admission within the meaning of the act.

3. In a certain amusement park is a tennis court, which is rented at 50 cents per hour. As the person paying this amount has the sole and entire right to use the court during the hour, this charge is clearly a rental charge for the use of the court and is not "paid for admission" within the meaning of the act.

Club Asks Hearing.

Col. Noble B. Judah, representing the Harlem Golf club, has asked for a hearing in Washington, and if the treasury department sticks to its ruling, which was not made public until last August, he plans to carry the matter into court.

Col. Judah asserts that the "greens fee" is just as much rental as the money paid for the use of a tennis court, bowling alley, or billiard table.

A guest can visit a club free of charge, but it is not until he decides to play golf that he is taxed rental, and when he gets out on the course he is entitled to the exclusive use of each section of the course as the occasion demands.

The collection of the tax would entail the issuing of different colored tickets, according to the different prices charged.

Other Clubs Don't Pay.

Inquiry at several Chicago clubs showed that none has paid tax except on membership fees. Treasurer James G. Wakefield of Glen Oak said that through his bank he took the matter of taxes up with Washington some time ago and was informed that only club dues were taxable.

Meanwhile the Harlem club, on the advice of the Chicago revenue office, has been charging a tax pending a further decision on the matter.

SWEEPING PLAY SPELLS DEFEAT FOR ENGLEWOOD

Forceful Attack Brings Early Scores; Caruso and Steger Stars.

Walter Eckersall's critical analysis of the playing of Oak Park and Englewood appears on page 3 of this section.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Sweeping its opponents off their feet with two touchdowns in the first six minutes of play, Oak Park retained the Cook county high school football championship by defeating Englewood, 33 to 14, over a soggy gridiron at Stagg field yesterday. It crowned two full seasons without defeat for Oak Park, and was the second successive season that Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite's Suburban league champions tumbled Englewood for the title.

Oak Park showed mastery at all stages, and the well balanced and varied attack is shown by the plays which put over the winners' five touchdowns. Steger rushed the ball through the line for the first score. Caruso sneaked upfield and grabbed a long pass three yards from the goal line for the second. Another long pass, Steger to Hoff, resulted in a twenty-eight yard run by the latter for the third touchdown. All three of these scores came in the first period.

Touchdown by Caruso.

In the third period a short pass just over the two scrimmage lines, and into a struggling mass, was grabbed by Berry, the 210 pound Oak Park center, after bouncing out of an Englewood man's hands, and Caruso scored on a cross buck of four yards on the next play. The last score, in the fourth period, featured Steger in a forty-five yard run through the broken field, when he threw off four tacklers and dodged through when seemingly hemmed in by two or three Englewood players.

Both Englewood scores resulted from long runs when the team was nowhere within reach of a score. In the second period Folz returned an Oak Park punt for seventy-two yards through the field, practically unaided by interference. This was the first time Englewoods' cohorts had an excuse for a lusty cheer and they made the most of it.

92 Yard Run by Koch.

In the final period Koch, Englewood end, recovered Oak Park's only fumble of the game, inside the suburbanites' ten yard zone, and ran ninety-two yards for a touchdown, his interference galloping behind him in relays and taking off successive Oak Parkers who were on the point of overhauling the runner.

Except for the two individual feats by Folz and Koch, Metz's powerful line bucks, and two or three pretty runs reeled off by Folz and Bryson, Englewood was unable to make any headway and completed only four first downs. Fumbles marked the play at the start. Dixon being the chief offender. This was probably because of the half back's injured shoulder, which finally resulted in his retirement. Folz also was badly bumped and taken out. At the end of the game Englewood was represented by a thoroughly crippled lineup.

The Oak Park ends, Godolphin and Wilcoxen, lived up to past performances by stopping practically all attempts to circle the wings.

Great Play by Italian.

Felice Caruso, 137 pound half back for Oak Park, occupied the limelight by great offensive work. With Caruso carrying the ball for cross-bucks on Oak Park's bewildering shift plays, the Englewood line opened frequent holes. The stocky, slippery little Italian shared honors as chief ground gainer with Herb Steger, his half back mate. Caruso punted well, and also figured in various forward pass combinations, both at the throwing and receiving end.

In the lines the work of Capt. Hoff, tackle, and Guard Harter of Oak Park, stood out. Together with Berry, they rolled back Englewood's line for wide openings for the half backs to buck through. Englewood connived a way to hold Berry by playing Full Back Metz as defensive center, shifting Capt. Mathis to guard and playing Wolslow back. This made the center of the line secure, but Oak Park then sent the attack off the tackles for gains.

Fumbles Due to Cold.

The game started in a cold, dispiriting drizzle, and was played through mean weather conditions, almost in semi-darkness. Chilled fingers were responsible for many of the fumbles.

Until after 11:30 o'clock in the morning it was not certain the game would be played, because of the two days' rain, which seeped through the protecting layer of hay on the field. Coach Baradell of Englewood wished to call off the game, but Oak Park insisted on playing. The Oak Park team was better able to keep its footing on the oozy turf, being equipped with mud cleats, which Englewood lacked.

The weather held the crowd to less than 3,000, keeping an estimated attendance of 7,000 more fans at home.

Oak Park Shows Scoring Power.

Englewood's hopes died to a faint glimmer after the score stood 20 to 0 in the first quarter, but the speedy Folz revived morale in the second period by his seventy-two yard run for a touchdown, almost without swerving, down the middle of the field. For the remainder of the period the Purple showed its most vigorous punch, and, aided by a lucky play, reached Oak Park's eleven yard line.

The lucky play occurred when Dixon juggled the oval and to avoid a fumble tossed it in the air, hoping it would ground as an incomplete forward pass. Instead, Folz was Johnny on the spot, catching the ball and completing a pass, planting the oval on the eleven yard mark. Here Oak Park held for downs when Englewood needed only one yard on three plays.

Suburbanites Count Again.

Oak Park rolled Englewood up the field for another count in the third period, when Englewood's crippled lineup had to be plugged with players unfamiliar to the positions. Early in the fourth quarter Steger pulled off his dandy forty-five yard run, making the count 33 to 7. Oak Park soon afterward had Englewood on its one foot line, when Bryson fell on a punt instead of waiting for it to roll for a touchback.

Steger made a fair catch of the punt-out on Englewood's twenty yard mark, and Oak Park was on the verge of another touchdown on the ten yard line when Carpenter, on an end-back play, fumbled, giving Koch his opportunity for his spectacular ninety-two yard sprint for a touchdown. Oak Park ran in several substitutes at the close.

Cleanly Fought Battle.

The game was cleanly played, Oak Park being penalized a couple times for holding and tripping, while several other penalties were for technical reasons—offside and six men on the scrimmage line. Englewood was penalized only three times during the game, each for offside. Previous to yesterday's game Englewood had not been beaten.

NOTES OF THE GAME

Weislow at guard played a sturdy game in Englewood's line.

Coaches A. A. Stagg of Chicago and A. G. Scanlon of Purdue gave the prep athletes the once over.

The game was Englewood's second defeat in two years, each time by Oak Park, in the season's finale for the Cook county title.

The Oak Park team has lost only one game in three seasons, that by 6 to 0 to Hyde Park on Northwestern field for the county honors in 1917.

Marvin (Bun) Barry, Oak Park center, was the heaviest prep player on local gridirons this year. He weighs 210 pounds, and weighed 250 when the season began.

Although Englewood was unable to do much ground gaining through team work, the seventy-two yard run by Folz and the ninety-two yard run by Koch are two of the best individual performances of the prep season.

Englewood finished the game with only three back field players who could carry the ball. Stevens, substitute, was not familiar with the signals and could not be called into action. He never had played the position before.

Whittaker played the whole game with a broken nose and a broken third finger on his left hand. The Oak Park boy's nose was broken in practice last Wednesday. The injury to his finger occurred in the first quarter yesterday.

Full Back Metz of Englewood was good for two and three yard gains every time he took the ball. He had to make his own holes, too. He provided good interference, and also played defensive center much of the time, making him one of the busiest athletes on the field.

Oak Park played seven brothers of former stars. Lyman Savage is the brother of Clarence Savage, who captained the 1917 team that lost the county title to Hyde Park. Capt. Arthur Hoff is a brother of Elnar Hoff, who held down left end four years ago. Marvin Berry's brother was left half back of the famous team Coach Bob Zuppke took to Washington and which cleaned up Spokane. Herbert Steger is the brother of "Pete" Steger of Oak Park and Notre Dame fame. Bob Wilcoxen's brother, Fred, played end three years ago. Thomas Carpenter is the brother of Russell Carpenter, who played tackle on last year's team that beat Englewood, 13 to 6. Gorin Smith's brother, Dick, played quarter in 1915.

Lightweight Prep Games Off, Due to Sloppy Field

Possession of the two lightweight divisional titles of the Chicago High School league are still undecided. The champions were to be decided yesterday in morning and afternoon elimination games at De Paul field. Austin was to meet Bowen for the division I. title in the afternoon and Lake View to play Hyde Park in division II. in the forenoon, but the steady rain had the field under water in spots.

The games will be played, but no new dates have been set. The winners of these struggles have still to play to decide the league supremacy.

Prep Football Player with Broken Neck to Recover

Galesburg, Ill., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Harry Williams, end of the Galesburg High school team, who suffered a broken neck two weeks ago in a game with Peoria, will live, according to statements of attending physicians. The doctors promise his recovery after six months or a year in the hospital.

ENGLAND WAITS CABLE NEWS OF WILDE VERDICT

Briton Will Give Away Ten Pounds to Sharkey in Milwaukee Ring.

BY RAY PEARSON.

When Pal Moore fought Jimmy Wilde, flyweight champion of England, in London a few months ago, all America held waiting ears at the cable for news of that contest. Next Saturday night it will be reversed and all England will be waiting anxiously to hear the returns of Wilde's first American ring engagement with Jack Sharkey at Milwaukee.

Perhaps in England there are a lot of folks who aren't quite as well acquainted geographically with our map as they might be. But it is a moral cinch that since the Cream City Athletic club got the signatures to a set of articles calling for Wilde to trade punches with Sharkey those fellows over there are digging up the old atlas to "find" Wisconsin and Milwaukee. And they'll find it, too, for those Britishers will be with Jimmy wherever Jimmy is next Saturday night.

Big Crowd to Inspect Wilde.

While the cockney chaps who drop their H's won't be there in person, their more favored fistic brethren of Chicago, Milwaukee, and other midwestern cities will be sitting at the ringside of the big auditorium at the Cream City to see with their own glims how this young man who defeated our own Pal Moore and Joe Lynch conducts himself before a strange populace. That is evident by the interest being displayed.

In Milwaukee they claim a ten strike in landing this match. Perhaps it isn't known in all circles that in landing it President Borchert of the Cream City found it necessary to make a trip to New York, bid $15,000 cold smackers for Wilde's services, get him to concede something like ten pounds to Sharkey, then bring the British champion back to Milwaukee before the match could be considered completed.

Borchert Beats Other Promoters.

Worthy of notice, incidentally, is the fact that Borchert beat the eastern boxing gents to the attraction, and when any one can go into the other fellow's bailiwick and take something away from him it is putting it over in nice shape. Jersey City wanted Wilde, so did Cleveland and so did Detroit, but now that the match has been closed it is sufficient to say that Milwaukee got it.

It is not only the international phase that makes this Wilde-Sharkey clash a match that promises to be productive of great milling. One needs only to consider what a victory would mean to Sharkey, particularly if it were gained by a knockout. It would place New York Jack on a pedestal of gold, for he could build that pedestal from the fruits of such a victory. He wouldn't need to be bantam champion of the world to get the money.

Big Chance for Sharkey.

Therefore it is the one big chance for Sharkey to distinguish himself, to cop world fame, for to do what Moore and Lynch failed to do would gain him world-wide recognition. He has everything to win and practically nothing to lose.

Now, take Wilde. Admittedly one of the greatest little fellows that ever drew on a glove, the British flyweight glories in his victories over other Americans of class. That he could accomplish this after making heavy weight concessions stamps him as one of the smartest boys in the wee class the wrold ever has known. If a concession of ten pounds means a match with a formidable rival, the Britisher accepts without quibbling.

"I give a stone to any of 'em," said Wilde. "It doesn't make any difference who they are."

Wilde Expects to Weigh 106½.

There is likely to be a difference of close to ten pounds in the weights of Wilde and Sharkey next Saturday. If there isn't, it will be because the English flyweight has been able to build on a couple of pounds. He doesn't think that he will be able to do that. He says he believes he will enter the ring weighing about 106½ pounds.

The demands on Sharkey call for him to weigh in at 116 pounds at 7 o'clock the evening of the battle. Sharkey can do that, for he never weighs many ounces more than that.

The chances for a knockout seem to rest on the British side of the ledger. Wilde is the punching kid with his right hand, although he carries a stinger in his left. That deduction is gained after glancing over Sharkey's record, replete with nice achievements, but not sprinkled with knockout performances. But perhaps the argument might be advanced: "Who has knocked out Sharkey?"

Well, write your own ticket.

ED LEWIS EAGER FOR STECHER OR ZBYSZKO MATCH

Ed "Strangler" Lewis, matched to meet John Olin, Finnish heavyweight champion, in a finish match at Aryan Grotto temple, Wabash avenue and Eighteenth street, tomorrow night, posted $1,000 on his arrival here last night to go as a side bet for a finish battle with either Joe Stecher or Wladek Zbyszko.

Lewis is smarting under the sting of a one-fall victory Zbyszko got over him in Boston, and wants to get the Pole in the return match, best two out of three falls. The "Strangler" took Zbyszko's measure in a finish contest here last spring, beating him after losing the first fall.

The celebrated Kentuckian has wholesome respect for the ability of Olin. They clashed here two years ago, Lewis winning after two hours and forty-two minutes of wrestling. Olin gave up because of an injury to his shoulder when Lewis slammed him to the mat. They will meet tomorrow night at virtually the same weight. Lewis will scale about 235, while Olin will be about five pounds under that mark.

JIMMY WILDE IN CHARACTERISTIC FIGHTING POSE

British Flyweight Champ Will Make His First American Ring Appearance Against Jack Sharkey at Milwaukee, Receiving $15,000 for His Ten Round Effort.

Johnny Dundee and Jimmy Wilde

ALL-CONFERENCE TEAMS PICKED

all times. He can run in the open, throw forward passes with the accuracy of a baseball, and is a punter and field goal kicker of the first water. He knows when to throw a forward pass and when to run with it if the receivers are covered. He is a strong defensive player of the type who is quick to size up plays and move to the points of attack.

The other half back position is given to Arnold Oss of Minnesota, one of the most powerful running backs in the conference. Although heavy, he is one of the fastest runners on a western gridiron. In the conference track meet held on Stagg field last June Oss won his heat in the quarter mile in :48 4-5.

The Gopher was a tower of strength in advancing the ball against Wisconsin and Michigan, while he gained more ground against Illinois than any other back who faced Illinois since Coach Zuppke has been in charge of football. He can stand the wear and tear of a hard game and is just as strong defensively as in advancing the oval or furnishing interference.

Ralph Fletcher of Illinois is a great back, but injuries prevented him from performing up to his standard. If he had been able to play through all the games he would have been on the first eleven. He won the Iowa and Minnesota games by field goals and booted one against Chicago.

Lohman for Full Back.

Wahlquist of Illinois is another great back. Although not of the flashy type, he was a conspicuous figure in all the team's victories, his recovery of the onside kick in the Iowa game deciding the issue. Williams of Indiana, Lane, Northwestern; Weston, Michigan; Sternaman of Illinois, and Sundt of Wisconsin were other good half backs.

Capt. Fred Lohman of Iowa is placed at full back. The Hawkeye eleven was one of the smoothest working aggregations on the western gridiron last fall and Lohman was the main cog of the offense. He is a hard plunger who generally makes his distance. He is one of the best interfering backs in the conference and he, more than any other player, was responsible for the runs of the Devine brothers. He is a strong defensive player and logical choice for the position.

Willaman of Ohio State was another consistent full back. He fitted into Ohio's offense in a smooth manner and was a good interferer. Jacobi of Wisconsin played well during the first half of the season, but later was supplanted by Elliott, another good back. Capt. Huffine of Purdue was a reliable player who failed to receive the support from the line.

Stinchcomb Picked As Pilot.

There were a number of good quarter backs, but the position is given to Pete Stinchcomb of Ohio State. In these days of football one of the main assets of a quarter back is to direct a team's attack faultlessly and have the supreme confidence of every player. This Stinchcomb had, and it was a pleasure to watch him direct his eleven. The ball was not snapped until every player was set for the supreme effort and certain of the signal.

In addition to filling this important requirement Stinchcomb was a sure handler of the ball. On plays in which he received the ball from the center he fed it to the backs quickly and safely, while on other plays in which the ball was passed directly to the runner the Buckeye seldom failed to get into the interference. He was a fast, shifty runner who was dangerous once he got in the open. He caught punts safely and knew how to play the game safe at all times.

Bob Fletcher of Illinois was another sterling quarter back. Like Stinchcomb, he handled his team perfectly, and it was his field goal against Ohio State in the closing minutes of play which gave the championship to Illinois. He has another year to play and should be a star of the first magnitude.

Two Great Ends.

Graham of Chicago played good football most of the year, but does not rank with Stinchcomb or Fletcher. Aubrey Devine of Iowa was another good quarter back who performed well, considering the fact he was shifted from half back in the middle of the year. Sparks of Michigan and Lampl of Minnesota were other good men in the position.

The end positions are given to Meyers of Wisconsin and Belding of Iowa. These players performed consistently all season, and each was a past master in receiving forward passes. They possessed the happy faculty of outrunning the defensive players to catch a pass, and they could pull the oval out of the air in any position.

They were almost perfect in boxing tackles and covered punts in a manner which always drove the catcher to the inside where he could be tackled by other members of their teams. The same was true in smashing interference.

Weston of Wisconsin and Carney of Illinois were not far behind the first choices. These players will certainly be dangerous next season. Myers and Flower of Ohio State were also good ends, as was Halladay of Chicago and Pope of Indiana.

Higgins, Slater, at Tackles.

Higgins of Chicago and Slater of Iowa are placed at the tackle positions. These men are big and strong enough to play what is commonly known as a waiting tackle. They could simply hold their ground, nick the interferers off with their hands, and then either tackle the runner or turn him out clean for other members of their teams. Both were important factors in the success of their teams and their choice hardly could be improved upon.

Ingwersen of Illinois is nearly the equal of Slater and Higgins. He played hard, consistent football all year and is a lineman hard to improve upon. Goetz of Michigan, Daley of Northwestern, Huffman of Ohio State, and Scott of Wisconsin were other reliable tackles.

The guard positions are given to McCaw of Indiana and Applegran of Illinois. Although most followers of conference football have not seen McCaw in action, he is one of the best in the Big Ten. He reminded one more of Benbrook, the great Michigan guard, than any other lineman seen in years. He was quick to size up plays and did a lot of tackling on the flanks.

Applegran played consistent football all year, although he was kept out of some games by injuries. Like McCaw, he possessed football intuition and always was in the vicinity of the ball. Hunzelman of Iowa, Trott of Ohio State, Fortune of Michigan, and Butler of Minnesota were other reliable men in the positions.

Depler Named as Center.

Depler of Illinois and Carpenter of Wisconsin were by far the best centers in the conference, but the position is given to the former for general all around play. Depler was a great center last year when he was chosen for the second All-American team. He is a reliable passer, of the type who makes sure of his pass first, and then looks after the opponents. He is aggressive on the defense and generally mixed in every play.

Carpenter also was a great player. He was all over the field in the Ohio State game and on several occasions broke up Buckeye plays before they were formed. Holtcamp of Ohio broke down toward the close of the season. Reber of Chicago played good football all year, as did Heidt of Iowa.

FAST SCRAPPERS BATTLE IN RACINE RING TOMORROW

Burman and Mike Dundee Averse to Stalling; 3 Mills on Program.

They're coming pretty fast nowadays—these ring battles in our neighborly Badger state—but it seems that the local bugs will hop the rattler for anything that even closely resembles a scrap. That's why the dyed in the wool gents, including "Jerry the Dock" and his cohorts, are likely to be found sitting at the ringside in Lakeside arena, Racine, tomorrow night, watching Joe Burman and Mike Dundee go to it.

Pop Wagner has billed Burman and Dundee for the special number of a three bout program, each bout scheduled for ten rounds. And don't forget, gentle reader, Pop isn't advertising his windup as a grudge affair. He did that on a bout recently, filled his arena to capacity, then couldn't watch it because it was so terribly grudgeful.

Fast, Hard Punchers.

If a fellow could predict in advance and with positiveness whether or not a match would pan out a great battle he would say that the bout tomorrow night has all the earmarks of being a rattler. It is a bout that ought to draw a lot of fans, but probably will not, chiefly because it has been scheduled a bit too close to this international mêlée between Jimmy Wilde and Jack Sharkey at Milwaukee.

Burman and Dundee are fast travelers, hard punchers, and, best of all, not the type that indulges in stalling tactics. Therefore they should hit a fast pace.

Lineup for Other Bouts.

The other bouts on the card will be between Earl Olson and Johnny Bresnahan and Frankie Jumatti and Johnny Hagen.

A special train on the electric road is being arranged for by Al Bloom.

MORE HINTS FOR YOUNG DUCK HUNTERS.

THE speed of a redhead duck is estimated at ninety miles an hour or 132 feet a second. The velocity of a twelve gauge gun is approximately 1,000 feet a second. A redhead duck, then, flying directly across your blind at a distance of 100 feet travels a trifle over thirteen feet in the time it takes your shot to get to him.

Therefore, reason the mathematically inclined, all you have to do is to hold a fraction over thirteen feet ahead of your bird and you will crumple him up like a veteran—you will if your decoys are all anchored with horseshoes and your blind is lined with hay made of four leaved clover!

It is a waste of time to try to "figger out" on paper how to shoot birds on the wing. It simply cannot be done, for every shot is a separate problem. In the first place the speed of individual birds varies greatly. A teal putting on the brakes to drop into your decoys may be going thirty miles or less an hour; you may miss him with the first barrel and he will clear out at the rate of something like 110 miles an hour.

A canvas back or blue bill can loaf along at a fifty mile gait or double that if he is scared. Saying nothing of the variety of angles and positions one shoots, the supposed speed of birds are estimates only, comparative rather than actual, and do not consider wind, fright and other things that add to a bird's speed. For instance, here is a much quoted table of the flight of birds:

	Miles per hr.
Crow, mallard, black duck, shoveler.....	40
Pintail	50
Wood duck, widgeon, gadwall	60
Red head, green winged and blue winged teals	90
Blue bill	95
Canvas back	100
Sparrow	70
Wild goose	80

Being estimates, such tables are subject to controversy. Many hunters will not credit the crow with as much speed as a shoveler, the sparrow with almost twice as much as the mallard, nor the widgeon half again as much as the black duck. On the other hand, this table is better than some in crediting the blue bill, canvas back, and wild goose with high velocity, as most of us are inclined to underestimate the speed of these birds.

Even if the exact speed of all birds could be ascertained scientifically, the knowledge would be of little practical value to the man or boy ambitious to learn wing shooting, for shooting on the wing is an art—a science—an art in which eye, brain, and gun must coördinate and each bird is hit or missed in the fraction of a second.

For this reason figures and calculations are of little value, but here are a few hints that may help the beginner or correct shooting faults of those who aim with too much regularity.

Shoot with both eyes open. Those who are used to rifle shooting usually shut one eye when shooting a shotgun, but they should break themselves of the habit which they can do by a little simple practice.

Sit in a chair and swing the gun (not loaded, of course) at a picture on the wall, the door knob, or any small object. Stop the swing when the object is "on" the imaginary target.

Verify the accuracy of your aim when you come to a stop, by sighting along the barrel with one eye closed, or fashion. At first you may find you are aiming poorly or you may see two distinct targets, and a blur at the end of your barrel, but a few minutes of practice will correct this.

This practice should not be continued too long, or it will breed a habit of accounts for most misses on birds crossing across one's line of fire. The best way to hit a crossing bird is to shoot after him and pull the trigger while you are swinging. The tenderfoot will stop swinging as soon as the gun is on the bird and immediately before the instant the trigger is pulled. The result: The bird is past your gun. In fact, it can be set down as a certainty that in shooting at crossing birds six out of ten misses are due to shooting behind the bird.

When a duck has cupped his wings and is coming into the decoys hold under him. Most misses at shots of this kind are due to shooting directly at the bird, the result being overshooting.

When a flock is almost into the decoys the young hunter is likely to get excited and blaze away into the flock. The way to overcome this is to make a practice of picking out one bird to shoot at. The method of handling the second shot at ducks that have dropped depends on the kind of birds.

Generally the young hunter shoots too low at birds getting out—in case of black ducks, for instance, as much as ten feet under; seldom does he overshoot in such instances.

When shooting at high flying birds the common mistake is to shoot behind. Generally it is good practice to keep on increasing the distance and lead them until you begin to make some hits.

CARUSO OF OAK PARK EMERGING FROM SCRIMMAGE AFTER A CROSS BUCK

Playing of "Rabbit" Back a Feature of Suburbanites' Victory Over Englewood for Cook County High School Football Title.

Capt. Mathis ENGLEWOOD — Capt. Hoff OAK PARK

OAK PARK PLAYS SAFE FOOTBALL TO LAND HONORS

Strong Line Breaks Up Englewood Formations, Says Eckersall.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

The victory of Oak Park over Englewood yesterday on Stagg field, 33 to 14, in a game which gave the suburbanites the Cook county high school championship, can be attributed to the strength of its line and a better knowledge of the fine points of the game.

A fast charging line always will make another team's offense look bad, and this is the main reason why the Purple and White backs were unable to make consistent headway. The Englewood plays were broken up before they had scarcely formed, with the result runners were downed without making much headway.

Mistake in Catching Ball.

At the start Englewood backs made the fatal mistake of trying to catch the wet, heavy ball, instead of playing safe. Neither team made an attempt to use the onside kick, and for this reason it would have been better to let the ball hit the ground, instead of attempting to catch it. As the game were on the Englewood backs improved in the handling of the ball, and if better judgment had been used at the start Oak Park might not have obtained its commanding lead.

Oak Park showed good football sense when it defended the north goal. A strong wind blew from the south, and the kickers were unable to punt the ball more than twenty yards against the gale. When Oak Park was in possession of the oval in its territory it ran the ball for three downs and did not punt until the fourth down, and then only when the distance was too great to risk an attempt to make it by straight playing. Oak Park had an advantage, and it played the game safe on its margin.

Tacklers Not Sure of Man.

Players on both teams failed to make sure of their man on a number of occasions. This is to be expected in prep school football. Once Steger, Oak Park half back, got loose off Englewood's left tackle, and on two occasions looked as if he was downed. He shoted out of holds, and finally got loose for a touchdown. Folz, Englewood's quarter back, ran through the Oak Park team for a touchdown after catching a punt. Like Steger, he was checked several times, but managed to get a fresh start.

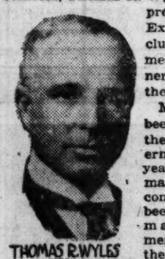
Oak Park's plays were executed in a sure, safe manner. The line and backfield possessed a coördination which resulted in gains most of the time. The shifts were timed perfectly, showing that plenty of effort had been devoted to perfecting the formations. The backs had the drive and picked their openings nicely.

Englewood Offense Ragged.

Englewood's offense was ragged most of the time. This was due to the line, which did not give the backs the necessary support. On a number of occasions the Purple and White backs were not set for their efforts and the players did not get into the plays with the drive which generally features an Englewood team.

With the exception of such points as permitting the ball to roll across the goal line on punts instead of downing it on the one yard line, failure of the ends to protect the sides of the field on kicks, and the all important feature of being in the vicinity of the ball at all times, the game was well played, considering conditions.

WYLES IS ELECTED EXMOOR PRESIDENT; NO POLICY CHANGE



THOMAS R. WYLES

Following a line of illustrious predecessors, Thomas R. Wyles was elected president of the Exmoor Country club at the annual meeting and dinner last night at the Midday club.

Mr. Wyles has been a member of the board of governors for five years and as chairman of the greens committee has been in charge of many improvements made on the course. These are still in progress and as head of the club President Wyles undoubtedly will continue the constructive policies of the former presidents. The other officers are:

Vice president—Ralph A. Bard.
Secretary treasurer—W. Bradshaw Egan.
Board of governors—Walter E. Egan, James L. Martin, J. D. Watkins.

Percy B. Eckhart, the retiring president, and James L. Martin, who has been secretary and treasurer for five years, were presented with pieces of plate in recognition of their labors.

Reports of the officers indicated one of the most prosperous seasons in the history of the club.

BOB O' LINK CLUB TO BE 1920 HOME OF PRO MAC DONALD

BOB MACDONALD

Bob MacDonald, formerly at Indian Hill and this year at Evanston, has been secured by the Bob o'Link club of Highland Park for next year.

Having passed the formative stage, the club a few weeks ago decided to secure a player of national reputation. Overtures were made to MacDonald, who, in addition to being a great golfer, rates as one of the best instructors in the country. Bob was quite at home at Evanston, but the inducement offered by Bob o'Link swung the balance in its favor, and the deal was closed.

MacDonald, who has been playing for twenty-six years, was born at Dornoch, Scotland, and early in his career was a florist. The lure of the links proved stronger than his love for flowers, and he joined the professional ranks. For seven years he was located in France. He has been in the United States ten years, holding positions at Cincinnati and Buffalo before coming here.

Bob expects to have his brother, William, with him at Bob o'Link. Previous to joining the United States army he was a "pro" in Texas. Another brother, Jack, who saw four years' service in the war as a member of the Seaforth Highlanders, expects to visit this country in the spring. Bill is 25 and Jack 22, and both are clever golfers.

This winter Bob plans to open a school in the loop district, and in the spring probably will pay a short visit to Florida, in company with Jock Hutchinson. Jock has renewed his contract with Glen View.

NOTED GOLF MAN VISITS NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 29.—[Special.]—There were no lines of worry on his face when Frank L. Woodward of Denver was seen in town tonight. The former president of the United States Golf association is here as a care free individual, unconcerned in an official way as to what might happen to the old game; though, of course, like all devotees, his general interest in golf remains as keen as ever.

When asked if rumors to the effect that the Western Golf association was going to stir up agitation over the stymie, besides planning other and more radical steps, Woodward smilingly shook his head.

In his opinion, the west is not excited over anything in a golf way, and he does not look for trouble at the coming meeting of the W. G. A.

The fifth round of the City Indoor Baseball league will be played this afternoon, the offering including the first double header of the year on the circuit, four clubs hooking up at St. Alphonsus' gym, while the Dodger Trainings lie idle. The league has failed to fill up the roster, caused by the defection of Hull House, and one team draws a bye each week. Games for today:

Vilas A. A. and East End Sportsmen, 2 p. m.; Polish Americans and Mezereon Reveres at St. Alphonsus gym.

Chicago Hebrew institute and Romeos at Battery B.

Opportunity A. A. and Central Turners at 2046 West North avenue.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

By A. R. METCALFE.

DOUBLING is the most dangerous feature in bridge. Except for beginners no definite rules can be formulated for this department. Against poor bidders doubling is immensely profitable, but few doubles win against a player whose bidding is sound.

One rule should always be observed: Never double an adversary out. If the bid made does not represent game a double should not be made unless its success is certain. Beware of doubles which may betray an honor in trumps. If that honor is one which may be captured.

As a general proposition, the best doubles are those which do not depend on trump tricks at all. The one which is illustrated in the following deal is of a very common type and should be carefully avoided.

THE HANDS.

S—K, Q, 8, 5, 3.
H—J, 10, 6.
C—5.
D—Q, J, 9, 3.

S—None.

H—Q, 4, 3.

D—A, 10, 8, 6, 5.

S—J, 10, 4, 2.
H—A, 8, 7.
C—J, 9, 8, 6.
D—7, 4.

Score 0-0. Rubber game. North dealt and bid one spade, east and south passed, west bid three clubs, north and east passed, south bid three spades, west and north passed, east bid four clubs, south doubled, west and north passed, east redoubled, and the bidding closed. North had the initial lead.

West secured eleven tricks.

The bidding by south was very bad. His support of his partner's spade bid was dubious but the double of four clubs was frightful.

East thought his partner would be able to make four clubs but really redoubled in the hope that the adversaries would bid another spade, which east intended to double.

The declarer said after the play that, except for the double by south, he would have led the king of clubs at trick two, put himself in with a diamond, and attempted to pick up the remaining trumps. Had he done this he could have made only four odd.

On account of the double, however, west did some thinking after the first trick and decided that south must be expecting to win one or more tricks in clubs. There was nothing else of importance that south could hold except the ace of hearts.

The declarer, therefore, altered his plans and immediately started to reduce his trumps to the same number as that held by south. West was thereby enabled to avoid leading a trump up to the guarded jack in the end play.

Not only did the double fail but the knowledge of the trump situation which it betrayed gave the declarer an extra trick. The cost of the double in this case was 546 points and the possible gain would have been only 100 points.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Wilmette, Ill.—To the Editor.—Will you please tell me the correct thing to do with the following combination of cards?

My partner holds the ace, king, 10 and four other spades, the ace, king, jack, and three others diamonds, and bids three spades. What is the correct thing for me to do holding ace, king, jack, and three other hearts, queen and one diamond, ace, queen, and three other clubs, and no spades?—L. W.

Ans.—You should have passed. Your partner's bid indicated that he did not need assistance in the trump suit and you had plenty of the other kind to insure game.

JOHNSON CALLS MEETING OF A. L. HERE ON DEC. 10

Split May Result, with Directors Booking Session at New York.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

President Johnson of the American league issued the official call yesterday for the annual meeting of the organization, designating Dec. 10 as the date and the Congress hotel in Chicago as the place.

Previously three directors of the American league, Messrs. Comiskey of Chicago, Ruppert of New York, and Frazee of Boston, had promulgated a call for the annual meeting to be held at the Biltmore hotel, New York, on the same date.

Split Five and Three.

It remains to be determined where the majority of the clubowners of the circuit will convene a week from Wednesday, but the preliminary lineup indicates there will be five clubs represented here and three in Gotham, giving the majority to the Chicago gathering.

As to the outcome of the affair President Johnson and Owner Comiskey both declined to talk yesterday, asserting that the issue would be determined next week.

Mitchell Goes East.

Manager Mitchell of the Cubs left yesterday for the old home farm in Massachusetts, to remain east until after the holidays. He will attend the annual meeting of the National league in New York next week with the avowed intention of attempting to strengthen the north side team by way of trades, then will return to the old homestead, near Boston, until the first of next year, when he expects to resume his Chicago citizenship.

FANS SHOW IRE AT INTENTIONAL PASS TO SLUGGER

Rules Need Revamping to Assure Rooters the Hitting They Crave.

BY BILLY EVANS.
(American League Umpire.)

Hitting is a feature of baseball that appeals most to fandom. The diamond enthusiast idolizes the player who can hit 'em a mile. That was why Babe Ruth almost over night jumped from the ranks of the ordinary to the most talked about individual in baseball.

"Babe" and his big bat just teemed with color, and the athlete who does things a bit differently draws them at the gate. All Ruth did last year that was different was to break a home run record for the majors that had stood thirty-five years.

In addition, at each American league park, one of the home runs that made possible the record stands out as the longest hit ever made at that park. So that now when some player makes a drive for the circuit, it will always be necessary to make a comparison with the hit Ruth made in 1919. That is, unless in 1920 Ruth comes through with wallops that will cause the 1919 efforts to fade.

Starts Slugging on Foreign Fields.

Since Ruth is a member of the Boston Red Sox, it is natural that followers of that team should have a particular interest in his batting efforts. It is rather strange that in 1918, when Ruth first showed symptoms of developing into one of the greatest clouters, all his home runs were made on other parks than at Boston. The best the Boston rooters got was to read about how the big fellow broke up a game with a timely wallop over the fence with a couple of men on.

Likewise, until this year Ruth never made a homer at Comiskey park in Chicago. He seldom hit them up to form when playing in Chicago. The fans there were a bit skeptical about his swatting ability, but last season Ruth hit a couple so hard at Chicago that every one present was convinced that as a slugger he is the last word.

Fans Kick on Intentional Passes.

Recently I received a letter from a Boston fan, which is typical of the feelings of many Bostonians on the point in question, the failure to see Ruth get a chance to hit, when nothing caused them to come to the game more than the thought that the big fellow might come through with one of his wallops. I refer to the intentional passing of Ruth.

Here is a part of the letter:

"Is there no solution to the intentional pass evil. It may be a mark of strategy to use it, but to me it is the one feature of baseball that disgusts. Last season, when Ruth was in one of his mad batting breaks, I attended a double header at Fenway park. Ordinarily double headers do not interest me. However, at this particular time, it was felt Ruth had an excellent chnace to break the home run record.

Waits to See Ruth.

"Despite the fact that it was a busy day for me, I left my office in time to reach the park by 2 o'clock, and stuck to the finish, although I was tempted to leave a half dozen times. I was not attracted by the bargain matinée, but by the belief that in two games I would probably get a chance to see Ruth in action.

"The first time up in the opening game, Ruth was given a chance to hit with two down and a runner on first base. His offering was one of the longest and tallest fly balls I have ever seen. It didn't go safe, but the visiting right fielder was forced to back up against the bleachers to make the catch. It was a mighty drive, and I must admit I almost got the price of admission out of that one swat.

"The next two or three times Ruth was up, runners were on the bases, the score was close and a timely drive by Ruth would just about have settled the game.

Cusses the Rules.

"Did he get an opportunity to give the spectators a thrill? He did not. In each instance the opposing pitcher threw the ball so wide, Ruth would have needed an extra long oar to have connected. I was disappointed each time.

"I didn't blame the opposing manager or pitcher, because I realized it was regarded as good baseball, but I did cuss the rules which permitted such action. Unless my memory is badly off, Ruth received five intentional passes in the two games, and once was hit by pitcher."

Good Solution Needed.

Owners and managers pay a fancy price for crack hitters, yet are unable to get value received because some pitcher refuses to throw the ball within hitting distance.

It has been suggested that all runners be allowed to move up one base on an intentional pass. Others have been more drastic, and insisted that if all runners were permitted to advance two bases the motive for using the intentional pass would be eliminated. Such a solution would make it necessary for the umpire to pass judgment on the intent.

To Accommodate Marmon Yearly Buyers

These cars were taken in exchange by us to accommodate our customers who buy new Marmons each year. Due to its stabilized design (which remains practically unchanged from year to year), the Marmon represents a stabilized investment.

This car, as all authorities know, leads in advanced engineering, and these rebuilt Marmons represent the type of construction that will rule the coming new cars of many makes.

The builders—Nordyke & Marmon Company—were awarded the championship pennant for building Liberty Motors, and their ideas and workmanship have always ranked at the top in the automotive industry.

The stability of Marmon value is further insured by the limited production of these cars and a demand that is always far in excess of the supply.

This is exactly the opportunity that many a man has been wanting—a chance to obtain a major class car at a price no higher than for a new car of a lower class without the style, service or stability of value that these beautiful rebuilt Marmon cars possess.

A Seasonable Suggestion

BUY an Air Cooled Car for winter driving, because it has no water to freeze—

No radiator with its multiplicity of connections and joints to get out of order and leak—

Nearly 200 less parts in the motor than in a water cooled car—

And, because it weighs hundreds of pounds less—

Offers riding comfort not obtainable in a heavy, rigidly built car by giving you full elliptic springs and a flexible chassis.

Every time you see alcohol or non-freeze solution advertised, remember that none of these freeze remedies are needed in an Air Cooled Car.

In the Holmes Four-passenger Roadster, winter protection against storms and winds is afforded by storm curtains that open with the doors and fit snugly to the top and to the body—enclosed car protection in an open car of superior design.

In winter driving, as in summer, Holmes operating costs show:

a gasoline economy of 18-20 miles to the gallon; a tire service of better than 10,000 miles to the set.

Proof:

that high operating costs are no longer necessary in a properly sized car; that the price of economy is no longer restricted seating capacity and cramped discomfort.

NOW is the Time to Buy a Paso Robles Almond Orchard to Make Sure of This Season's Planting

The scenes here shown are typical of almond tree planting as conducted on a vast scale by the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles, California. Throughout the past two years the young trees have been growing in nurseries under the watchful care of our Field Manager, Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, and his corps of experts. There are thousands of these young trees now ready for planting—every one of them budded from pedigreed stock, that is, from old trees of sturdy growth having an unbroken record of prolific crop yield for years past. During the past few months the soil has been under cultivation. It is now ready for the trees. You see them being taken from the nurseries direct to the orchard lands where they are set out in even rows—70 to the acre—every tree planted approximately the same depth and with scientific exactness.

You Can Still Get In On This Season's Planting If You Act Quickly

Don't put off making your reservation. Do it now. Get in for this season's planting. Your almond profits will begin coming your way just that much sooner. Remember, under no circumstances will we plant what are known as "commercial" trees. It is as much to our interest as it is to the buyer's that the high standard of our almond orchards be maintained. This standard is the highest and most uniform ever attained in the almond-growing industry. By planting inferior trees we would lower that standard and that is something we positively will not do. Only trees that are nursery grown under Mr. Nehrhood's personal supervision and that he can personally vouch for can find a place in one of our almond orchards.

Any day now we are expecting word advising us that the supply of trees for this season's planting is exhausted. When that word comes, the "lid will be on" so far as this season's planting is concerned. Therefore we cannot impress upon you too strongly the absolute necessity of making your reservation at once—this week, if possible—so that your trees will be planted this season. You will be many dollars ahead by doing so.

Did You Hear Mr. Nehrhood Speak at Lyon & Healy Hall Last Week?

Those of you who were fortunate enough to hear one of Mr. Nehrhood's lectures while he was in Chicago last week do not need further proof of the big profits that almond growers in the Paso Robles district are now making. Neither do those of you who are contemplating buying one or more of our 10-acre orchards need any further urging as to the necessity of making your reservations at once. You were convinced by his plain statement of facts and you will act accordingly. Those of you who were not so fortunate as to hear Mr. Nehrhood should have these facts driven home to you in such a way that you cannot forget them.

The reason why you should come in with us NOW and make your reservation without further delay has fully been explained.

Don't run the risk of being disappointed as so many were last season who kept putting it off from day to day until it was too late for last season's planting. True, they bought just the same, but they have been waiting a whole year now before getting action on their investment.

$2500 to $3000 a Year for Life from 10 Acres of Almonds

There is absolutely no question regarding the big profits to be made in almond growing in the Paso Robles district. A yearly income of from $2500 to $3000 is a very conservative estimate from a 10-acre orchard. There have been those who were skeptical—who refused to believe our plain statements of facts regarding the rapidity with which almond trees, planted and cared for by our experts, come into bearing. Not until they went to Paso Robles and made a personal investigation were they convinced. Many who were the most skeptical bought one or more of our 10-acre tracts and have written or wired us that we have been too conservative in our claims.

It is true. We have purposely under-estimated the wonderful possibilities of almond growing at Paso Robles. We want every buyer of one of these orchards to be more than satisfied. We want them to feel absolutely sure that they have made the best, biggest dividend paying investment to be found anywhere. For instance, we make the modest claim of 4 lbs. of nuts from 4-year-old trees and an average of 20 lbs. from trees when 8 years old. Now read this clipping from the Paso Robles Press, dated Nov. 4, 1919:

ALMOND PRODUCTION FROM FOUR-YEAR-OLD TREES

Probably the best record made in this state from young almond trees was made this year by Harry Campbell on his orchard just west of the city limits near Merry Hill. Mr. Campbell harvested 1950 lbs. from less than 2 acres of 4-year-old trees. His best yielding Nonpareil tree produced 23 lbs., a Texas produced 37 lbs. and a Drake gave the largest yield in 38 lbs.

In the face of those figures our estimates do seem rather insignificant. And yet our very conservative estimate shows this: 70 trees to the acre—700 trees to a 10-acre orchard. A yield of 20 pounds per tree—14,000 pounds from 10 acres. Last year's price was 25c per pound. Total revenue $3,500. Deduct from this the very liberal amount of $50.00 an acre for cultivating, pruning, harvesting and marketing the crop and you have a net profit of $3000. And you haven't done a single stroke of work on the orchard during the entire operation!

This estimate is too low. This year almonds sold for from 30½ cents to 32½ cents a pound instead of 25 cents. Instead of 20 pounds per tree the yield is nearer 25 to 30 pounds. Just figure these increased profits for yourself.

Not a Crop Failure in 35 Years

There are almond trees in the Paso Robles district upwards of 35 years of age that have averaged more than 200 pounds of nuts per year for several years past. Where trees have been properly located there has not been a crop failure for 35 years. The adobe soil is highly impregnated with sea marl, which contains lime and potash—the two elements that are necessary for sturdy tree growth and heavy crop yield. It is soil that requires neither irrigation nor fertilizing. It is not subject to erosion. The ideal soil and climatic conditions which prevail here, combined with the choice pedigreed stock we plant and the scientific care given them by our experts, explain why the crops are so heavy and of the very finest quality. Paso Robles almonds always command fancy prices.

Easy Monthly Payment Plan

Your future welfare is your first consideration. You want to look forward to the time when you do not need to work hard to make a living—when you can take things easy and enjoy the things worth living for. Can you hope to lay enough aside each year from your present income to assure for yourself an income of from $2500 to $3000 a year for life? Do you realize that this would mean the investment of from $50,000 to $60,000 in gilt-edged 5% to 6% securities?

By coming in with us on this big almond development plan you can invest a mere fraction of that amount with the assurance of the same—yes, even better results. And you can do it by making only a moderate payment down and paying a part of the balance in small monthly payments. You pay only half the purchase price in cash. We will accept payment for the balance out of the crops from your orchard. This means that we must bring your orchard up to a profit-making basis before we are fully paid for it. Where do you stand a chance to lose?

Your Interests Safeguarded

Yes, at every point. Upon completion of your contract we guarantee to turn over to you a full stand of 700 almond trees such as we have described. One of the largest Trust Companies on the Pacific Coast is custodian of the development fund for all the work done on your orchard and delivers to you deed and title to the property upon completion of your contract.

Additional Profits from Increase of Land Values

Your profit of $2,500 to $3,000 a year is only part of the revenue from one of these 10-acre almond orchards. From the day it is planted the land value begins to rise. It continues to increase in value at the rate of about $100 an acre for from 12 to 15 years. If, therefore, after the completion of your contract you should at any time wish to sell you could do so at a big advance over your contract price. In other words, you can safely figure on $1,000 a year net profit on ten acres represented by the value increase in addition to the crop profit of from $2,500 to $3,000 a year.

$478,162 CASH SHOWS COUNTY SANTA EXISTS

Record Public Interest Fund Is Turned Over by the Treasurer.

Santa Claus dropped down Cook county's chimney a few weeks ahead of time yesterday. Through County Treasurer Harry R. Gibbons he stuffed $478,162 in interest into the capacious sock of the people, the amount being earnings from bank depositaries on public funds for the fiscal year 1919.

This amount exceeds by $177,627 the interest returned in 1918 by Mr. Gibbons' predecessor, Henry Stuckart. In the last year of William L. O'Connell's term as county treasurer the interest payment was $189,286; John R. Thompson, 1910, $124,227, and John J. Hänberg, 1906, $88,133. In the old days the treasurer retained all the interest money.

The treasurer's report was made to a special meeting of the county board in advance of the annual meeting to be held tomorrow. On motion of Commissioner Robert W. McKinlay, a committee consisting of Commissioners Daniel Ryan, chairman of the finance committee, Frank J. Wilson, and Joseph Carolan was appointed to consider the report.

Remittance Is Surprise.

This remittance on the part of the treasurer came as a surprise. A new law required that he advertise for public repository bids after Oct. 1, but he reported he had gone even further back and had made his return dating from Jan. 1 last.

County funds are scattered in about 100 banks and have been earning 3 per cent in the main. A few accounts earn 3½ and 3¾ per cent annually. All of this interest money was earned upon the active funds of the county, comprising about 95 per cent of the funds in its money chest.

County Gets $750,000 More.

Seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars of delinquent tax money has been turned over to the county treasurer through the activities of State's Attorney Hoyne. This money has been collected through direct pressure and court agency. Amounts running from $15 to tens of thousands of dollars have been paid, some of it by corporations and big firms which have been on the books of the county treasurer for years.

Nearly 1,000 suits were filed in the Circuit and Municipal courts. All of the amounts collected were for personal property assessments, and many suits are pending.

Michael F. Sullivan, assistant state's attorney assigned to the civil branch of the state's attorney's office, a bureau in the county building, expressed regret that a judge of the Circuit court has not been assigned to take care of tax suits exclusively.

Look for $1,000,000.

Many cases are assigned to Judge Baldwin, but other suits docketed to him have interfered with the work. It is said that the end of the year will witness the collecton of upwards of $1,000,000. Many of these tax bills which were passed along to the present treasurer by predecessors were listed as "desperate."

The state's attorney is going back about twenty years to collect forfeitures under real estate bonds, and all who have escaped thus far have been warned by him that a settlement must be made. Many bondsmen have imagined themselves secure from molestation, and the net result of their indifference will be a big financial gain for the county.

DANCE

Teams Picked to Sell Tickets for U. of C. Party.

Miss Gladys Nyman and James Mount Nicely

Small profit and big volume is the scale on which the thirteenth annual settlement dance is to be conducted at the University of Chicago this year, the proceeds of which go toward the maintenance of the University settlement at the stockyards. It will be held on Dec. 13. The general committee is headed by James M. Nicely, with Miss Gladys Nyman as his assistant.

As in former years, teams have been selected to compete in the sale of tickets and from all indications the "drive," is destined to surpass all former efforts.

Regardless of the H. C. of L., the ticket price remains unchanged, but in order to offset the deflated dollar the sale of 1,800 tickets has been set as a goal. The dance will be held in the Mandel Hall group of buildings, where five orchestras will supply the music. Two vaudeville shows are also scheduled.

Newsie Saves Woman from Husband's Knife; 2 Seized

Mrs. Harold Carr, 21 years old, 1213 North Dearborn street, screamed yesterday when her husband attempted to attack her with a pen knife at Clark and Division streets, and Fred Dunbar, a newsboy, 1440 West Division street, responded with a revolver. He pulled the trigger twice, but it failed to explode. A policeman arrived. Both men were arrested. Mrs. Carr was released.

FEDERAL REPORT SEVERE BLOW TO DRAINAGE CANAL

War Department Is Opposed to the Plan Used Here.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Operations of the Chicago sanitary district are criticised in the annual report of the chief engineers of the war department, made public today. The accusations against the district, its withdrawal of what is declared to be an excessive amount of water from Lake Michigan, and its faulty methods for the disposal of sewage, which have characterized the annual reports of the chief of engineers for several years, are renewed.

"From the beginning, the operations of the sanitary district of Chicago have been looked on with disfavor by navigation interests, and questions connected therewith have been constantly before the department," the report says. "The reversal of the flow of the Chicago river and the drawing of water into the drainage canal affects navigation seriously on account of the tendency to lower the levels of the great lakes, and also for the reason that current velocities in the river and its branches are materially increased.

Limit on the Diversion.

"These injurious effects were clearly foreseen by the department, and hence the diversion has been restricted to the amount stated, and the secretary of war has not only declined to increase the amount, but has consistently adhered to the position that the permit granted was to be considered of a temporary character, and that any permanent diversion of the waters of Lake Michigan into another watershed required congressional authority.

"Although the secretary of war has fixed the limit of permitted diversion of 4,167 second-feet and has repeatedly refused to grant any increase, it is known that the sanitary district has for many years been withdrawing a much larger amount of water. In fact, while this state organization has been prayerful as well as persistent in its applications to the department, it has shown little regard for the decisions of the secretary of war."

Seeks an Early Decision.

The report recites that the pending suits against the district for the withdrawal of an excessive amount of water have been awaiting decision of Judge Landis for a long time and that "it would appear desirable that every proper means be used to expedite the decision of the court."

"The present average daily flow through the Chicago river into this canal is about 8,500 cubic feet per second, or practically double the amount allowable under the permit of the secretary of war," the report continues. "This represents a daily average withdrawal from Lake Michigan of more than 860,000 cubic feet, which is more than the entire low water flow of the Mississippi river at St. Paul. The continuous withdrawal of this volume of water will result in the permanent lowering of the surface of Lakes Michigan and Huron by more than five inches and of Lake Erie to nearly the same extent.

Sewage Disposal Wrong.

"Modern expert opinion is to the effect that the disposal of sewage by dilution in the manner practiced by the Chicago sanitary district is not economical, efficient, or in keeping with the public spirit that should direct undertakings of this kind, and the present practice is to apply some form of treatment to the sewage which shall remove its more offensive characteristics before it is released and permitted to flow past the water fronts of nearby communities.

"Much complaint has been made in the Illinois river valley concerning the defilement of the river banks by the discharge of the drainage canal and there is good ground to believe the complaint well founded."

ECHOES

New York, Nov. 29.—The hunger strike of the "Ellis island soviet" was broken today. All but five of the sixty-eight radicals who had refused to eat since last Monday evening eagerly answered the call to the dining room for breakfast.

UTILITIES BOARD RETAINS NICKEL PHONE SCHEDULE

Burleson Rate Rejected; Company Wins Few Points.

The Chicago Telephone company was refused permission yesterday to return to the schedule of rates installed by Postmaster General Burleson while the government held control of the lines and amended in part by the public utilities commission after the wires were restored to their owners' hands.

The commission at that time reduced the Burleson four party line guarantee from $2 to $1.50 a month, thereby keeping in vogue the nickle a day system; eliminated the charge for installing telephones, and abolished the charge for a "person-to-person" toll call, when the party asked for was not reached.

Points Favoring Company.

The order yesterday sanctioned such a charge in connection with "person-to-person" calls and also released to the company a portion of all toll revenues which previously it had ordered impounded. The fund represented the difference between the Burleson rates and the old pre-war schedule—from 15 to 20 per cent. It was ordered kept apart until the commission determined whether increased costs of service justified the additional charge. Yesterday's edict did not pass upon that question, but set forth:

"The release of the funds impounded is in view of the admitted solvency of the petitioner (the company) and its ability to respond to a reparation order."

Installation Charges.

The application of the company to make a $3.50 installation charge is denied, but a graduated scale of fees for changes in the location of phones if not "required for the proper maintenance of the equipment or service or a change in the class or grade of service" is provided.

The commission's new order will remain in force, subject to further modification, until the complete revaluation of the company's property now in progress has been completed.

350 days of sunshine

—nearly fifty weeks of each year, all told, when the sun sparkles each day on ocean, bay and city, make life a holiday in San Diego, California.

Roses, in January as in June, garland green lawns and miles of charming homes where the geraniums climb to the eaves.

In the great park, daily audiences assemble to enjoy the harmonies of the afternoon recital on the great out-of-door pipe-organ, overlooking ocean and bay, and here a million gorgeous flowers glow against the green of trees and shrubs from every climate in the world.

The warships of the fleet, Point Loma, the city's portal to the ocean, Old Mexico, but seventeen miles distant, and a thousand vistas among upland valleys and mountain passes traversed by more than four hundred miles of superb boulevards, offer innumerable opportunities for recreation and make this the ideal city in which to establish your permanent home.

The United States Government is spending more than twenty million dollars in San Diego in permanent stations for its air, land and sea forces, because official tests have proved the advantages, in comfort and efficiency, of its equable climate and continuous sunshine.

This booklet tells why. Sign the coupon and get it free by return mail.

Through Pullman service between San Diego and Chicago on the New San Diego and Arizona Railway, in connection with the Rock Island and Southern Pacific, commences December 10, 1919. A delightful trip in winter months through mild climate and new and interesting country.

ACT TO ORGANIZE NAVAL RESERVE AS MOBILE BODY

Plan to Test Readiness of 350,000 Men for Quick Action.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels' declaration that "a trained reserve of week to man every ship in the United 350,000 men can be called out in one States navy," is to be tested by a plan to organize the United States naval reserve force on shore into a mobile fighting body. Letters outlining the plan are being sent to all naval reservists in the Great Lakes districts from the Great Lakes Naval Training station this week.

According to the letters, signed by Rear Admiral Frederic B. Bassett, commandant of the 9th, 10th, and 11th naval districts, with headquarters at Great Lakes, "the personnel will be organized and assigned to various units within the district for the purpose of mobilization, training, and drill; in general, the reserves will be organized into sections, divisions, battalions, and brigades, depending upon the number of men in the particular geographical locality."

Similar to Old Militia.

Under the plan, the naval reserves, men who volunteered for service during the war and for reserve duty after the war for four years from the date of their enlistments, will be placed on practically the same basis as the old state naval militia organizations. All reservists in the various districts must be attached to some unit, according to the outline. "Divisions" are to be formed in the smaller centers, with "battalions" in the important cities having sufficient personnel. Each district's divisions and battalions will compose a brigade, which will bear the number of the district.

But the success of the plan, unless helpful legislation is forthcoming from congress, will depend solely upon the loyalty and patriotism of the reservationists.

Bassett's Letter Explains.

At present reservists cannot be recalled for duty of any sort except in case of national emergency, as indicated by the closing paragraph of Rear Admiral Bassett's letter. This says:

"Although the act approved July 11, 1919, provided that 'During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, no member of the naval reserve force shall be recalled to active duty for training or for any purpose except as heretofore provided,' it is believed that many of the reserves are anxious to become identified with the particular unit in their locality and will report voluntarily for instructions."

The offer of enlistment in the regular navy is being held out to all reservists with the bonus of four months' wartime pay and a thirty day leave before reporting for duty, the enlistment to be only for the remainder of the reservist's four year enrollment. All recruiting stations have been instructed to canvass all reserves on this offer.

CROOK DEFRAUDS CHARITIES WITH A NEW 'CON' GAME

Victimizes Women by Leaving "Legacy" and Asking Aid.

Kind hearted women who are giving their services to charitable institutions are hereby warned against a short, stocky, prosperous looking individual of about 40. He belongs to the species of faint hearted crook who is afraid to tackle a real "job" where there is danger of meeting men.

Several weeks ago he approached the matron of the Norwegian Lutheran Deaconess home and hospital at 1138 North Leavitt street. In his hand was a large envelope.

"My name's Louis Gagnon," he said. "When my mother died in Toledo recently she left her estate to me—all but $1,000, which was to go to your hospital. This envelope contains $125 in cash and an insurance policy for the balance."

Women Are Impressed.

His manner was suave and the good women of the institution were agreeably impressed. Within a few minutes they were listening to his hard luck story with sympathetic ears. He owed a priest for several weeks' lodging, he said, and the priest was holding his baggage till the day of reckoning. He needed only $12 to salvage his property. He got it.

When the women inspected the envelope they found it was to be opened only in the presence of several persons, some of whom were in Toledo. Their attorney wrote to the "witnesses" and "notary" in the Ohio town. Receiving no reply, the envelope was opened. It contained a scrap of newspaper.

Victimizes Home for Girls.

A few days after his appearance on the north side, Louis Gagnon presented himself at the Chicago Home for Girls, 5024 Indiana avenue.

"He pulled the same stunt there," said Attorney Elmer E. Jackson. "I don't remember the name he used, except that it was Louis somebody of Toledo. He got about $10 or $15.

FLYNN CHARGES FALSE ARREST IN COAL CASE; TO SUE

Mortimer L. Flynn of the Pottinger-Flynn Coal company, which holds numerous city, federal, and department store contracts, announced yesterday that he would proceed with a suit for false arrest against the Chicago Retail Coal bureau and the James H. McQueeny Investigating agency.

The latter caused his arrest several months ago on a charge that the firm conspired with William J. Brown, engineer for the Mid-City Bank building, Madison and Halsted streets, so that the latter signed receipts for coal which was never delivered. Brown and J. D. Hanrahan, scale clerk for the Pottinger-Flynn firm, also were taken in custody, but all were subsequently discharged.

"The statement attributed to McQueeny that Hanrahan confessed to passing bogus delivery slips is false," said Flynn. "Hanrahan vouches for the slips' authenticity."

The scale clerk made a similar statement.

Flynn also accused Robert H. May, secretary of the bureau, assisting the federal fuel committee to make allotments in the existing mine crisis of attempting to "job him."

"Flynn's firm has been dealt with no better and no worse than any other," May declared.

McQueeny said he would welcome Flynn's suit.

MAN WHO KILLED 2 AND WOUNDED 2 ORDERED TO DIE

Raffaelo Durage, alias Rafael Durazzio, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Oscar Hebel in the Criminal court to be hanged Dec. 19 for committing a double murder and shooting two other persons.

Durage on July 21 shot and killed Onofrio Gargano and his wife, Mary, who had a grocery at 1103 Lytle street. He shot and wounded Joseph Gargano, a brother of the deceased, and James Santoro.

Durage roomed with the Garganos, and when they asked him to move a quarrel took place and the defendant left the store. He returned a few hours later and shot and killed the grocer, who was in a rear room. When his wife went to his assistance he shot and killed her, and when the other men went to the rear room they, too, were shot.

Evanston Men Arrested Under Child Labor Law

George Lindemann, deputy state factory inspector, caused the arrest yesterday of three Evanston business men on the charge that they had violated the Illinois child labor laws by employing children between 14 and 16 years without school certificates. The men arrested were John V. Lee, 901 Chicago avenue, a druggist; John Anton, 900 Chicago avenue, confectioner, and R. L. Leffingwell, 847 Chicago avenue, a druggist.

Posing as U. S. Officer, He Gets Into U. S. Clutches

Carl W. Schneider, former Green Bay and Milwaukee newspaper man, was arrested in Evanston last Monday on a charge of impersonating a government officer. Schneider registered at the North Shore hotel on Nov. 19 as J. E Murray, and is alleged to have posed as a government agent. The federal authorities were notified. They will take Schneider back to Milwaukee for violation of parole on which he was placed several months ago for embezzlement.

Heartless Police Foil Boys' Great Indian Hunt

Plans of Graham Urban, 10 years old, 431 Greenleaf avenue, and Theodore Coffin, 9 years old, 1603 Central avenue, Wilmette, to go west and shoot Indians "like Buffalo Bill," were frustrated yesterday afternoon when Detective Sergeant Arthur Johnson of the Evanston police caught the boys in a store, making preparations by slipping glass pistols, tallow candles, tops, and other toys into a large handbag.

"We talked it over in a barn back of my house," explained Theodore. "I guess we wouldn't get very far, though. It took us an hour and a half to walk from Wilmette to Evanston. We'd ought to have horses."

The $6 worth of pilfered merchandise was returned to the store and the manager let the matter drop. The boys' parents took their sons home.

Boy Is Shot in Arm as Others Practice with Gun

Ignatius Jincoloski, 17 years old, 3137 Normal avenue, was passing a vacant block at West Thirty-third street and Shields avenue, last night when he heard the report of a rifle and felt the sting of a bullet in his left arm. The Police are seeking several boys who were said to be practicing with a rifle in the neighborhood.

Seven Alleged Plotters in Clothing Case Get Bail

The seven officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America who were indicted Wednesday by the grand jury on a charge of conspiracy were released yesterday by Judge Robert E. Cr[illegible] on bonds of $3,500 each.

ELEVEN GOVERNORS MAKE APPEAL FOR RED CROSS SEALS

The following appeal, signed by the governors of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota, Missouri, and Wisconsin, and addressed to "the 31,000,000 people in the Mississippi Valley," was issued yesterday by the Chicago Tuberculosis institute:

"Upward of 400,000 of our neighbors—men, women and children—now living in the north Mississippi valley states have been stricken with tuberculosis.

"These friends of ours are dying at the rate of approximately 40,000 annually.

"Through lack of means to enforce well established methods for the control of this disease, thousands of new victims are being added year by year.

"With the funds derived through the sale of Red Cross Seals in former years, volunteer agencies have achieved noteworthy results in bringing about a reduction in the number of deaths and thousands of wage earners have been restored to health. An incalculable amount of human misery has been prevented through the sale of Red Cross Seals at a penny apiece.

"But there is much work yet to do; more than many of us realize. Unless we earnestly support it this great life saving movement will fail of its object. It must not fail. Far too many lives—lives of our own people—are at stake.

"The annual sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals and Health Bonds begins Dec. 1.

"We, therefore, call upon the people of our respective states to give freely—both in money and in helpful service—to this great humanitarian cause."

Tim Murphy "All Set" to Get That Gashouse Raise

Tim Murphy, president of the new Gashouse Workers' union, was angry yesterday when he learned the public knew of his union and of his plans to demand a 33 1-3 per cent increase in wages from the company next week.

"I wish you had waited until Tuesday and then I could have given you a lot more information," he said to a reporter. "But I don't care what you write. Go ahead and tell them that a lot of the eggs are working nine hours a day for $3.29. You forgot that.

"We are going over to the gas company Tuesday at 11 o'clock to ask for a raise, but we are not going to take any 'bull' from them. The men want to strike if they give us a lot of 'bull' and no more money, and I can't keep those 'eggs' from doing it, either."

THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA
Furnishes Accurate Knowledge On Every Subject Under the Sun

The World's Greatest Authority

THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA contains what is probably the best and most reliable information written by the greatest experts on practically every subject known to the human mind. No matter what subject you are interested in, no matter what subject your family or your children are interested in, no matter what subject comes up in your daily papers or your books, you will find that the Britannica gives the most comprehensive information on that subject in its 44,000,000 words. Every phase of a subject is covered. Even the smallest, most obscure information is here in the Britannica, as well as the articles on the great general subjects.

When you read an article in the Encyclopaedia Britannica you feel confident that the information you are obtaining is reliable, for the Britannica was written by the wisest minds of the day, each a specialist in the particular subject upon which he has furnished an article for the Britannica. These writers are either professors in the great institutions of learning in our country and other countries, or are scientific and professional men and women who, by their superior intelligence and research, have acquired far advanced knowledge of their subjects, or, again, they are the great workers of the world—merchants, financiers and practical artisans—who have in many cases achieved startling success in their particular lines of work. They write in a clear, concise manner which every member of your family can understand. You will be surprised how interesting and fascinating are the articles in the Britannica, and you will have many hours of profit and pleasure from a set of this great work.

Your Country Needs Your Help in the Solution of the Great Problems Left by the War

We are now in a period of reconstruction in America as well as Europe. We must reconstruct and modify our industrial, social and political life to meet the new conditions as a result of the war.

The gravest questions that ever confronted a nation must now be met, and you will have to help settle these questions as a citizen of a democracy. For example: Shall we retain our high tariff or shall we operate on a free trade basis? Shall we wipe out our enormous national debt in one or two generations or shall we extend it over a comparatively long period? Shall we adopt universal training or maintain a large standing army? Shall we place under permanent Federal control the railroads, telephone, telegraph and express companies or shall we keep them under private ownership? Shall this nation become more autocratic or tend toward Socialism? What will mean the greatest prosperity and happiness to the people?

These questions deeply concern you. A citizen today who is informed and is able to talk intelligently on problems of national importance will be sought out for his advice, and he is certain to play a large part in the solution of these questions.

There is no work that will give you the amount of reliable, accurate information so readily accessible as the great Encyclopaedia Britannica. The Britannica for a century and a half has been the basis of the reading, the very foundation of the knowledge on which the leading men, the statesmen of each generation have based their judgment for the solution of the nation l problems of their day. You, as a citizen of this great nation, living in the day of the greatest crisis of its history, should do no less than put yourself in a position adequately to answer and pass intelligent judgment on the questions that are so vital to the country and the happiness and welfare of its people.

Give Your Child a Fair Chance in the World

Who are the men and women in each generation who have stood head and shoulders above their fellow men and who have won the most notable success? They are the men and women who, as children, have educated themselves beyond the station to which they were born. Abraham Lincoln was the best educated lawyer in his town, and he continued throughout his life probably the best posted man in his generation, because he read and read and read. You insist that your child has brains, but you should help that child develop his brains, and give him every advantage possible within your means, so that when he becomes ready to go out to do his work in the world, he is not handicapped by lack of education. Your son or daughter may be handicapped by lack of money, but no educated man or woman considers the lack of money a serious handicap. What he or she does fear, however, and rightly, is the lack of education. Education is the path that leads to achievement, to a larger life and to greater success. Put in your child's hands the Encyclopaedia Britannica, the world's storehouse of knowledge, which has been the guide to the education of millions of men and women. It will inspire your child to learn, and it will furnish him with a great teacher on many thousands of subjects.

TREATY CLAUSE SAID TO INVITE SLAV-JEW WAR

Compulsory German and Yiddish in Schools Angers Poland.

BY FRANK COMERFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.

WARSAW, Nov. 3.—My study of the Jewish question in Poland has convinced me that the use of the German language almost entirely by the Jews is keeping alive the growing prejudice and preventing all chance of harmonious living together. Whether justified or not, whether it is Christian or not, the Poles hate the Germans with all the power of their beings. It is more than a lip hate; it is a heart hate and a head hate.

While France and England are trading with Germany Poland refuses to do any business with Germany and has closed her frontiers against all German goods. The people of Poland willingly pay from 20 to 25 per cent more for the same article from France and England than they could buy it for from Germany. They fear the German hyphen as we feared it during the early days of the war.

Teaching of German.

While many questions affecting Poland have been decided by the Paris peace table in a way not to the liking of the people of Poland, I have heard only one bitter criticism in resentment of the Paris peace table here, and I have heard it everywhere: it is a resentment against the decision compelling the Polish people to teach German or Yiddish in the public schools.

This decision was made by the peace conference on the petition of American Jews, and from the point of future harmony between Jews and Gentiles in Poland I think it is a most serious mistake. Even more, I am firmly convinced that unless this command to Poland is repealed, anti-Semitic feeling will lead to a race war which will spread throughout the entire Slav world, for it must be remembered that in Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, and Russia we have the same discord. One great step toward peace would be a movement on the part of the Jews to speak the language of the country of their home and become active in the patriotic movements of their country.

War Against Bolshevism.

Another fact that must be considered if one is to understand the Jewish problem in Poland is that Poland is the one nation actively at war against bolshevism. Polish troops, 350,000 of them, stand between bolshevik Russia and Europe. Poland knows the danger of the bolshevik agitator and it is bending every effort to prevent the revolutionary propagandists from setting fire to the democratic house she is building.

The teachers closed their annual convention yesterday at Lake View High school after outlining a new curriculum for prep school mathematics and demonstrating various tests.

FIND SYNAGOGUE CARETAKER AND WIFE OVERCOME

Worshipers at a Jewish synagogue at 1521 Washburne avenue assembled yesterday morning for devotion, but the doors of the institution were closed. Members of the congregation began wondering why Harry Greenberg, 70 years old, the caretaker, did not appear. He lives above the synagogue with his wife, Anna, 68 years old.

At 8:30 o'clock Ald. James McNichols of the Tenth ward, who lives at 1321 Washburne avenue, passed on his way to the city hall.

The situation was made known to him. He broke into the flat. The aged caretaker and his wife were lying unconscious on their bed. The room was filled with coal gas. Fumes were escaping from a small heater.

Ald. McNichols called an ambulance, and the old man and his wife were taaken to the county hospital.

City and County Try to Get Together on Debt

An attempt to arrive at a settlement of the city's claims against the county, amounting to $1,157,209, for board of county prisoners fed at the city's expense, inspection charges and claims for taxes against the county hospital will be made this week. County Commissioners Goodnow, Ryan, and Maclean will meet with Ald. Schwartz, Woodhull, and Watson on Wednesday to discuss the claims, many of which are of long standing, with the hope that a cash settlement can be reached.

Michael Jaeger, 31 years old, a boilermaker, One Hundred and Fifty-fourth street and Park avenue, Harvey, Ill., was electrocuted yesterday in the Chicago Steel company shops in Harvey, where he was employed. BULLET NICKED-WALLS TELL RED HORROR AT KIEFF Slight Offenders by Hundreds Stripped and Sent Into Stable to Die.

BY LADISLAV CZAPSKI.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

The following was written while Gen. Denikine's troops held Kieff. They have been driven out by the Ukrainians under Petlura.

KIEFF, Oct. 10.—So long as there was no immediate danger of the bolsheviki losing Kieff, the Tschresvychaika, or committees to combat counter revolutionary activity, took their time, killing their suspects one by one and burying the bodies separately. Then the volunteers on one side and the Petlurists on the other, came ominously close to the capital, rousing panic among the chief commissaries of the Ukraine. Hundreds of the hostages held in the "internment camps" in Kieff were hastily dispatched northward, but other hundreds remained, and these were killed off at once.

No Evidence of Guilt.

I have seen some of the tribunal's dossiers, consisting for the most part of one sheet of paper, with not a single word of evidence to prove the offense imputed to the victim.

"Having considered the case of So and So, we have decided to have him shot," has been the usual formula jotted down, frequently in pencil, on the charge sheet, with the signature of only one of the members of the tribunal figuring under it.

Stripped naked, the victims were led out of the house through the back door, and before them yawned the door of the stable, grimmest of all spots in grim Kieff. Here "Rosa the Pock Marked," after her transfer from Poltava to the Tschresvychaika in Kieff, used to come of nights to satisfy her passion for bloodshed, until her own fellow criminals got to mention her name with a shudder. But generally the Chinese did the work, a loaded rifle to each man or woman lined up against the brick wall.

Twenty at a Time.

Batches of as many as twenty persons were handled in this way at a time, one entire wall and half the length of another being thickly studded with bullet nicks at about the height of a man's head. Bullets aimed at the heart have left a distinct trail lower and roughly parallel with the principal line of nicks.

Down the sloping cement floor, into a drain leading to a manure pile outside the stable, flowed the blood of the murdered. It flowed profusely at each of these night orgies, for the door is even now caked with it, and there and there, stuck in the crust, you find bullets that had done their tasks.

It was by dim lantern light for the most part, and between the hours of 11 and 2 that the executions were staged.

CONTRASTS LABOR UNREST WITH YANKS' HEROISM

BACHRACH PHOTO.
CAPT. TOM GIBSON

Capt. Tom Gibson, who won distinction while overseas with the 1st division, is visiting his parents, 3647 Flournoy street. He was in all the big engagements and was in the front lines for 218 days. He returned to Chicago direct from Beckley, W. Va., where he has been on strike duty since the walkout of the coal miners.

"The feeling of unrest here at home is startling," he said.

"I know little about the labor question, but I do know working conditions in France. Here is an instance: Forty-two American machine gunners dragged their guns at night into a sap in No Man's Land. They were within fifty yards of the Germans and were cut off from the Americans. For seven days and nights those boys remained on duty in an unprotected trench and they held the place. Nothing was said among those workers about six hours a day, better working conditions, and a higher wage. Five came out alive.

"Europe can give America lessons. Over there they are listening to wisdom, getting down to real hard work."

'EAT, DRINK, AND BE MERRY,' MOTTO OF ROUMANIANS

Find Silk, Rags, Drinks, and Lovely Women in Bucharest.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BUCHAREST, Nov. 20.—"Little Paris," which the Germans converted to a "Little Hell" during their occupation, bravely struggles back to former gayety. Another year should find the city thoroughly overhauled, repainted, and hitting on all six.

Taking all the circumstances into consideration, Bucharest is doing remarkably well today. The cabarets, cafés, gardens, and theaters of the lighter sort are operating to capacity. The streets are filled with a conglomerate throng, whose irresponsibility increases with the hour. The triumvirate—wine, women, and song—is abundant in quantity and quality.

The beauty of Roumanian women is tradition. Their dress cannot be distinguished from Parisien. "'Eat, drink, and be merry,' for tomorrow may bring another war," might be the motto of an unusually large percentage of them.

Bucharest is divertingly cosmopolite in its music. Nearly every café of standing has its orchestra. Hardly one of them goes so far as to bar productions of Germany and Austria. These are played almost as freely as those of Italian or Slavic origin, but it is the good old rough and tumble, syncopated jumble from the United States which gets most of the applause. Most of it is of the vintage of "We will row, row, row way up the river," but it is all new in these parts and listens mighty fine to the stray American.

In Bucharest, women wear silk stockings or no stockings. This wide extreme is general. Those who wear no stockings also do without shoes.

CANARY BIRD EXHIBITION.

The annual exhibition of fancy canary birds will be held Dec. 6 and 7 at Wicker Park hall, West North and Milwaukee avenues. The exhibition will be under the auspices of the Canarien Zuechter Verein of Chicago, of which H. J. Immel of 1567 North Keeler avenue is secretary.

County School Teachers Study "Vitalized Farming"

Feminine fingers in the county building yesterday labored through the intricacies of "half hitches" and other knots employed by Friend Farmer in making Old Dobbin secure against flight. The fingers belonged to the teachers in the county schools who are undergoing a course in "vitalized agriculture" under the direction of Edward J. Tobin, county superintendent of schools. The teachers gave demonstrations of making articles of paper, canning, conservation of food products, mending, patching, the removal of stains and other accomplishments necessary in the education of a practical farmer's wife.

Loot Auto of Finery on World's Busiest Corner

Miss Janet Olsen, 1433 Rascher street, treasurer of the Kerr Letter company, parked her brougham at State and Madison streets, the world's busiest corner, yesterday afternoon. She locked the doors of the machine. When she returned 20 minutes later she found some one had opened the windshield, reached inside and lowered the glass in the door. A sealskin coat, five pairs of silk stockings, a pair of shoes, a dress, a suitcase, and a beaded purse were missing.

Avoid Mistakes In FARMING

A farmer raised 90 bushels of corn per acre; his neighbor across the road got only 35. The difference in yield was due to different methods of seeding, of preparing the soil, of harvesting. One man adopted the newest successful discoveries of farming authorities—the unsuccessful farmer depended entirely on his own experience.

Right and Wrong Farming Methods

You yourself know that to get the most out of his farm a man cannot sit on his porch and "let Nature do its work." He must keep abreast of things, watch others, and apply to his own farm the best of all he sees, hears and reads. Make one little mistake and you may impoverish your soil. Another mistake may waste weeks of your time and cost you hundreds in lost profits. Another may impair the breeding possibilities of your live stock. And, although you may think you are getting all possible profit out of your farm, it's the little mistakes unknowingly made that force so many farmers to do much of their work for nothing and to get out of their farms only about two-thirds of the profits that lie hidden there. Then too, there's the danger of not using some new method that has proved practical and has made a fortune for another farmer—one that would double or treble your profits and save you time and labor.

Pooling Worthwhile Plans and Methods So That All Can Share Them

For example, do you know the simple methods by which other farmers average per acre, 100 to 125 bushels of corn, 47 bushels of wheat, 80 bushels of oats, 240 bushels of potatoes—do you know how, through easy ways, butterfat production has been brought up to 310 pounds per year, and how 800 hens bring, as a side line profit, over $2,000 a year—do you know the best ways to inoculate alfalfa, to locate unprofitable cows, to select breeding stock of pullets, to combine fertilizers scientifically—do you know the best methods of dehorning, of improving seed by selection, of employing the gas engine and tractor?

A valuable free booklet "The Secret of Success in Farming," explaining many of these points and giving much other important information that you can use from day to day, has been prepared by Sears, Roebuck & Co. This booklet, which will be sent for the asking, also contains sample pages of FARM KNOWLEDGE and explains how, at a cost of over $50,000 for editorial material alone, the successful experience, best methods and farming secrets of practical farming authorities of long experience have now been pooled together so that you can share them, boosting your own profits and avoiding the costly mistakes and worn-out methods which deduct many a dollar from your profits. No theories—no guesswork—no wild ideas on "how to farm better." All tried and proved methods and plans which have actually increased crops and boosted profits, and made money for men who now disclose the facts.

The Discoveries of Specialists

Just as we have the physician who specializes on one particular branch of medicine, so we have the farmer who specializes on one particular branch of farming. And FARM KNOWLEDGE is the work of over 100 of these farming specialists—men who have worked just as you work, who have faced the same problems you face, who know from personal experience how to get from a farm all the profits that it holds. And each of these men specialized in a different branch of farming. One grew corn, studied all about corn, went all over the country, investigating corn crops, and after many years of experience, became a recognized authority on corn, to whom farmers came for advice from far and near. Another specialized on live stock; another on fruit-growing; another on bee-keeping; another on poultry; another on alfalfa; and so on. In every branch of farming FARM KNOWLEDGE is represented by an expert who knows more about his particular line than any other man.

FREE BOOKLET

FARM KNOWLEDGE contains over 2,000 pages in all, and over 3,000 illustrations. Each of the 4 volumes is nearly 2 inches thick. It is impossible to describe so important a work in this space. But we want every one interested in farming to send for a copy of this valuable booklet, "The Secret of Success in Farming." Learn the new farming secrets which have revolutionized old results, doubling and trebling profits. Learn some of the ways to make YOUR farm pay more. Don't miss this valuable little book. A Ten-Day Tube of Pepsodent. Send coupon. Make this simple, pleasant home test. See for yourself the results.

6,000 People Daily

Start This New Teeth-Cleaning Method

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Millions of teeth are being cleaned in a new way. And 6,000 new people daily are writing for a ten-day test.

Everywhere the results are seen in teeth that glisten—teeth with envied luster. Ask the owners and they will tell you that Pepsodent has done it.

But this means more than white teeth. Those careful people are fighting film, and film is the great tooth wrecker. Most tooth troubles are nowadays traced to it.

Film—the Chief Enemy

Film is that viscous coat which you feel with your tongue. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The tooth brush does not end it. The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. So much remains to cloud the teeth and it may do a ceaseless damage.

Film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus well-brushed teeth, as millions know, discolor and decay. And serious tooth diseases are alarming in extent.

Science Now Combats It

These facts have long been known. Dental science long has sought a way to daily fight film. But the only way seemed periodic dental cleaning to remove the film and tartar.

Now science has discovered an efficient film combatant. Able authorities have proved it by convincing clinical and laboratory tests.

For home use, the method is now embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent—a modern, scientific tooth paste. And, to show its effects, a 10-Day Tube is being sent to anyone who asks.

Make This Simple Test

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

This method long seemed impossible. Pepsin must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. But a harmless activating method has been found. Years of tests have proved that. So now this active pepsin can be every day applied.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

See the results, and our book will tell you how they come about. Then decide for yourself between the old ways and the new.

The test will be a revelation, and you owe it to yourself. Mail the coupon to us today.

Teach Children to Employ It

When you see what Pepsodent does, teach the children to employ it.

Brushing is inadequate for saving teeth, and millions of mothers know it. The film will wreck them if you don't combat it.

This ten-day test will show you how to fight the film. It will point the way to whiter, safer teeth.

It will tell you how the children can avoid some troubles that you know.

See that they do it. There are few things more important.

Pepsodent PAT. OFF. REG. U.S.
The New-Day Dentifrice

The scientific film combatant, which, after years of careful testing, is now advised by leading dentists everywhere. Druggists everywhere are supplied with large tubes.

Just use it twice daily and watch it.

Let your mirror decide its effects.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

CHICAGO TO HAVE THIRD LARGEST HOTEL IN WORLD

$5,000,000 to Be Spent Making the Sherman City's Biggest.

BY AL CHASE.

With the expenditure of $5,000,000 in remodeling and adding to the Hotel Sherman, Chicago will have the third largest hotel in the world, being surpassed only by the Commodore and Pennsylvania in New York City.

And with this announcement comes the additional information that the Hotel Sherman company is building the $2,000,000 Hotel Ambassador, tentatively named the Lorraine, at the northwest corner of North State and Goethe streets, which will have, it is said, the most expensive furnishings of any hotel in America, even more costly and luxurious than the new Drake, a few blocks to the southeast.

When the Hotel Ambassador is finished, the Hotel Sherman changes are made, and some alterations are completed in the Fort Dearborn hotel which will add forty-six more rooms to that hostelry, the Hotel Sherman company will have 2,445 hotel rooms in Chicago.

To Be Chicago's Largest.

Work will begin in March in making the Hotel Sherman into Chicago's largest hostelry. The first step will be the abolition of the present green tile mansard roof and the addition of three stories at a cost of $1,000,000. This will add 250 rooms to the present 750, or a total of 1,000. It will be finished about Oct. 1, 1920.

Later, when existing leases permit, Powers' theater on the west will be wrecked and a $4,000,000, seventeen story, 600 room annex, corresponding architecturally with the remodeled main structure, will be built on the 80x180 lot. This will bring the total number of rooms up to 1,600, and put the hotel at the top of the Chicago list in point of size.

And in other ways, it is claimed, the hotel will be able to claim distinction. It will have a swimming pool and gymnasium for athletically inclined guests; there will be a safe deposit vault for the cautious one; and for the thrifty there will be a "waiterless, tipless grill" in the basement to accommodate 1,000. The w. t. g. is really a sublimated cafeteria with decorations equal to the College inn and the same food as served in that café—only you'll serve yourself. There are said to be innovations too startling to be divulged just now.

One other important feature of the annex will be the largest banquet hall in Chicago—to accommodate 4,000. Holabird & Roche, architects of the original Hotel Sherman, have designed the alterations.

"The Hotel Sherman company intends to make the Hotel Ambassador absolutely the finest in America," said Ernest L. Byfield, secretary and treasurer of the company. "We will spend over $500,000 on furnishings alone and they will be more costly than those of the new Hotel Drake, which were supposed to be the most luxurious in the west.

"Every suite will be furnished as expensively as the highest priced private apartment. We will have 320 rooms, arranged in apartments of from one to six rooms. There will be a rather unusual arrangement of tearoom, banquet room, and dining room, so that they can be thrown together into one big gathering place.

"We expect to have a large organ built in the dining room and have recitals by well known organists. There will be no shops in the building of any kind.

Ready by October, 1920.

"The foundations are now in and we figure on being ready for guests by October, 1920, and judging from the requests for space that Harold Bradley & Co., who will be the exclusive agents, have received for apartments, it will be 100 per cent rented when we open. Apartments will be rented for six months or a year or longer. We figure on practically no transient trade."

The building is 100x130 and will cost approximately $1,500,000, exclusive of furnishings.

And here's what Mr. Byfield says about the hotel situation:

"Three years ago Chicago hotels were averaging 75 per cent business. Now it's 90 per cent, with travel increasing all the time. And when the county concrete roads are finished we look for a big increase in motor traffic. Right now every one in America seems to be traveling and people no longer go through Chicago on the jump—they stop off a day or a week and shop and look around. So you can see this is getting to be a good hotel town—and we're getting more good hotels to keep up our good name.

"Our company is adding to its accommodations with the idea of doing its share toward meeting the growth of Chicago."

THE NEW HOTEL SHERMAN.

THE HOTEL AMBASSADOR.

HOLIDAY CALM SETTLES OVER REALTY MARKET

Situation Is Unusually Bare of Interesting Features.

Maybe Thanksgiving occupied such a prominent place in every one's mind the last week that big real estate deals were forgotten. Anyway, the market during the last six days has been unusually bare of interest. No big new apartment house projects have developed. Aside from a couple of good sized hotel and office building improvements, commented on in another column, the largest item of the week was the announcement by M. Born & Co., wholesale tailors and manufacturers, that they have purchased the 44x120 feet at the northwest corner of Wells and Harrison streets, and will erect a twelve story annex to their present building.

The combined building will have a frontage of 107 feet in Wells street and 120 in Harrison, and will represent a total investment in land and building of over $1,000,000. The site for the new building cost a reported price of $122,000 and was purchased through Alexander Friend & Co. From Theresa Wittneier the corner, 22x120 feet, improved with a three story business block, was purchased for a reported price of $77,000. This is at the rate of $3,500 per front foot and $29.16 per square foot. The board of review valued the property at $79,071.

From Kunigunda Metz the adjacent 22x120 was purchased for an indicated price of $45,000. Work on the new building will begin as soon as the leases on the present buildings expire.

More Clothing Factories.

Work has just started on three new clothing factories which will add 170,000 square feet of floor space to the tailoring industry. Alfred Decker & Cohn have leased for twelve years at a term rental of 357,000 the 200x125 five story building being erected by John R. Bowes on the north side of North avenue, twenty-five feet west of Lawndale avenue. The total floor space will be 100,000 square feet. The total investment is reported as approximately $375,000.

A three story building, with 35,000 square feet of floor space, is being erected by Mr. Bowes for the Liebman Philipson company at the northwest corner of Cromwell and Canton streets. The lot is 125x84. The clothing concern has leased it for twelve years at $10,500 a year.

Another building of the same size is being erected by Mr. Bowes at the southwest corner of West Twenty-third street and South Fifty-sixth avenue. It has been leased to Charles Kaufman & Brothers for twelve years at $10,500 a year. The total investment of each of the latter two is said to be $140,000. The Walter company are architects and contractors for all three buildings.

Boulevard Factory.

Work is to begin at once on a $350,000 five story building at the northwest corner of Lake Shore drive and Ontario street. It will be of steel construction, with foundations for five additional stories, and will front 120 feet on the drive and 180 on Ontario street.

The Chicago Addressing company purchased 48x170 feet in Wells street, 96 feet north of Taylor street, for an indicated price of $75,000, from Wilhelm W. and H. D. De Wees, and will build a six story plant early next year, to cost approximately $200,000.

LOOP TO HAVE NEW $1,000,000 OFFICE BUILDING

Old Colony Life Plans 15 Story Structure in Jackson Blvd.

At last Chicago's overcrowded loop is to have a much needed addition to its office space in the shape of a fifteen story building, to cost approximately $1,000,000, to be erected on the city lot in West Jackson boulevard between the Royal Insurance building and Medinah Temple, extending 165 feet back to Quincy street.

In addition, the eleven story front of Lombard hotel, at the southeast corner of Wells and Quincy streets, is to be completely remodeled into a modern office building, and, with four additional stories, will be connected with the new building on each floor, making one L shaped building of uniform height and design with over 170,000 square feet of rentable space.

Buys Fee in 1916.

The Old Colony Life Insurance company purchased the fee to the 80,000 square feet in 1916, but war conditions forced a delay in carrying out the project. Work will start on the new fifteen story building next year. Work on remodeling the Lombard hotel will begin shortly, and will be finished in January. It is expected to be able to care for many of the tenants who will be forced to vacate the buildings adjoining on the east when they are wrecked to make way for the new Federal Reserve Bank building.

The new structure will be known as the Jackson-Quincy-Wells building and will house the general offices of the Old Colony Life Insurance company, now in the building of that name at the southeast corner of Dearborn and Van Buren streets.

The leasehold of the Lombard hotel property was acquired in March, 1913, for $600,000, and runs for 196 years, reckoned from May 1, 1913. It fronts 55 feet in Wells street and 114 in Quincy. Combining the two plots gives approximately 14,500 square feet gross, with a net rentable area of some 11,500 sffuare feet per floor. C. A. Eckstorm is architect.

Jackson to Quincy Lobby.

There will be a marble lobby running through the new building from Jackson boulevard to Quincy street, connecting with the remodeled lobby in the hotel building.

This is the first important building operation in the financial district for a long period.

18 Bungalows in Cornell Avenue to Cost $140,000

Osborne E. Quinton has purchased from Edward F. Shellaberger the 660 feet of vacant ground in Cornell avenue, east front, extending from Seventy-sixth to Seventy-seventh streets, at an indicated consideration of $21,900. Mr. Quinton plans to improve the property at once with eighteen modern homes of the bungalow type to cost in the neighborhood of $140,000. Fred M. Lorish of W. K. Young & Bro. was the broker.

DE JONGHE HOTEL LEASE IS BOUGHT BY CARSON-PIRIE

Planning for a future entrance for shoppers into Monroe street, Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. have purchased the ninety-nine year leasehold of the De Jonge hotel and restaurant at 12 East Monroe street, from the De Jonghe company. The leasehold originally was held by David Mayer, who later transferred it to Isaac Mayer. Still later the De Jonghe company acquired it.

According to C. B. Miller of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. the property was acquired merely because it was possible to get it now. No definite plans for extending the store through to Monroe street have yet been made. The hotel is a six story structure and the lot fronts 50 feet on Monroe with a depth of 105.

This will set at rest the persistent rumor that the Statler hotel syndicate had acquired the property as part of a site for a local Statler hotel.

OLD HAYMARKET THEATER IS SOLD

The historic old Haymarket theater, in West Madison street, just east of Halsted street, south front, which at one time played high class legitimate attractions, is reported sold by Francis Beidler, Augustus F. Beidler, and their sister, Mrs. Emma Beidler Camp, to purchasers whose names are withheld. The price is understood to have been $225,000. The lot fronts 120 feet, with a depth of 190. The building is six stories, and, in addition to a large theater, has offices and stores.

The late Will J. Davis at one time controlled the playhouse and the syndicate booked its attractions. Plays which had appeared at the old Columbia (where the Inter Ocean building now stands) and Hooley's (now Powers' theater) were taken over to the west side and given at slightly reduced prices. With the retirement of Davis from control the theater passed through many changes in policy. It became one of the leading vaudeville theaters in Chicago, operated by Kohl & Castle in connection with two other famous homes of variety, the Chicago opera house and the Olympic. After that it had spells of burlesque, "10-20-30c," Yiddish drama, and pictures.

PROPERTY OWNERS IN MOVE TO DETHRONE OLD CZAR JANITOR

Chicago property owners are going to make a desperate effort to dethrone Czar Janitor. On Friday at a meeting backed by the Chicago and Cook County Real Estate boards, held at the rooms of the Chicago board, real estate agents started things moving toward a giant organization which would be in a position to handle the janitor situation and other difficulties which may arise to worry property owners.

"If the property owners of Chicago could be completely organized," said Ivan O. Ackley, president of the Chicago board, "it would be civically, politically, and financially the strongest body in Chicago. There are 200,000 property owners. Just now we're going to fight the demands of the janitors. We're opposed to a closed shop."

"The janitor today is making more money than many of the tenants," said L. M. Smith. "He makes more than doctors, clergymen, professors, or any office employés, with only a few exceptions. He gets over $300 a month in a great many cases, and gets his rent free, in addition."

It is planned to hold public meetings throughout the city to arouse sentiment.

APARTMENT DEALS

Joseph A. Holpuch has sold to John Bzizinsky the fifteen apartment building at the northeast corner of Montrose and La Crosse avenues, and the twenty-one apartment building at the northwest corner of the same streets, for a reported aggregate consideration of $75,000. McKey & Poague, with the Lauderdale Real Estate company, were brokers.

Gold Coast Residence Property Shows Activity

Here are a few Gold Coast sales reported by Harold Bradley & Co., who recently sold the Meeker residence to E. L. Ryerson Jr. for $50,000: 51 East Division street, 17x86, residence sold by Mrs. Nellie Bedell to Mrs. H. B. Buling for a reported price of $14,500.

No. 20 East Bellevue place, three story brick residence, 21x73, between Rush street and Lake Shore drive, owned by Mrs. W. A. Smith (daughter of Mrs. William A. Chapin, 1200 Lake Shore drive). This was purchased by Dr. Harry Spenser-Brown for $15,000.

The northwest corner of Pearson and Cass streets, 25x125, improved with a three story flat building which was given no value in the deal, was sold at the rate of $375 a foot, which is said to be the highest price at which property of this class has been sold in several years. It was purchased by Arthur L. Farwell from the heirs of the estate of Minna Almindinger.

Tells How Building Lines Are Regulated in Newark, N. J.

Below is the fifth of a series of articles on zoning written for The Tribune by Herbert S. Swan, secretary of the New York zoning committee. In it he tells how building lines are to be controlled in Newark, N. J., under the new zoning ordinance in that city.

BY HERBERT S. SWAN.
[Secretary New York Zoning Committee.]

The proposed zoning ordinance prepared for Newark, N. J., establishes several new precedents. One of these has to do with building lines. In the past the freedom enjoyed by every owner to erect his building on the street line has seriously prejudiced the highest residential development of many streets. There is probably nothing that enhances the attractiveness of a street with private homes more than an open strip of ground between the street line and the building line. Setting back the houses permits the maintenance of a front lawn with grass and trees; it shuts out the dust and noise of the street; it promotes family privacy, and it affords additional light and air.

And yet in the absence of any obligation binding all the owners within a block to observe a minimum setback line, each owner has felt it necessary to build his house on the street line. His own self-protection has demanded this. If he did not erect his house on the sidewalk his neighbors on either side might. Being pocketed between two buildings, his house, instead of facing a street, would really front upon an outer court. Countless owners, trusting to the comity of their neighbors, have had their values ruined by themselves observing the amenities of the district.

Blackjacks the Benefactor.

If we wish to preserve the front yards in our residence districts we cannot permit a situation to continue which rewards the despoiler and blackjacks the benefactor of a neighborhood. A method must be found to protect the house that conforms to a minimum setback line. The proposed Newark ordinance suggests such a method, which, though it may not be ideal, still affords a considerable degree of protection to residence districts.

The proposition is, briefly, this: Where at least one-half of the buildings situated on either side of a street between two intersecting streets conform to a minimum setback, no new building may be erected to project beyond it, unless an open space is left on each side of the building beyond the setback. Each of these open spaces is required to have a minimum width at every point beyond the setback equal to at least 1 per cent of the width of the lot on which the building is situated for each 1 per cent that the building projects beyond the setback.

What It Would Accomplish.

The effect of this provision will be absolutely to prohibit any new building in a block where half the existing buildings observe a minimum setback line from projecting beyond half the distance to the street or from occupying more than one-quarter of the area between the setback line and the street line. In actual practice, however, it is doubtful whether any building would ever project more than one-quarter of the distance to the street.

Beg Your Pardon

Fairbanks, Morse & Co. call attention to the headline of the story in last Sunday's real estate department, telling of their new building plans. The concern was called "The Fairbanks Co.," although the story used the correct name, Fairbanks, Morse & Co. The Fairbanks company is a separate concern and is often confused with Fairbanks, Morse & Co.

LOFT BUILDING SOLD.

The three story loft building at 48-50 West Kinzie street, 55-100, has been purchased by F. Espert from Lucy V. Jewett and Samuel D. Jewett. According to R. M. Bradley, who represented both parties, the valuation was $55,000.

GRAIN MARKETS COLLAPSE AFTER EARLY ADVANCE

Profit Taking by Longs Is Principal Cause of Fall.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

A collapse in the grain markets, after an early advance, was due to the local traders who have fought the advance all week covering and getting long at the top.

Extensive profit taking by the largest local longs and by commission houses carried prices off in the last hour, making a close at losses of 1¼@1½c on corn, ¾@1c on oats, 1¼@1½c on rye, ½@¾c on barley, 17½@90c off on lard, and 17½@22½c lower on short ribs. Losses in the outside grain markets were about the same as in Chicago.

Prices were on the up grade most of the week and reached the highest point on the bulge early. Despite the sharp break at the last corn is 4½@6¾c higher, with December trades in that grain as well as others said to be well liquidated. Oats are 1@1¼c higher, rye up ¾@6¾c, and barley 2½@3½c higher. Pork 20c lower to $1.15 higher, lard $1.07½ lower on November and 40c higher for January, and short ribs 2½@12½c lower.

Long Corn Sold Freely.

Corn prices moved up sharply early to a new high on the present bulge, December showing 12⅞c and May 11½c above the inside figures of the previous week and 1¼@2⅝c above the previous day's close, December leading. Unlicensed shorts were free buyers and found offerings rather light at times. This, with wet weather over the corn belt and prospects that the movement would be delayed, led many pit traders to take the bull side.

On the upturn some who had been the best buyers when prices were much lower sold heavily, taking profits, and later when reports that 200,000 bu grain had been canceled by exporters were received there was a general rush to unload. Prices dropped 3⅝@4⅜c, December leading with some stop orders uncovered on the way down.

The technical position of the market was the main cause of the decline, as the bull element were overconfident on the bull side after having fought the bulge for a week. The break was checked by buying against bids. At the last December was $1.35, January $1.31⅞, May and July $1.31.

Cash prices were 1@3c higher early, but closed with the advance lost. Receipts, 71 cars. Shipping sales, 55,000 bu. Baltimore offered to cancel corn for November shipment at a loss of 3c per bu. Country offerings to arrive light.

Oats Close Shade Lower.

Bulk of the trade in oats was in evening up on the part of December longs and shorts. Prices were affected more or less by the fluctuations in corn, but at the last net losses were small, with December at 73⅝c, May at 76⅝c, and July at 73½c.

Premiums in the sample market were ½c lower, and sample values unchanged to ½c lower, closing easy. Shipping sales 90,000 bu. Receipts 66 cars. Seaboard bids for heavy oats were out of line. Country offerings light and expectations are for a good reduction in local stocks for the week.

Liquidation in Rye.

Scattered liquidation was in evidence in rye, and with the break in corn prices declined and closed lower. A house with seaboard connections bought on the break. Yeast makers bought a few cars of spot rye, paying 1c over December for No. 2. Latter sold at $1.48½, while No. 3 was $1.47@1.47½. Receipts 9 cars. Offerings of barley were not large, and prices showed little change. Resellers were reported at the seaboard below offers from the west. Spot sales were at $1.48@1.50. Receipts 20 cars.

Clover seed firm. Country lots $30.00@33.00 per 100 lbs. Timothy unchanged. March $12.60 bid.

Pressure on November Lard.

November lard was under pressure from packers with no demand to sustain values, and in two days the price has dropped $1.35 per 100 lbs, closing at the inside. December also came in for more selling, with limited buying, and lost 32½c for the day. January had support at the start, but finished 17½c lower. Ribs were handled sparingly and closed lower, while January pork lost 80c early on stop loss selling, but reacted 50c, while May finished 50c higher.

Cash trade in lard was fair, with 140,000 lbs refined sold for deferred shipment and 75,000 lbs leaf lard at 25c, a drop of 7c. Weakness in foreign exchange was a factor. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were 35,750,00 0lbs, against 42,714,000 lbs the previous week and 36,101,000 lbs last year, the loss being mainly in lard. Traders paid more attention to the break in corn than to the advance in hogs. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Trade sentiment in corn at the close yesterday was mixed. It was claimed in some quarters that local traders had gone long at the top and had sold out at a loss, and that some of the big local traders who had taken profits on the advance had put out a line of shorts and were still short. Others, however, who went short on the bulge took their profits on the decline around $1.30¼ for May, regarding the drop of 3⅝c in less than an hour as sufficient for the time being. A feature was the heavy selling by commission houses led by Riordan & Martin, who were the largest buyers when prices were 12c lower. Some of the commission houses regarded the advance as sufficient for the present, while others said that the break was due to an overbought pit condition and which had been corrected by the sudden drop.

Farmers' deliveries of corn are expected to be curtailed by the bad weather, but there are good stocks in interior elevators and with cars available a liberal sized movement is expected. There were reports of possible labor troubles with the railroads which, with the coal strike, might make a most unfavorable situation for the grain trade in general should they materialize.

Cash houses were the largest sellers of December corn, while the buying was scattered. A few of the receiving houses bought carlots in the open markets to cover sales for November shipment, but the Corn Products company secured the bulk of the cash corn.

Logan & Bryan were moderately bullish on corn on the breaks and say sufficient oats have been bought recently to put the market in a position to advance further. Export business in rye in all positions, they say, was 100,000 bu.

"Eastern hog buyers will, we think, be more of a factor from this on and a broader interest in the general market for provisions is expected to develop as nearby but forward deliveries was followed by a steady absorption of January product regardless of the increased receipts and lower prices for hogs."

Marine insurance rates on hulls advanced ½c and cargo rates are up equal to 2c, effective at midnight tonight. The rate on cargoes from Dec. 1 to 5 is 1c; 5 to 8, 1½c; 8 to 10, 1¾c; and December 10 to 12 is 2c.

California writes that the barley crop, allowing for home feed consumption, is practically sold out. England has bought freely of Californian barley, last sales equal $1.92 per bu. of 48 lbs. at the Atlantic seaboard. European brewing requirements are expected to be heavy for the balance of the season, and the middle states apparently the only section in the world to furnish needed supplies. Barley specialists believe that an advance of 25 to 50c per bu, based on European demand, is among the probabilities. California needs rain badly, having had less than one inch against eight inches last year, and the situation is becoming serious for the new crops.

A Baltimore cash grain firm offered to cancel cash corn bought on the basis of 20c over December at a loss of 3c yesterday. Aggregate cancellations of sales of corn reported made earlier in the week for export were around 200,000 bu.

Primary receipts of wheat for the season to date were 266,361,000 bu, corn 15,748,000 bu, and oats 84,129,000 bu. Last year wheat receipts were 296,302,600 bu, corn 18,198,000 bu, and oats 139,285,000 bu.

"Country elevator men say present stormy conditions will hold back any movement of corn from farms for some time," said a Sioux City, Ia., message. "Railroad efforts are very feeble."

"Active demand for low grade flour in the London market," said a cable to the Modern Miller. "No import restrictions on low grades. Exporters should make offers direct to their correspondents."

Shippers purchased more than half the 9,000 hogs received, which forced prices 25@40c above Friday. Armour and Swift houses were practically out of the trade.

There was a general contraction of the price range, best hogs at $13.95 being only 45c above low point of the week, while the average at $13.70 showed 75c gain, the spread being narrowest since June.

The week's average price of hogs was $13.30, there being only one week lower since February, 1917. Estimated average weight for the week at 224 lbs was same as previous week, the two lightest weeks since last December and two lbs below a year ago.

Closing cattle trade was highest of the week, with prices generally 50c@$1.00 above finish of previous week. Sheep and lambs closed 25@50c higher than a week ago, with the tendency still higher.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 32,000 cattle, 50,000 hogs, and 35,000 sheep, against 28,122 cattle, 44,479 hogs, and 40,883 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 100,000 cattle, 250,000 hogs, and 100,000 sheep.

BARNES, WHEAT DIRECTOR, BUYS PAPER PLANTS

New York, Nov. 29.—[Special.]—Julius H. Barnes, wheat director of the United States, verified the report that, with associates, he has purchased the majority stock of the Pejepscot Paper company and its subsidiaries, formerly held by W. H. Parsons & Co. and by other stockholders. In regard to the purchase price of the property, which was mentioned as $750,000, the statement which was issued at Mr. Barnes' office is silent. It follows:

"Mr. Julius H. Barnes today confirmed the press report to the effect that, as the result of negotiations of some duration, he has purchased for himself and associates the majority stock of the Pejepscot Paper company and subsidiaries, hitherto held by W. H. Parsons & Co. of New York and by other former stockholders. The property includes the paper mills, timber lands, and a fleet of tugs and barges.

"Mr. Barnes stated nothing definite could be said about plans for operation except that the mills, which have been producers of paper for many years, will be continued in operation."

News that Mr. Barnes had purchased control of the company came as a surprise to many of his friends, who had believed that when his duties ended as wheat director of the country in June, 1920, he would resume his former position in the grain world.

Bonds on the Bargain Counter.

The recent slump in the stock market serves to call the attention of small investors to the advantage of bonds, and also to the present exceedingly advantageous prices at which they can be bought. Bonds have been selling on a very low level for months past, and the market for them has fluctuated within narrow limits.

When speculators were forced to realize on some of their holdings in order to protect their accounts they sold securities that could be disposed of with the smallest loss. This brought out a flood of Liberty bonds, and the result was a little depression of the market for these securities. At the new low level two issues of Liberty bonds were on a 5 per cent income basis.

As Liberty bonds are exempt from all taxes when held in amounts of $5,000 or less, they are a wonderful bargain for the small investor. Of course, they are not guaranteed against a further small decline, but they are certain to advance in the future. If the investment market gets back to anywhere near a normal basis in the next five or six years they will sell 10 or 15 points higher than at present.

Most issues of high grade bonds are in the same general situation as the government obligations. They are now selling at bargain prices. When the demand for capital becomes less urgent than at present they are certain to sell on a lower income basis. This means an advance in market prices proportionate to the length of time before the maturity of each bond.

Standard Cap and Seal.

C. M., Macomb, Ill.—The Standard Cap and Seal corporation was formed early this year to take over a company of similar name which had been operating several years with an authorized capital of $50,000. The new company has issued $500,000 of preferred stock and $1,000,000 common. Its balance sheet of July 31 last shows $84.74 of net tangible assets to each $100 share of preferred stock. Common represents patents and good will only. Total income in the first half of 1919 was $45,207; in 1918 it was $6,223; in 1917, $71,762, and in 1916, $133,437. The average of the last two and a half years covers the preferred dividend twice. On the basis of these figures the new company appears to be overcapitalized.

Brief Answers.

H. P. S.—The American Discount company has issued a statement as of Oct. 18. It shows $56,400 of preferred stock issued and 282 shares of common, also $310,600 paid in for preferred stock not yet issued. Gross operating receipts from April 8 to Oct. 18 were $4,386, and net income $1,721.

C. D., Des Moines, Ia.—The American Thermos Bottle company has issued $1,150,000 of stock. Gross earnings not reported since 1914. Dividends have been at the rate of 12 per cent for two years past. In 1917 5 per cent was paid and in 1916 8 per cent.

Wants Board to Sit Year Round to Fix Tariffs

Need of a new interstate commerce commission branch to sit the year round to assure the immediate revision of domestic and foreign shipping tariffs and to regulate the present involved railroad tariffs as actual questions arise, was pointed out yesterday by A. C. Sherrard, manager of D. C. Andrews & Co., import and export freight agents.

NEW YORK BANK LOAN DECREASE MODERATE ONE

Expansion of $34,065,000 in Excess Reserve Is Shown.

The New York bank statement showed only a moderate decrease in loans, $8,193,000. It had been expected the shrinkage would be of material size.

But, while the loan item was disappointing in the smallness of the change, there was an increase of over $2,000,000 in cash, which, with a decrease of $5,059,000 in net demand deposits caused the excess reserve to expand by $34,065,000. The item now stands at $71,333,170. This figure, so far as the showing of the banks alone is concerned, is sufficiently high to give a reassuring influence.

Local banking opinion as to the condition of the general securities market does not reflect any special views. The coal strike, closeness of money and foreign situation are advanced as general factors in causing the current weakness. Also it is believed that a very large volume of selling is due to establishing losses in connectin with income tax payments.

RALLY AT CLOSE BRINGS ABOUT IRREGULAR LIST

Drive Against the Bears Seems to Be Lacking in Power.

The New York Times.

New York, Nov. 29.—[Special.]—The speculative interests committed to the decline of stocks held their ground with firmness in today's dealings until near the close.

When the late rally got under way it seemed to lack power, especially among those industrial issues which had been depressed furthest in earlier days of the week. Railroad and copper shares, however, were bid upward for net gains extending from large fractions to three points as commitments on the short side were retired, and the irregular price exhibit when trading stopped showed more gains than losses.

In Professional Hands.

The market continued in the hands of professional traders, who appeared first to seek profits through short sales, and later either covered their transactions or elected to carry open short contracts over to the new week.

The next few days promise to disclose more fully than heretofore the actual influence which events in industry, finance and politics are being on security values. So far in the decline there has seemed to be little beside the undoing of an overdone speculative account, the deflation of quotations which had been inflated over a period of months, chiefly by the blind attachment of speculators to a belief that prices would keep on rising indefinitely.

Sober Moment Due.

When a sobering moment comes it is natural that the market following should bring closer attention than before to bear upon those matters which, in the long run, are the true influences behind price movements. It is possible now to calculate in approximate figures what the steel strike cost the companies in reduced sales and income.

The opportunity is at hand, afforded by the coal strike, to visualize, even though vaguely, the effect in dollars of fuel scarcity at industrial plants in many parts of the country.

The week should bring definite developments in the coal situation and it is to be hoped that the measures taken by the government or the mine operators will quickly result in increased production.

TUNNEL FREIGHT HALTED AS 200 GO UPON STRIKE

Tube Company Suspends Operations; Walkout Adds to Loop Jam.

About 200 tunnel workers, who operate small freight trains under the loop for the Chicago Tunnel company, went on strike yesterday for recognition of the union and more money, forcing the corporation to suspend business temporarily.

As a result, citizens will have to dodge 500 or 600 more loop wagons and trucks tomorrow. The vehicles will haul the freight which until the strike was carried underground.

The strikers, members of division 912 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, wish their wages raised from 48 cents an hour to 76 cents, according to officials of the company.

Ready to Raise Wages.

Sherman W. Tracy, president, said the workers could be raised to 58 cents an hour, due to an increase in freight rates that will go into effect Dec. 10. He refuses to deal with the union, but will meet representatives of the men.

"You cannot get blood out of a turnip," he said. "The property has never earned a dollar. On the contrary, its operations in the last ten years have resulted in a loss of more than $1,000,000.

"The strike is unwarranted. Only 40 per cent of the men quit, or 200 out of 500, but the other 300 were forced out. Fully 90 per cent of the men will work as soon as they are assured of protection.

"If the men do not come back in the next three or four days, we will fill their places with the freight hands who were forced out with them. They will be glad to make the change, for it will mean a raise from 43 to 58 cents an hour."

Want Union Recognized.

William S. McClenathan, secretary of division 308 of the elevated men's union, who called the strike Friday night on behalf of Thomas McCarthy, president, and T. J. Moore, secretary of the new union, declared recognition of the union was the principal object and wages next.

He intimated the scale would be the same as the elevated and street car men's—65 and 67 cents an hour—and perhaps more.

Several weeks ago John C. Payton, secretary and treasurer of the company, said if the men struck the company would be forced to suspend operation and no one would worry. President Tracy admitted yesterday this would have been so if permission had not been given to increase rates.

Do You Have to Apologize for Your Securities?

How Much Can You Borrow On Them?

Do you have to apologize for the securities you offer your banker when you want a loan or can you offer them, well knowing their soundness, their real sound worth?

It is at the time you need money and must have it that you appreciate the bonds you bought with Dominant Security as your guide.

Splendid way to test bonds. Estimate their value in the eyes of the banker from whom you borrow. Estimate your feeling of confidence if you were to offer them as collateral.

Smoke is Nothing but Unconsumed Fuel

KEWANEE SMOKELESS BOILERS
BURN ANY COAL SMOKELESSLY

Why do you rebel against the smoke ordinance? Why do you emit the hollow moan and call it a hardship when it is a big blessing in disguise?

Paste these facts in your hat and see that you don't lose your hat: Smoke is nothing but unconsumed fuel. And the fuel that is not consumed is waste. Every bunch of black smoke that wanders up your stack, represents so much good coin of the realm.

The scarcity and high cost of hard coal compels you to use soft coal. The boiler you have, was built to burn anthracite, which is a smokeless coal. But there isn't any more anthracite and there isn't going to be any. The only thing left is dear old Illinois and Indiana and other soft coals.

Ergo—you've got to have a boiler that will burn soft coal and burn it without smoke. And when you install it you will save approximately $6 a ton. The present prices of anthracite run from $12.40 to $13.00 a ton. The present prices of good grades of soft coal are from $6.45 to $7.00 a ton. If this difference isn't worth serious consideration, then we don't know the meaning of horse-sense.

The universally recognized boiler which will save you this difference, which will save you from the smoke inspector is the Kewanee Smokeless Boiler which originated in the very heart of the soft coal country and is burning, right now every day and hour, the meanest, cheapest grades of soft coal, even slack, without the slightest violation of the most stringent smoke ordinance.

The Kewanee Smokeless Boiler in Chicago alone, is saving thousands of dollars per day for 162 solid miles of our finest apartment houses, to say nothing of countless public buildings, hotels, schools, dormitories, churches, clubs, warehouses, garages and what not. If you have any doubts on the subject, ask the best heating engineers and architects.

Once this boiler is installed, you will never worry any more about anthracite or Pocohontas. You won't even think about it. You won't care if they never mine another pound. You will never use it again even if it comes back, and you can bet your bottom dollar that it isn't coming back.

A thorough discussion of your problem is part of our service to which you are entitled. You can reach us almost any place any time.

For heating Schools, Apartments, Churches, Hotels, Factories, Garages, Large Residences, Theatres, etc.

The PRINCE of WALES in the UNITED STATES

AT MOUNT VERNON—The prince leaves the tomb of George Washington after placing a wreath there in tribute to the man who led the American armies against the forces of his great-great-great grandfather.

GOING THE WAY OF THE DINOSAUR AND PTERODACTYL—Rangers in the western states are making a last effort to preserve the few remaining specimens of the American bison. The species is now all but extinct, for it has long been the prey of ruthless hunters and has proved to be miserable and short lived in captivity. The photograph gives a glimpse of what is said to be the only herd that is still roaming the western plains.

Radium and Beauty

FROM the land of fairest complexions comes the finest of face creams. Out of the experience of Englishwomen comes the most grateful praise of Radior Peau de Velour.

Shall one attribute this to the exquisite purity of its ingredients? Or to the delicate suggestion of its perfume? Or to the content of real radium—which acts upon the skin so that it blooms forth in fullest youthful loveliness?

But reasons are unfeminine. It is enough that here at last is a face cream that serves beauty gently and completely and worthily. Choose Radior Vanishing Cream and Radior Face Powder! They also combine ingredients of highest purity with the health-building, beautifying power of radium.

Write for the most interesting and instructive beauty booklet of the year—"Radium and Beauty."

Josephine Empress of France

Born in the West Indies, Empress Josephine was a Creole, as was her daughter, Hortense, Queen of Holland.

Hortense Queen of Holland

The Creoles are of pure French and Spanish descent. A distinguishing mark of their pure blood is their wonderful hair.

Creole Crowned Heads

THE royal crowns that some historic Creoles wore were not so lovely as the crown of glorious hair which is the natural heritage of nearly all Creoles. They give their hair special attention and for generations La Creole Hair Dressing has been favorite among them. La Creole preserves gray hair, preserving the youthful color and beauty even past life's twilight.

Color Brought Back Without Dye

La Creole treatment will bring back to its former color hair that has become gray, gray-streaked or faded. Refinement approves its use because La Creole contains no dye. It promotes the vigorous healthy condition of hair and scalp which nature intended, and two to five weeks' treatment will bring back any shade—lightest brown to deepest black—whatever the natural color was. After that an occasional application will preserve the healthy color permanently.

La Creole must not be confused with dyes—of course it gives no dyed appearance, it cannot stain the scalp and there is nothing to wash or rub off. La Creole makes hair soft, wavy, lustrous. Eliminates dandruff. Absolutely guaranteed to bring back the hair's color or money refunded.

Send coupon for booklet, "La Creole Hair Beautiful." Shows style of hair dressing best suited to each type of face.

U-BOAT WARFARE AS SEEN BY A GERMAN CAMERA—Teutonic "efficiency" didn't win the war, but it went to some bizarre lengths in making the attempt. One characteristic exploit was that of the commander of the U-35, who made a series of films from the deck of his submarine for exhibition in Germany, as a history of the work done by the vessel. The pictures came into the possession of the British admiralty, which released them recently. This one was taken as the U-35 approached a doomed British steamer.

(Photograph from International.)

ON THE WAY TO DAVY JONES' LOCKER—According to the photographic record, a party boarded this ship and brought her papers and her captain aboard the "sub." Meanwhile the crew left in their boats in the open sea. Then the U-boat commander calmly took this picture.

IT TAKES MORE THAN LAVISHNESS TO GIVE DISTINCTION TO THE HOSTESS OF TODAY

IN years gone by, when American civilization was cruder, mere quantity, mere extravagance were often considered impressive.

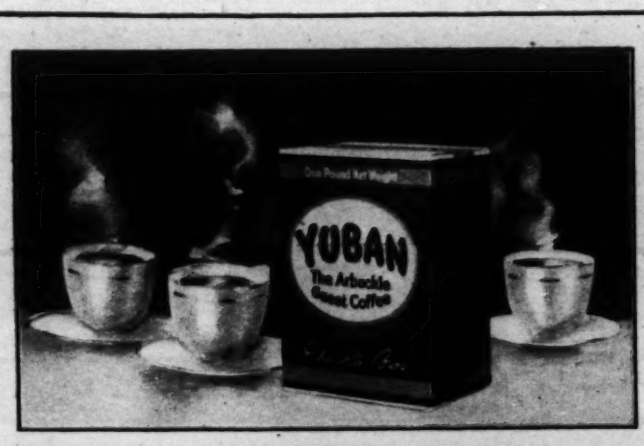
Today ten courses of the richest foods are not proof that a hostess is a woman of the world. The proof demanded now is far more difficult — exquisite quality in every detail.

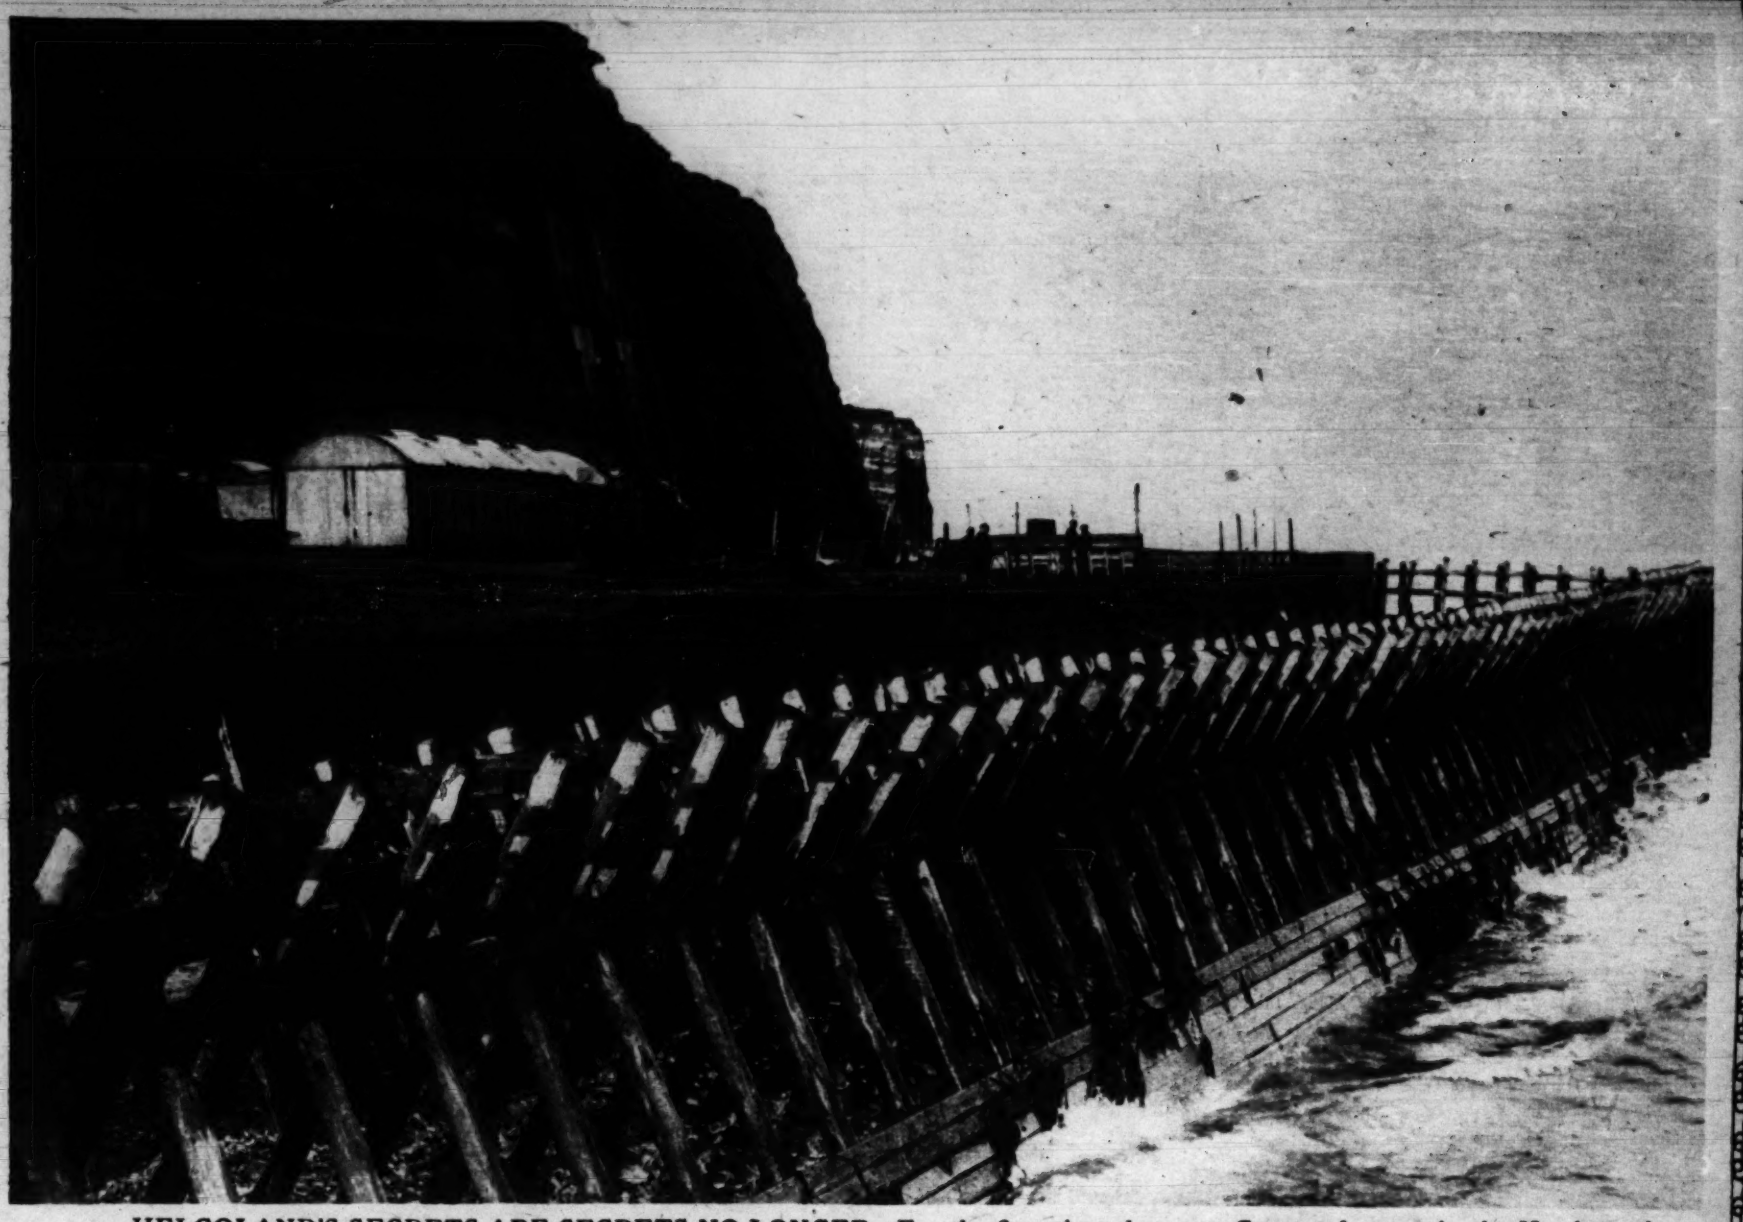
Many hostesses attain this perfection in every detail except one —the coffee. This is the ultimate test.

Think over the most distinguished hostesses in your set. Remember what perfect coffee they serve. Ask some of them which coffee it is. See if the reply is not "Yuban."

By the greatest coffee merchant in the world, this coffee was selected from all others to be served to his most intimate friends.

Wherever taste is exceptionally exacting, there you will find that Yuban is served. Its fragrance, its fine, mellow aroma, its rich flavor, are giving many a clever hostess distinction.





HELGOLAND'S SECRETS ARE SECRETS NO LONGER—For the first time the great German fortress in the North sea has been photographed by some one other than a German army camera man. This, one of a group of pictures which reached the United States recently, shows an unfinished structure which was to have been a ponderous concrete breakwater on the east side of the island. Workmen have been dismantling the Helgoland fortifications in compliance with the terms of the peace treaty.

To Every Boy Who Loves Real Sport

—and to all fathers of growing boys

IS THERE any sport nearer to a real boy's heart than rifle shooting? What is more wonderful for a boy to learn than trigger magic? Can any other pastime give a boy more valuable training?

Here's a new shooting outfit for American boys—the W. J. R. C. Range Kit. It contains everything a boy could possibly need for rifle practice—a gun, cartridges, cartridge belt, targets, gun case and cleaning outfit — all packed in a strong, handsome kit.

The new Range Kit is the official outfit of the Winchester Junior Rifle Corps. With this equipment any boy can compete for the famous Winchester trophies, the Marksman, the Sharpshooter, and Expert Rifleman medals. Thousands of boys all over the country are now winning these rewards of skill.

The rifle in the outfit is the famous Winchester .22 caliber bolt-action single shot. It is made in two sizes, one for small boys and beginners, and one for men and older boys. Both these models have the strength, beauty and accuracy for which all Winchester guns are famous.

Each outfit contains a copy of the W. J. R. C. rule book, which tells how to handle a rifle safely, and gives complete instructions for laying out an indoor or outdoor rifle range.

Thousands of fathers will give their boys the W. J. R. C. Range Kit for Christmas this year—it's the kind of present every real boy wants.

Girls! Beautify Your Hair With "Danderine"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

EASTMAN

THE PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER, Mrs. W. G. McAdoo, and her stepdaughter, Miss Sally McAdoo, went out on location one afternoon recently to watch "Little Mary" make scenes for her coming release, "Pollyanna." Miss Pickford entertained them with charming cordiality and did her best to put them on the "inside" of things. The pleasant day spent thus in South Pasadena, Cal., was followed by a sad one. Early the following morning Mrs. McAdoo received word of the President's illness and, with her husband, immediately left for Washington. Mae Tinee.

MIRIAM COOPER lends her charm and beauty to Fox productions. Miss Cooper was born in Baltimore and educated there and at the New York Art school. She started her screen career with the old Reliance Majestic; appeared in "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" and since then has been starred in many pictures by the company with which she is at present affiliated. As "Evangeline" she gave an exquisitely beautiful and touching interpretation.

Miss Cooper, who in private life is the wife of R. A. Walsh, a director, has brown eyes and dark hair. She looks frail, but those who know her say she is an indefatigable sportswoman. She loves best to swim and ride. Mae Tinee.

MYRTLE STEDMAN, formerly of Chicago, has many friends who will be delighted to know that she is once more to devote most of her time to making pictures.

Miss Stedman has just completed the role of Cherry Malotte in the coming Rex Beach picture, "The Silver Horde." She has also been engaged to play in C. Garner Sullivan's story, "Sex" In this picture Louise Glaum, who has been treading the straight and narrow for quite some time, returns to her former role of "vamp."

Miss Stedman is a singer of some note and it was her voice that first won her recognition from the public that afterward acclaimed her a clever picture actress. Mae Tinee.

They flash with color—veils, collars, scarfs and handkerchiefs.

DAME FASHION is so arrogant! It's not enough for her if you go flower-gay in frocks, in blouses, even underwear. Your collars, too, veils, waistcoats, spats, your very handkerchiefs must be tricked out in lovely reds, blues, greens and yellows.

But you just can't find these joyful things in the shops—they're sorry—they keep "hoping to have them in soon."

Only now you CAN have them! You can wash your handkerchiefs, veils and collars every color in the rainbow!

Wash your spats and collars any color you like

You just wash them with the wonderful new colored flakes—Twink. And they're laundered as perfectly as though you did them with Lux—they're daringly, bewitchingly gay!

The Twink colors turn out right—every time—without the slightest streakiness or dingy look. And so fast that you can wash your Twinked blouse or collar several times with Lux before you need Twink it again.

It's amazingly easy and quick. Into the bright suds go your veils or collars, your blouse or nightgown, and all in a twinkling you've a whole adorable row of new accessories. Blouses, too, that the sun has faded, stockings that have become too light, all are Twinked back to their first brightness.

Get Twink from your druggist, the 5c and 10c stores or any department store. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass. (Makers of Lux.)

As stated in this announcement, I am willing to pay any price within reason for good workable photoplay plots suitable to my needs. I have seen enough of the Palmer Plan to know that it will show a writer how to put his stories in a form that will enable me to give them proper consideration. The stories we have purchased from Palmer Plan students are the best evidence of the value of Palmer Plan training. I urge every man or woman of creative ability to enroll in the Palmer Plan, for the market was never so bare of clever new plays as it is today.

For story ideas that can be used in Motion Pictures

Stars and Producers Are Searching the Country for New Workable Photoplays

TODAY "The Play's the Thing" in motion pictures. Producers today are willing to pay you $100 to $500 for a clever short comedy—$500 to $2,000 for a five-reel dramatic script—and they will protect your rights as author.

This is why: Five years ago you went to the "movies" for the novelty of it. Today the novelty is gone. You want to see a real play. The result is a famine in story plots. For the studios around Los Angeles alone need approximately 3,000 new stories each year.

Producers must have new material—for with the change in public taste a good new plot is the basis of any successful production. And as yet not enough people have been trained to write for the screen. Literary ability is not the thing required for photoplay writing. For the story is told not in words, but in the language of pictures. What is needed is an imagination that can weave stories with action.

A Famine in Ideas

With this serious condition facing the motion picture industry—a veritable famine in story ideas—Frederick Palmer, formerly a staff writer for Keystone, Triangle, William Fox and Universal; a man who in nine months wrote fifty-two scenarios for the Universal Company—was induced to start the Palmer Photoplay Institute to encourage photoplay writing.

Send for This

Our Booklet, "The Secret of Successful Photoplay Writing," explains the Palmer Plan in detail. In it you will find the autographed endorsement of the Palmer Plan by practically every big star and producer.

Under the Palmer Plan you are furnished with a handbook and cross references to scenarios that have been produced. Under the Palmer Plan you also receive one year's free advisory service—personal, constructive criticism of your manuscripts by Mr. Palmer.

Mrs. Kate Corbaley, former photoplaywright for Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, is at the head of our special marketing service. In constant touch with the studios, she knows their needs. And her sole work is to help our students sell their photoplays.

Since we started a little over a year ago, many of our students have sold their plays, some for as high as $1000. A number of our students have already taken positions at the studios.

Photoplay writing is now a highly paid art. It offers an unusual opportunity for any one with story-telling ability. A simple story with one good thought is enough. For movies are made for the masses. Our booklet, "The Secret of Successful Photoplay Writing," explains how to learn this new art. A postal card brings it to you. If you are interested at all, we urge you to write us now while this matter is before you. Fill out the coupon.

"I am using your bath-brush, hand-brush, and tooth-brush and find them superior to any other make I have ever used; I had to purchase the bath and hand-brush from you direct, as our dealers say that these goods are too 'high-priced' to sell in this comunity, but if true, it is merely because the buying public do not know quality in this city who would appreciate so good an article if they could see them and make the purchase at our local stores. Lover's Reckoning

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

Illustrated by Herbert Morton Stoops

by John Fleming Wilson

Into the Heart of a Tornado to Find the Heart of a Girl.

WHEN old Rufus Hinstead gave young Henry Peckham the little steamer Rose of Avalon he received that debonair gentleman's curt thanks with a baffling smile. San Francisco's water front slapped Harry on the back and said he deserved to go as master of a nice packet and predicted a speedy promotion to a big ship. But the newly made Capt. H. Peckham avoided friends and acquaintances and went aboard his new command to think about his future with a sinking heart. Hinstead was a man of his word. He had fulfilled his promise to his beloved daughter that he would give Harry a command. Without a doubt he would carry out his other promise that she should never marry him.

Cornelia Hinstead was very young, very good looking, and canny in her ability to learn the secrets of others and keep her own. Rufus was perfectly aware that Harry Peckham wanted to marry his daughter. He was utterly ignorant of the fact that that young woman was in love with Harry. He knew she liked him. Because the crabbed owner of the Merchants and Packers' line always went as far as he dared to gratify Cornelia's whims he had agreed to make Harry a skipper at the first opportunity. He did not know that Cornelia had sworn by the seven stars of the Lover's Constellation that when Harry was captain she would tell him whether she loved him or not. So he gruffly, in the most matter of fact way, promoted the young fellow and then proceeded to smash any hopes of marrying the heiress.

The Rose of Avalon lay in Oakland the morning Harry got his papers as her commander, and thereby his permission from Cornelia to come and ask her the great question. But where was she? This was the puzzle that Harry had to solve, and he went at it just as he had gone about wooing her in the brief days in Honolulu—wasting not a moment.

"I might have known Rufus would behave that way," he told himself as he lit his pipe and sat down by the big desk that was now his and stared at the dark cabin which was home. "He cables me to quit the Sea Dog and come up to take a ship. He gives me the ship and sees to it that Cornelia is nowhere around. I must find her."

Finding her, he knew, would be no easy task. Rufus Hinstead traded to any and all ports, had business connections and society friends in every part of the world, and doubtless had sent Cornelia far enough away to make it impossible for the new captain of the Rose of Avalon to communicate with her.

"If she's in Alaska I'll have a cargo for Singapore," he mused. "If she's visiting the Neales in Hongkong it'll be Balboa for mine. If she's down in Valparaiso I'll find myself bound for Shanghai."

He thought this over for a couple of hours, then proceeded about his business. In due time Cornelia would learn of his rise in life, recognize its significance, and give him his opportunity.

As has been stated, that young lady knew how to keep her own secrets. She had successfully concealed from this assiduous suitor the fact that she cared for him. Her dealings had been on the level basis of friendship. True, she had made Harry feel that he was her chosen friend; she had even (in parting) allowed him to discuss a future that might bring a change, the ardently desired change in their relations. It was on these scanty facts that he counted so confidently.

The girl opened her eyes and looked into the calm eyes of her lover. He stood immovable, and smiled back.

The Rose of Avalon loaded general cargo for Nome, came back with government stuff, unloaded, and took on a cargo of machinery for Quito. Still Harry Peckham had gained no clew to Cornelia's whereabouts. A letter written from Nome was quietly returned to him. A cable he had sent to the Neales, friends of the Hinsteads for many years in Hongkong, elicted a curt denial of any knowledge of Miss Hinstead's whereabouts.

In Quito, after wrestling with strange methods of transportation and doing odd feats of business for the Merchants and Packers, Capt. Peckham sat down and did a bold thing. He wrote a formal letter to old Rufus Hinstead himself and asked permission to pay his addresses to Cornelia. He mailed this epistle via New York, got back to steamer, and sailed as ordered to Asuncion. Eleven weeks later he berthed the Rose of Avalon in San Francisco and went to the office, on tiptoe, to learn what reply Rufus had ready to his letter.

Hinstead was away, he discovered. No one knew or cared to tell where he was gone. In three days Harry found nothing further about either Cornelia or her father, spent a wretched twenty-four hours sitting on the beach below Sutro Heights, and went back to his job with an expression of weary age in his usually bright eyes.

His chief engineer bluntly took him to task. "You're young yet, cap'n," said the experienced mechanic, "and you let things run hot. You look a rotten 35 and you are only 26. Cut out the high living. Old Hinstead likes his young skippers to stay young."

"Where the dickens is the old man?" Peckham demanded.

The engineer cocked an eye at the great blowing clouds in the sky and shook his head.

"They tell me he's off on a ja'nt somewhere," his reply was. "But Henderson on the Curlew told me he put Rufus aboard the Turbinia. So I reckon something down in the south needs attention."

"And we sail for Sitka tomorrow," growled Peckham.

The chief glanced at his commander with a gleam of frosty sympathy in his eyes. He seemed about to say further, thought better of it, and returned to his engines.

That night, seated in his lonely cabin, Harry Peckham faced the truth. He had relied on Cornelia's promise that when he got his ship she would listen to his suit and give him her answer. There could be no doubt that she knew he had fulfilled the condition she herself laid down—he was master of a steamer. Why hadn't she so much as let him know where she was? Why didn't she drop him a line to tell him she was glad? What did it mean that she had suddenly dropped out of his life? There could be but one explanation—she cared nothing for him and thought it easier to avoid him than to explain.

For a couple of hours he fought himself. He was discouraged. When all was said and done he had worked these last two years for Cornelia. She had been always in his thoughts. He had reckoned constantly on her approval of his achievements. The tw

THE TEENIE WEENIES

TAKE A DIP IN A BATH TUB. By Wm. DONAHEY.

"I'VE got a big piece of news, I have," announced Paddy Pin breathlessly as he hurried into the Teenie Weenie dining room in answer to the bell for lunch.

"O what is it?" cried the Lady of Fashion, and the others all gazed eagerly at the tallest Teenie Weenie.

"Why, there's a family near here that's just gone off for three days. I saw 'em go, I did, and they've got the dandiest bath tub you ever saw, an' the water'll still be warm in their tank, an' we can go over there right after lunch an' have a swim, just like it was summertime."

"Not right after lunch—wait an hour, wait an hour," said the Doctor, briskly.

"O shucks!" cried the Dunce, who was already bolting his food so he could go swimming as soon as possible. But the General frowned at him. "We will all go over," he said, "but of course not till an hour after lunch. Anybody who goes before may be sick, and certainly will not be allowed any dessert for a week."

The Dunce scowled, but ate more slowly, and when the hour was over marched to the tub in company with all the others.

It was a beautiful tub, and the faucets luckily turned easily so the Turk and Paddy Pin were able to fill the tub full of water, and very soon the little people were enjoying their huge swimming tank to the full. They rigged up a diving board, and used a cake of soap for a raft.

Only those who swam very well indeed were allowed to go in, however, as the tub was so full that nobody could touch bottom, not even by diving.

"I just bet I'll touch bottom," boasted the Dunce. "I—I'll get a nail, and h-hold it in my arms, an' it'll be so heavy it'll pull me way down."

"Be careful you don't break your neck," warned the Doctor, but the Dunce, after a great deal of trouble, found a nail and managed to get it up to a high shelf.

"N-now," he cried, clasping it in his arms, "l-ladies and gentlemen, you will soon see the greatest diving act in the Teenie Weenie world! I'm going to j-jump off from way up here, and go way to the bottom."

"Hey, you, stop that nonsense," yelled the Policeman. But it was too late. The Dunce had jumped! There was a great splash and down he went, nail and all.

Breathless the others waited to see if he would come up safely. It seemed as if he stayed down a very long time, and the Lady of Fashion was just beginning to be nervous when, with a lot of spluttering, up came the Dunce.

"Well," demanded the Cook, "did you and your nail touch bottom?"

"Naw," exclaimed the Dunce in a very disgusted tone. "I—I g-guess the nail kept on a-goin', so maybe it's down there now, but the w-water got too deep for me. An'—an' I d-don't like a nail for a swimmin' partner either."

"You poor fellow. I shouldn't think you would," cried the Lady of Fashion, and all the Teenie Weenies then saw a bump on the Dunce's head, which swelled and swelled as they looked at it.

Everybody else, however, had a lovely time, and the Doctor soon fixed up the Dunce, so he went back happily to swim with the others.

And when they were through, five of the strongest men pulled out the stopper with great care, so that the tub was left just exactly as the little people had found it.

LOVER'S RECKONING

times he had displayed unusual determination, skill, and daring, it had been for her sake. The encomiums he had received from hard-headed superiors were nothing. Now his purpose in life was gone. He was without a spur to his ambition. The prospect of getting a big ship—and never getting Cornelia—was ashes in his mouth.

But his natural manhood won the battle. He rose from his seat a matured, sober, unhappy man. Cornelia was gone out of his life. But work and honor and duty remained. He would play no coward, show no white feather. His love was clean and pure and honest. He would not disgrace it. If the lovely girl whom he had adored with such devotion had lightly slipped away to other friendships, had gone to tantalize and delight another lover, it should not be his fault if she recalled Harry Peckham without pride.

In this spirit he set about his work the next morning and got the Rose of Avalon speedily to sea. Two weeks later he brought her back and the chief engineer felt moved to confide to his ancient chum, the port superintendent, that young Harry Peckham had "taken hold."

"I always give Rufus credit for pickin' 'em right," he remarked. "But in this case I knew you didn't exactly cotton to the notion of settin' a kid up on the bridge of the Rose and I figured that Rufus kind of did it to please Cornelia. For several voyages I thought Rufus would take it all back. He can't, now. Harry Peckham is a real skipper, a real man, and a proper sailor."

The port superintendent stared thoughtfully at the Rose's old fashioned bows, newly gilt; at her high, shining bridge; at the general neatness of her, and nodded gravely.

"No, I had nothing to do with giving Peckham the Rose," he assented. I'm not the man to shirk responsibility at times. But not for worlds would I take the burden of setting Harry Peckham up there in command. It was Rufus' business and he's responsible. Not I. No where, no time. Not I!"

"Responsible for what?" growled the engineer curiously.

The superintendent shifted his tobacco and gave no response other than a slow glance at his companion.

"You better count on twenty-two days' steaming," he said presently.

"Twenty-two days!" croaked the other. "Thought we were loading for Ensenada."

"You are," was the calm reply. "I just warn ye, that's all."

"Rufus say anything?"

"Rufus ain't here and hasn't been here in a fortnight and no word from him," the superintendent answered slowly. "Nobody knows what business he's on. But my notion is, the Rose of Avalon better be full up with fuel and supplies. Just a notion, of course."

The chief digested this and nodded. "In that case I better be off," he suggested. "Told the captain?"

"I don't see any call for it," was the reply.

The chief debated to himself the possible reasons for the hint he had been given, reached no conclusion, and kept his usual silence when Peckham remarked qurtly on the amount of oil taken aboard.

"It takes oil to carry oil," Peckham suggested. "But your department pays the freight, of course."

The engineer had no good reason to propose and said nothing. He had served the Merchants and Packers many years. He was ready for any event.

The Rose of Avalon duly sailed out the Golden Gate for the Mexican port and vanished to the south'ard. She hadn't reached Cypress Point before San Francisco called her across the blue with strange orders.

Peckham read the message his wireless operator handed him and rubbed his eyes. This was what he read:

"SF M&P Tuttle 4pm.

"Peckham CPG:

"Orders signed Hinstead this pm for CPG meet SS Playmore Koko Head. Immediate. Cancel Ensenada. Best of luck."

"Ask the chief engineer to step up here," Peckham ordered and resumed his study of this puzzling message.

The engineer read the slip of paper and nodded. "That oil for the furnaces will be needed, I'm thinkin'," he remarked.

"The Playmore is a colonial liner," Peckham suggested. "Fast, too. Better haul up and cross her course, I reckon. Might miss her. Hinstead doesn't give us much time."

The Rose of Avalon altered her course in five minutes and steamed into the roaring trades. Four days later her wireless operator reported success in picking up the Playmore.

Peckham sighed with relief and made for the position given. At midnight he rang the Rose of Avalon's engines to a standstill and peered into the purple dusk of a glorious night which was faintly pierced by the lights of a big steamship driving northward.

"That's the Playmore," he announced to his mate. "Now for the old man's instructions."

"Like as not some salvage case," returned the officer, licking his lips expectantly. "Rufus has made a killing that way more'n once. Great old boy, Rufus!"

The big liner swept out of the night and swung swiftly, a boat dropping down her tall flank while the water still creamed against her plates. Five minutes later Rufus Hinstead climbed to the deck of the Rose and drew her skipper aside. Peckham saw that the usually quiet, immobile countenance of his employer was haggard. The always austere voice was cracked.

"Peckham," Hinstead rasped, "Cornelia left Auckland seven weeks ago. I can't find her."

"Steamer?" demanded the young man quietly.

"Northumbrian, Peckham."

The two men stared at each other. The officer in the boat below sang out for orders. Rufus Hinstead suddenly made his decision and went to the rail. His cracked voice carried far into the night.

"Present . . . compliments . . . obliged . . . no need . . . stay here . . . good night . . . thanks."

He returned to the side of the Rose of Avalon's young captain and the two of them pondered the problem fate had set them. The Playmore hoisted up her boat and drove off towards the coast, blowing her farewell signal as she passed. Harry Peckham automatically answered it with hand on the siren lever. Then he managed a few words:

"The Northumbrian is reported lost . . . all hands . . . gale . . ."

Rufus cleared his throat. "Bound for Honolulu from Suva. Thought I might pick up some news. None."

Later the old man remarked, as if it explained everything, "I got your letter. It struck me you—struck me you might have an idea."

Harry Peckham's eyes met his companion's steadily. "Mind telling me what you wrote—her—about me?"

"I told her I'd given you the Rose, that was about all, except I warned her not to lay too much stress on it. She always was a friend of yours, Peckham. Liked you, and all that. If you'd kept your place and not got it into your head you wanted to marry my girl, everything would have been all right."

"You mean, you sent her to Auckland so she wouldn't, couldn't see me? I couldn't have any chance to see her?"

"That's about the case," Hinstead admitted miserably. "Hang you, anyway!"

Harry shook himself together. He spoke capably and to the point.

"No matter about that, sir. The fact is, she got your letter that you'd made me a skipper in the line and she quietly goes and books passage for the coast on the Northumbrian. That packet is reported missing, with all hands. You and I know what that means—in those seas. The Directory describes a thousand islands the survivors might make a landing on."

"A thousand places where nobody would ever hear of 'em, Peckham! But I thought—there's a chance—it ought to mean a lot to you. You and I—" Rufus tried to smile and failed—"have a kind of common interest."

With an alert and decisive movement Captain Peckham laid his hand on the engine room telegraph and thrust the lever over to full speed ahead. Then he gave a low voiced order to the watch officer and returned to his employer's side. The Rose of Avalon swung her nose on her new course and began to pick up speed to the powerful and steady impulse of her engines.

"Oil?" quavered Rufus presently.

"Twenty days with care," Peckham replied. "I wondered—well, it's right here, anyway."

Hinstead thought this over and finally made a single remark: "I'll fire whoever ordered that much fuel aboard this packet. Then I'll give him a half interest in the business."

Six days later Harry Peckham emerged from the chart room of the Rose, stared long and studiously at the smooth, greasy seas that swept athwart the course, and then scanned the profundity of the sky.

"Dirty weather coming, sir," suggested the mate, lounging against the rail.

Peckham clipped his lips over the reply he was about to make and maintained his steady watch on the sea. An hour afterward he changed the course slightly. Then he sought Hinstead, who lay exhausted in his cabin.

"Mr. Hinstead," said the younger man quietly, "we are in for a heavy gale. I had best be frank with you. I have carefully figured all possible positions for the wreck of the Northumbrian and all possible courses her boats might make, if they left her. I want you to come and look at the chart, sir."

Rufus got up and accompanied Peckham to the chart room, where a huge chart of the South Pacific lay pinned open. On it had been carefully drawn a score of lines from the line marking the usual course of liners steaming from Suva in the Fijis to Honolulu in the Hawaiians.

"I've given the Northumbrian four days' leeway," Peckham explained. "We know the exact date of that gale and I reckoned just where she would be, at her usual rate of steaming, when it struck her."

Hinstead groaned. "Hillyard, master of the Northumbrian, was no fool," he answered. "He can figure a storm as well as you. He'd naturally run away and out of it."

"He would," Peckham agreed. "I've allowed for that. I've calculated everything to the last detail and plotted it here. The strange thing is that every course possible to a small boat, or to the Northumbrian herself during and after the gale, runs down to here."

Hinstead stared at the point on the chart where Peckham's finger tip lay. True enough, each line representing a possible course from the line marking the liner's usual route came down across the white paper and drew in towards the others as the blades of a fan center into the handle. There was no doubt of it, small boat, raft, derelict wreck, drawn by tide and wind, must inevitably arrive at this spot.

"Yes," Hinstead croaked, gazing at the point that represented their goal.

"I worked this out several years ago for the Maypole," Peckham went on. "I was a boy on the old Garnet Hill those days. The Maypole drove under in a gale right here, where the Northumbrian ran into this storm. We picked up two boats and an old shellback three months later right on the dot of our figures. That's where Cor—where Miss Hinstead is."

"If she is alive," whispered her father. "Well, in God's name let's set our course for that position." He lifted his weary eyes and glimmered at the young man. "If she isn't there—we'll be sure."

Peckham did not give any sign of assent. Instead he met the old man's flickering gaze steadily.

"I better tell you, Mr. Hinstead, that the only land down there is a broken atoll. The lagoon is half filled up, from all I can discover. It is no place for shipwrecked people to—to stop long."

"Why don't you drive on, then?" demanded Hinstead, with sudden tremulous fear in his tones.

Peckham shifted his eyes to the barometer swinging on the wall. He made a significant, slight, despairing gesture. Hinstead leaned over and studied the instrument, his pallid lips falling apart.

"You see?" Peckham muttered. "Dropping like lead. Brewing one of those gales that sweep this sea clean, every now and again. Inside twelve hours the Rose will be fighting for her life."

Hinstead snatched the dividers from the drawer and feverishly measured the distance from the spot where the lines converged to the red ink that showed the Rose of Avalon's last position. He straightened up fiercely.

"You coward!" he roared. "It's only sixteen hours' steam to where—to that place! What if a gale is coming on? Afraid! Gimme the ship! I'll run her myself, gale or no gale!"

Peckham laughed sharply. "Right-o. But just look to these figures a moment, Mr. Hinstead. I've plotted the path of this storm. You know as well as I that the Northumbrian was a better sea boat, more powerful, and better manned than this one. She couldn't buck that gale. And if you will look at my plot here you will see that for us to steam for that spot means we must hold on towards the center of the coming storm. We can't run out of it, nor take it easy, nor lay to, nor drive before it. If we're to reach Cornelia Hinstead I've got to drive the Rose of Avalon right through, no matter what comes—nor who goes. Is that plain?"

The head of the Merchants and Packers dropped his head on his breast. None knew better than he the import of this warning. He was aware that skippers who deliberately thrust their ships into such storms rarely survived to suffer the penalties outraged owners imposed. On his mind were the lives of the two score on board the Rose, men whom he knew, who had worked for him, some of them for years, faithfully and well. He felt the urge of compassion for their wives and children back on the coast, who ate his bread and trusted him. Who was he to send a ship to destruction to save his own flesh and blood—if that, indeed, were possible? Destruction? In his heart of hearts he knew the old steamer would never survive. And there was the vast, terrible probability that Cornelia had gone down with the Northumbrian. after all.

In that deadly silence Harry Peckham studied the chart with a calm, imperturbable face. He looked oddly youthful as he stood on the swaying deck, cap on the back of his head, feet braced apart, hands on his hips. His eyes read the ominous story on the outspread sheet without a quiver, without flinching. Suddenly he threw his head back, picked up a speaking tube, and called the bridge. He set a new course.

Hinstead slowly raised his eyes. "You are going—there?"

Harry nodded briefly. "I am. I'm skipper of this steamer. I'm going after—after Cornelia."

Hinstead formed the words with difficulty: "If she isn't there?"

"Then I'll see her in the next world and tell her I met her half way."

"Half way?"

Peckham laughed. "A long while ago your daughter told me I wasn't to ask her to marry me till I was master of a steamer myself. 'Then come and ask me,' she said. You tried to put it out of my power to ask her that question, sir. But when she heard I'd got my steamer at last—she sailed on the Northumbrian for the coast. Why? So that I could ask her to marry me." The young man's face was alight with passion. "And that's why I'm going to drive this old packet down to where she is. She's there. She must be. She'd survive because she'd know I'd come. I'll see her tomorrow, sir. Tomorrow!"

He quit the chart room with a firm, agile step and went to the bridge, leaving the owner of the Merchants and Packers to sit and stare at a simple scientific instrument that silently scorned the hopes and aspirations and strength of young men and lovers and proclaimed simply that death was swiftly approaching.

When the crew of the Rose of Avalon realized that their commander was ignoring the portents of the sky and the sea, and paying no attention to the rigid rules established by centuries of observation and disaster, there was an immediate protest. Peckham received the objectors on the bridge. They stated their case with the awkwardness of men who must assert an axiom. The gist of their plaint was that no man ever deliberately sought the heart of a South Pacific tornado; they demanded that the Rose be promptly put on a course that would take her out of the danger zone as much as possible.

"Not I," Peckham retorted. "I'll be brief with you men. I'm going to run down a position where the survivors of the Northumbrian are supposed to be. If it lies in the track of this gale coming, I don't care. I'm going. You're going with me, too. I don't guarantee to pull you out of it, but I have reasons of my own for thinking we'll manage to save those shipwrecked folks down two hundred miles from here. Anyway, we're going to try. That'll do. No more."

The crew, as is generally the case, yielded for the hour to the summons to duty. But the chief engineer was blunt enough to his commander. "They'll do their duty till it gets really nasty—you know how nasty these gales are down here—and then they'll quit, and the Rose will quit—and nobody will ever be the wiser. My advice is to do the seamanlike thing now and run that position down after the gale."

Peckham replied briefly and to the point:

"After this gale there won't be any use running that position down. There won't be harm waved his hand, braced himself. A huge sea tripped out of the distance with a his most imperial manner, forgetting Gwennie, and stood at the top of the stairs. She might not come his way, but if she did, Mamie would see him standing magnificently at his post.

A girl passed along to the packing room. "Mamie's buying frillies," she whispered excitedly; "goin' an awful splash in spring goods. You'll have her here in the shake of a lamb's tail. She's mad on lace today. Heard her ask if we'd collars to match the things she bought."

Mr. Macaulay Bunc preened his wing feathers, and Mr. Bunc committed an error of pride. He spent two precious minutes combing his mustache for Mamie. Then with a shock he heard a giggle and the fragment of a song—Mamie's song sung sotto voce—and his mind said to him, "My hat, if Mamie goes to that there young Jelks——"

There are moments so horrible that even the minds of shop walkers cannot grasp them. This was a first class example.

Mamie, plump, maternal, awful in her dignity, ripe, comely, blooming with the rich flower of poudre rice, conscious that she had a spending capacity of a kind to make Emporiums humble, sailed across to Gwennie, sat down, and entered into that pentecost of calamity to which the shop was doomed. She asked in her fruity, good natured, but I'll stand no darn nonsense voice:

"Now, can you show me something nice and pretty to go with a 'and embroidered frock, cut full, y'know? Something reelly natty, me dear."

And Gwennie retorted, even as Mr. Bunc drew within earshot.

"Wot, a little bit o' lace to fetch the Lodger?"

Mr. Macaulay Bunc grasped. The calamitous impudence of it all but undermined his sanity. At the same time, the swift brilliance of the mimicry dazzled him. It sounds rather cheap, of course, but then the poet laureate does not write Mamie's songs. If you know Mamie's songs, you will see that Gwennie had adapted one of the most popular to the demands of the moment. You will not, however, be able to see what Mr. Bunc saw, the soft, meaning lift of the shoulders, the naughty gesture of the hands, the wicked and dimpled toss of the head that gave the words a saucy flavor beyond their inanity.

"I don't like yer kay-ser mustache; it's pro-German. Go away, Brother Hun."

But if you have seen Mamie at her best, you will know exactly how it was done. It was Mamie to the Limelife.

If you have ever been to a sewing tea when a bomb has exploded under the sugar basin you will be able to realize some of the emotions of that moment. Mr. Bunc sprang forward, ready to use physical violence if the honor of the Emporium so demanded. Mamie drew herself up with that plump hauteur which always suggests that her stay laces had been pulled in (suddenly) another six inches. And Gwennie—Gwennie reached for the jabot boxes in a jigging, Mamie manner.

Mamie said in cold and cultured tones: "The bloomin' gal's gone potty." And she put up her gold and tortoise shell lorgnette, for Mamie's wings at the gallery may be daring, but they are also myopic. Gwennie came forward with the boxes, and the little, tango shuffle of her movement was Mamie, all Mamie. And she said—but, no, the little devil sang, in Mamie's coyly brazen way:

"A little bit o' lace to wear on Sundays,
A ducky bit o' lace to finish off yer blouse,
The ole man's took the kids out an'——"

Mr. Macaulay Bunc came up to in-fighting distance.

"Miss Jelks," he cried harshly, "please retire to the rest room an' await me."

Mamie lowered her lorgnette, turned reluctantly from Gwennie, swallowed Mr. Bunc with one bite of her calm gaze.

She enunciated:

"I don't like yer kay-ser mustache; it's pro-German. Go away, Brother Hun."

The shopwalker swallowed hard and gurgled.

"It's my duty, Miss Floyd."

"You're face don't fit yer very well—an' I 'ate yer ears," said Mamie without passion. "Go away, do, when you 'ear a delicate 'int."

She turned to Gwennie.

"Dearie," she said deliciously, "what are you a-doing a-wasting of yerself in this ole dirty linen basket? You just do that all over again."

Gwennie did it again, daintily, crisply, wonderfully. Mamie sat back, laughed, clapped her hands, and when it was all over she was up and kissing Gwennie with all the fervor of a rather nice bear.

"Well, you are cough drop," she burst out. "An' you just ain't going to 'ide your bushel under a jabot counter no more. You come along with me. Right now. Ernie must see you. I daren't let 'im miss this. I've got me car outside. Come along, dearie."

Mr. Bunc owed it to the Emporium to protest.

"Reelly, Miss Floyd, the—ah—domestic economy of the—ah—department, you know. It will—ah—suffer if you—ah—borrow our Miss Jelks."

"Borrow, be blinked," said Mamie amiably. "You don't think I'm going to let a gal like that remain 'ere on nothing—three a week—do you? Don't be a silly ass. She's worth 'er weight in 'undreds."

"But—ah—Miss Floyd, in the middle of the—ah—business day?"

"Go an' eat pickles," said Mamie. "An' you were ready to give 'er the sack ten minutes ago. I know you were, so you needn't stand there trying to think out a good lie. Well, England's Best Female Imitator—that's your, dearie, from this minnit—is givin' you the sack instead. An' if you wants a week's salary—'ow much is it, tuppence 'apenny?—in loo of notice, she'll pay you out of her first takin's on the 'alls. Come along, dearie, we'll soon show Erne—an' them."

And Gwennie showed them.

And, curious fact, when Gwennie drives up in her "moter," and Mr. Bunc hears the girls giggle down the counters as she mentions it is a "brighta forenoon" in the authentic Bunc manner, he giggles himself. It is not a sheepish giggle, but the giggle of sheer pride. He has the honor to be mimicked by England's Best Female Imitator and the Top of the Bill.

You should hear him telling Mrs. Bunc how it was by practicing on him that Gwennie was able to attain fame. From the way he talks you will realize that it was he who really cherished her genius, and as for sacking her—he'd never even thought of that crowning infamy.

Life is a funny old thing.

THE FINAL COCKTAIL

By Oney Fred Sweet

thing somewhere and right away they know where."

Mr. Wemp, dispensing with the clock shelf custom, spread the soiled bill on the table. Slowly he started to carefully fold it together.

Mr. Malby's eyes glittered covetously, but his lips still voiced complaint.

"Here's this money," flared Wemp decisively. "Now take it or leave it alone. Which you going to do?"

And with one hand Mr. Malby clutched the currency, while with the other he handed to Mr. Wemp what that gentleman considered its equivalent.

"Things look bad all over the country," sighed Mr. Malby. "I ain't surprised at backwoods like it is here being dry for twenty years, but they tell me it's soon going to shut down everywhere. They took this country from the Indians and if it goes dry they might as well give it back to 'em."

Mr. Malby attempted to keep up conversation, for he noted that Mr. Wemp was not sinking into the mellow mood that heretofore had accompanied the draining of a similar number of cups. Mr. Malby had that afternoon diluted the contents of his vanishing flagons. But he had done a more profitable job than he had planned. He saw Mr. Wemp depart with steady step. Mr. Malby congratulated himself. How simple the thing was all around.

But Mr. Wemp was a connoisseur. Finding himself going home sober, he realized that he had been imposed upon. He had no headache in the morning.

All right. He was wise. He would leave Mr. Malby and his domicile entirely alone in the future. He would not go near. Mr. Malby would get no more of his money under false pretenses.

Mr. Malby stood the boycott until his patience gave out. Then, for the first time in his business career, he went forth to solicit. It was just a word that he dropped in Mr. Wemp's ear when he met him on the street, but a word was sufficient—he had the "real goods." True, the whole country had gone dry, and what one did get by hook or crook was mighty high in price, but he, Mr. Malby, had it.

Mr. Malby knew he had it, because he had made it himself that morning. There had been no disguised shipments to him for moons, but Mr. Squint Malby had not gone out of business. And as Mr. Wemp demanded stuff with a kick in it, well, the kick ought to be there—Mr. Malby's personally concocted kick producer consisted of a mixture of lemon extract, lye, fusel oil, Jamaica ginger, and hair tonic.

There was something of the atmosphere of the dear bygone when Mr. Wemp called that night—preliminary conversation and the unmercenary method of payment in advance by the clock shelf route. Mr. Wemp never bickered about costs so long as he secured what he considered value received.

"There's no need of us two ever having any business quarrel," purred Mr. Malby, serving. "With the plan I've got now the world can go as dry as a chip and I'll get along."

Mr. Wemp said nothing. He could not imbibe and converse at one and the same time.

But he did make a wry face following the draining of one of Mr. Malby's decanters. His face remained twisted while he peered into the dregs.

And after a moment or two he got up from his chair, grabbed it by the back, and hurled it at Mr. Malby's head. Mr. Malby, appreciating the difference between a man who has become intoxicated and one who has suddenly gone wild, hurried from his house by the side of the road, and, finding that Mr. Wemp was directly behind him, he kept right on hurrying.

Mr. Malby craved a place of safety. Rushing along at remarkable speed, considering his weight, there flashed through his mind the thought that possibly he had erred in his home recipe—maybe too much lye. Mr. Wemp would probably be on the rampage for some time. Mr. Malby crossed a moonlit field, only to discover, on glancing back, that Mr. Wemp was crossing that same field close behind him. Perhaps it was force of habit that influenced Mr. Malby's destination.

Anyhow, "Get me behind those bars and lock the big door," he panted to the sheriff. "Make it sixty days, and let me in quick."

LOVERS RECKONING

by John Fleming Wilson

"After this gale there won't be any use running that position down. There won't be any survivors. I want every pound of steam back of those pistons of yours, chief."

"The Rose of Avalon is a good steamer," the chief replied, austerely, "but she's seen her best days. You'll drive her under."

The storm matured with astonishing definiteness, but with what seemed to the waiting seamen on the little steamer appalling slowness. As the hours crept by the firmament thickened. Far to the southward a dim line of haze solidified into a wall of intense, unbroken blackness. The swells rolling up out of the distance were lengthening steadily till the Rose clove their intervening valleys on an almost even keel. Yet underneath them ran a huddle of currents which twisted and clung like weed, at once invisible and tenacious.

The steering engine raced noisily above the crunching rudder head. The man at the wheel sweated profusely at his task, his brawny hands spinning the spokes desperately, clutching now and again at the wheel's rim to stop its swift passage under his fingers and fling it the other way. The smoke from the squat funnel billowed out in heaving clouds that flowed down on the oily sea and mingled with it. Puffs of wind wrinkled the long flanks of the steadily progressing swells, flicked a bit of spume from their green crests, and died. The rigging gave out sudden thin strains of tone, vibrations at once plangent and sullen. From the hold issued dull clamors of cargo easing itself to the torsion of the hull. The fireroom gratings gulped up shrill cries, sudden clangors of falling shovels, the hiss of steam, the rustle of oil flowing from the pumps.

The barometer fell jerkily, marking with its feeble needle the lessening weight of the sky. Now and again it flickered slightly, as if brushed by some unseen finger.

"Plenty of electricity in the air," Peckham remarked, watching the instrument.

As if to verify his statement a solid bolt, of blazing blue, struck down from the haze to the distant line of the horizon. The black bank of cloud leaped up half way to the zenith, gathered itself into yet denser mass, seemed to lean over at its top by sheer weight behind. A dark streamer torn from it shot out and stood like a pennant across the lowering sky.

The Rose of Avalon steamed on, steadily, audaciously, like a blind thing creeping across across glass under a vacuum.

A single cry rose from the bridge. Peckham waved his hand, braced himself. A huge sea ripped out of the distance with a roar and enveloped the steamer in mast-high foam. The gale broke in a thunder of wind. The Rose of Avalon sank slowly under its terrific pressure till she was barely afloat. It seemed as though her last reserves of buoyancy were ebbing. Her engines slowed down, thrusting against the whole weight of the rushing sea. The bridge rail began to vibrate like a taut string.

For five minutes Peckham stood gripped in the vast clutch of the gale, helpless to call out or move. His eyes were fastened on his ship. He seemed to be part of her, to suffer with her, to send his commands through her by the volition of his inexorable will. Then he relaxed. She was on her course. She rose to a tremendous sea and cleared it handsomely.

In his mind Peckham ran over his figures with care. He had reckoned precisely, he knew. The center of this storm lay hundreds of miles ahead. The storm was traveling at a speed that ought to bring that perilous region nearer and nearer the goal he was headed for. A single black fact confronted him—every hour he drew closer to the storm's center the more deadly the peril. And most terrible of all would be that moment when the Rose of Avalon won to that windless vacuum, heart of the tornado. In dreams he had seen the seas that rage in that drear spot which mortal man has rarely seen and lived to tell of.

But he presently found himself faced by more imminent dangers. The crew of the steamer had been welded into a compact, mutinous body by the hammering of the gale. They refused duty. They menaced Peckham with death if he did not turn aside and evade the growing fury of the tempest. He opposed them singlehanded. Hinstead crouched under shelter, inert and useless. No strength there for this emergency.

Alone the young captain drove his men back to their work. He rated them with words which the wind carried away with sardonic shrieks. He bullied them with blows that the hissing seas made impotent. He herded them below, down where the clamour of the groaning ship drowned all voices but his own. And at last, braced in a dark alleyway, choked with oil fumes, parboiled with escaping steam and blinded with scalding jets of flame he almost killed two men. The rest drew away from his ravenous blood thirst, appalled by his fiendish vigor, overwhelmed by his passionate and reckless determination.

All night long he fought with unwearying perseverance. He maneuvered the almost helpless steamer like a fencer with his back to the wall. He cast humanity to the gale and his wolflike eyes burned in every darkness and blazed through every shadow. Time and again the men he mastered turned on him savagely only to quail before the terrible purposefulness of the man. And in the end, because he had made the steamer survive, they consented themselves to live, to toil, to laugh at death.

Rufus Hinstead himself, and the last, made an essay to break the young man's will. He, too, was flung aside. The Rose of Avalon breasted the howling dawn under full steam.

At midforenoon the murk was still profound. The scanty light showed nothing but tumultuous and angry seas tossing to the low lying clouds. The barometer marked the lowest any man on the devoted ship had ever seen.

"The center of the storm," Peckham croaked to his first mate.

And almost at his word the wind swept off, the spume fell back into the wave from which it had been torn, the clouds eddied slowly and silence came.

In that dead center of their world they lined the rail of the wallowing vessel and peered out into the dull blank of the south. A single spot showed out of the welter, a small space ringed with breaking surges but containing within its broken circle a small, dark, inklike pool.

"That's Broken Ring Atoll," Peckham said quietly. "See that signal?"

A half dozen peered and discerned the slightly elevated rag of bunting that showed amid the farther surf.

"Never can make it," whispered the first mate.

"In no time the gale will break from the opposite quarter," said another.

Peckham laughed. "I'll take No. 2 boat," he said clearly, and swung from the bridge.

Rufus Hinstead crept out to see that rescue. It was achieved while minutes ticked off the fresh coming of the gale. The boat came back with its crouched figures, was swung aboard and secured. Still Rufus dared ask no question. Then with a wild roar the tempest crashed down on the Rose of Avalon and she drove off in wild flurries of breaking seas into the murk of the other sector of the storm.

Hours later Rufus made his way to the chart room, found Peckham there, drenched, sodden with brine, red as to the eyes, white as to lips, but unshaken.

"Was she—did you find—" he quavered.

Peckham grinned. He staggered across the furiously dancing deck and flung a door open. The old man peered in, tremulous and eager. On a bunk, cushioned with many pillows against the terrific lurches of the steamer, lay a girl whose sweet upturned face was smiling at some dream. There she was, death knocking at the panel, the pit opening at her feet, and she unheeding all but her dream.

The old man crept on in, clinging as he went, until he bent over her.

"Cornelia!" he sobbed.

She silenced him with an unconscious and youthful gesture of her slender hand. Her lips parted gently.

With a crash the door behind them was burst in and a huge wave thundered into the little cabin. It washed the old man into a corner, wracked the walls bare and dashed back with smashing violence. The girl opened her eyes and looked into the calm eyes of her lover. He stood waist deep, astride, immovable, and smiled back.

A voice clamored outside, "She's going down! We're all lost!"

Peckham's tones carried clearly above the turmoil.

"Will you marry me when we get back to the coast?"

The girl considered this, her eyes closed. She opened them for a moment to ask, "Will we get back in spite of—"

The young captain of the steamer now struggling for life while men despaired with cries answered that question simply, with a smile.

"Of course. I intend to."

"Then," she said simply, "I'll marry you, Harry."

Her eyes conveyed her message to him, of confidence, of hope, of promises fulfilled, of passion that is heedless of storms, of love that laughs at death.

The water ebbed down the steeply sloping deck and choked through the smashed doorway. Peckham stood a moment, awkwardly, as though he felt it on his mind to speak. Instead he gave the girl a look, profound and intimate. Then he went out, with no backward glance, to his duty.

THE FINAL COCKTAIL

By FRED ONEY SWEET

Mr. Malby Makes a Consistent Finish of His Business Career.

SQUINT MALBY was a man who decided to live in "a house by the side of the road." He took care that his hovel should be located none too close to the road. Hath it not been said that if you have something the world wants, though your hut be in the wilderness, a path will be beaten to your door? Squint could attest to the truth of the adage. He was a bootlegger.

Even in those days when in other parts of the country there flourished the bar and the beer garden, the community in which Squint Malby established himself was dry. He landed in the town quite by accident, had taken in the situation, and had remarked to himself, "Here is where heavy work and I part company." He had passed out no handbills announcing his venture, had headed no parade. He had simply faded into the landscape and allowed himself to be advertised by his loving friends.

Squint Malby, even in his beginning, catered to a limited clientele; the community had grown callous to its condition. But his hours were not spent entirely in solitude. And among his patrons was Mr. Wemp, upon whom feats of salesmanship were wholly unnecessary.

Although Mr. Malby knew exactly the purpose of Mr. Wemp's visits, and though Mr. Wemp had a perfectly clear idea of how Mr. Malby met the problem of existence, always there passed between the old pair a period of preliminary camouflage. Even when Mr. Wemp's thirst drove him to come to the point, he refrained from openly asking to be waited upon. His method was to hint with an eye wink. And Mr. Malby, in return, required that payments due be placed on the clock shelf rather than slipped to him in a purely commercial manner. Making sure that the amount on the shelf was sufficient, Mr. Malby would then proceed as host.

The two were sitting one rainy, windy night in the ill-kept shack—Mr. Malby, who never indulged in his own wares, on one side of the table, serving; Mr. Wemp, on the other side of the table, consuming.

"I had a hard time getting this stuff," remarked Mr. Malby, his bared elbow on the table, his stubbled chin in his rough palm. "Getting harder all the time. Going up in price fast, too."

Mr. Wemp, having reached a stage where he was unconcerned, made no comment. He was a hard working man when he worked, and he was through work for the week. Had he created in his system a chemical need? Did he seek periods in which life would be painted with purple hue? Anyhow, it was what Mr. Malby placed before him in the glass that engrossed, not Mr. Malby's business problem in connection with the beverage.

That from some source Mr. Malby secured the real thing Mr. Wemp was satisfied, and he was considerable of a connoisseur. He was so pleased with Mr. Malby's brand that had been purchased and transported with difficulty from beyond the confines of the state that he imbibed more freely this night than usual, and instead of stepping forth into the night, he stumbled forth. Either Mr. Wemp did not feel like going home or could not find his way home, for he stumbled later before the eyes of the law.

It was very evident to the law that Mr. Wemp had been partaking of something containing more than 2 per cent. And the following of clews led down a bypath to the house by the side of the road. Mr. Malby was disturbed, questioned, arrested, convicted, and, upon failure to pay a fine, placed in jail.

Mr. Malby much preferred to "lay out" his fine rather than pay it. But the sixty days dragged along. He had no company behind the bars; indeed, he was the first inmate in years to grace the required institution. There were no visitors, proving that something besides Mr. Malby's personality had been the magnet connected with the house by the side of the road. Mr. Malby, as he languished, had an idea that Mr. Wemp must be getting very dry, but during all these weeks Mr. Wemp's wages must likewise be accumulating.

Mr. Malby longed for liberty. To the sheriff, who lived in the front part of the jail and who brought him his daily food, Mr. Malby expressed distaste for his surroundings.

When Mr. Malby's term was up, he told the sheriff he hoped never to see him or his place again. He had not enjoyed his stay at all. The bars on the windows and the lock on the big door jarred.

Mr. Malby returned to his hearth. And shortly after the evening shadows began to fall, Mr. Wemp came to console him for what he had just passed through. From a dark, cobwebbed corner, Mr. Malby unearthed something that the law in its search had overlooked. Mr. Wemp, sampling the discovery, was of the opinion that added age had but enhanced its quality, and Mr. Malby felt called upon to increase the price asked in proportion to quotations which he had received through his mail while incarcerated. Mr. Wemp gave evidence of clinging on as a customer, even if obliged to pay $1 a drop.

"You understand," remarked Mr. Malby to Mr. Wemp, "that a man in my boots has got to be paid for the chances he takes. This territory has been dry for twenty years. They tell me now that the whole country is apt to go dry. I got the letter while I was in jail."

Mr. Wemp nodded indifferently, for he was at a stage where he was not looking upon life in the calculating fashion of Mr. Malby For sixty days he had been a camel. He came to see Mr. Malby the next night and the next, and before the week was out, the law, suspicion aroused by Mr. Wemp's efforts at navigation, again sought out Mr. Malby.

In fact, things came to such a pass that Mr. Malby was in jail most of the time. And each time, upon his release, he entered into a tirade against the sheriff. They would never get him back there again—not him!

"Look here, Wemp," peeved Mr. Malby, shortly after his fifth imprisonment, "I'm going to cut you off my list as a customer. It's you that's to blame every time for my getting pinched. You don't seem to be able to get stewed without telling the world."

But Mr. Wemp, realizing that he was weak in one direction, was aware that Mr. Malby was weak in another, and he knew he was practically Mr. Malby's only patron now. He drew from his pocket a soiled bill that had figures on it in each corner.

"I'd like to help you out," softened Malby, eying the greenback, "but I've been where I've had nothing to do but think things over. But after this you've got to go home when you get soused. Folks know you got some.

Peckham sighed with relief and made for from the chart room of the Rose, stared long and studiously at the smooth, greasy seas that swept athwart the course, and then scanned the profundity of the sky.

Funny Old Thing, Life

by W. Douglas Newton

Fortune, Slapped in the Face Across a Sales Counter, Smilingly Turns the Other Cheek.

UAINT old thing, life. People go out trailing it with large check action revolvers, and woolly chaps, and Streatham Hill Americanese, and all the time it is saying: "What else can I show you today, madame?" behind the lace jabot counter, first door past the railway bridge, and up the stairs in the Emporium.

Gwennie Jelks was always after life with a large "L" and a three reel "movie" action in it, yet there was Life under her Joan of Arc coiffure, only waiting its time to crank up and get off.

Gwennie Jelks served at the jabot counter with a gesture not of Brixton. She had a Swan and Jays manner, that is, she was Regent street and regal; because of this she was also worth her weight in shilling-threes to the Emporium, Brixton Hill, S. W. Before Gwennie's mesmeric manner, avoirdupois and age became slim and young again and plunged deeply into the lacy purchases of trousseaux.

All the same, though Gwennie could sell beautiful but unsuitable garments to those who should not wear them with but a shrug of her shoulder and a trick of her lips, Gwennie was also in danger of the council. She knew her worth and so did they who found the silver for the pay envelopes. They desired to keep her, and cherish her, and let her sell many things for them forever—or at least until she lost the trick of it—but there were times when they didn't think the reserve fund would stand the strain of her. That was the life fervor bubbling up. Gwennie had a large supply, and it was as destructive as high explosive when it began to act.

Gwennie was young and the black shop gown hadn't complete control of her spirit yet. She was a slim thing, but with a figure, and an ankle as fine as her silk stockings. If you were a woman you would have envied her her skin. If you were a man you would have seen, with your usual acumen, that here was a pair of lips that should not be wasted. But you bewared of her eyes, they were bright, and black, and capable of damaging your dignity as well as your heart. They were eyes that were witty and daring, and flavored, perhaps a little, with a spice of the devil.

But quite a respectable devil, because Gwennie was Brixton. Brixton is like no other city, but it does know just how far one may go. Brixton is magnificent, it is kaleidoscopic, it can turn you up a genius in a thrice, or a Paris fashion in a 21 shilling parcel. It can show you color, and grace, and vulgarity, youth and beauty unequaled, women of unparalleled homeliness, men who might be statesmen just as well as men who might be no more than Battersea. It can run you up and down the scales of human life during a five minute wait for a Waterloo bridge tram, but Brixton, on the whole, knows how to carry itself.

And Gwennie was Brixton. She dropped an occasional aitch, and never saw reason why good gravy should be wasted when it got onto her thumb at meals, but she knew how to keep a fellow in his place with a moral force that was as powerful as a blow. And she had the genius of her kind and borough, a little something extra in her spirit, and the fatal gift of mimicry.

It was this gift that played the deuce with the cosmic whole of the Emporium.

It was not good for shop walkers, and department managers, and other crowned heads to know that there is a girl at the jabot counter who can portray, in a manner quite corrosive, all their little tricks of doing things and saying things in their most exalted as well as their terribly unguarded moments. It undermined their dignity and the weight of their just anger to know that Gwennie, with a devilish cleverness, could turn dignity and anger into things for laughter all down the lace counters. They called this undermining "dissiplin" and Gwennie had been warned of the perils of her vice. One day she would take just one step too far. She would "try it on" with a customer; after that there would be nothing for her but the pit of Abaddon. Let her be warned.

But life bubbled in Gwennie, she ignored the testament of the prophets.

"Give me life," she would say, defiant of the department. "I c'd eat it without chewing."

"'Ave you dusted that stand of fichus yet, Miss Jelks?" asked Mr. Macaulay Bunc, the shop walker, in an acid voice. "If not life'll cost you a 'arf a crown fine."

"Life," sniffed Gwennie scornfully, and she began to dust fichus, and Mr. Macaulay Bunc walked onward with dignity, trying not to observe the pleasant fact that the fichus were being dusted after the authentic manner of Mr. Bunc at a similar task. The imitation was biting.

Gwennie mentioned on most days that a tortoise had a bright, gay time in comparison with shopgirls, and that if something didn't happen soon, she would "bust." On the other days of the year she apparently strove to emulate her tortoise, and the whole of the lace counters waited breathlessly for a "bust" that would shatter the Emporium to its foundations.

On those days, on the days when Mr. Macaulay Bunc, and the managers, and the serried ranks of finance behind them didn't know, and daren't harsk themselves, what that little devil Jelks would do next, all Gwennie's seduction as a saleswoman was forgotten. Forces were ready to launch upon her and crush her; the Order of the Boot loomed imminent; if she once went a step too far, that would be the end of her. Mr. Bunc stepped over to her on these days and gave her due warning regularly, and was discreetly blind to the brilliant way she answered him in the inimitable but rather plummy manner of the head of the firm.

That Miss Jelks was a smart gel; one overlooked her faults, but one day she would be too smart. On that day there would come the end of things, you mark Mr. Bunc's words.

But the "bust" was always, it seemed, to be averted, the step too far was always to be checked. Gwennie went "perilously near, my gel!" She hung on the verge of the abyss, she had moments when it seemed certain that nothing human nor Mr. Bunc could save her. But she remained unbusted and saved. Her saleswomanship, the luck of youth favored her—it would always have favored her, it seemed, if spring hadn't taken a hand.

Spring is the anarchist of seasons. It attacks all and spares not. It produces direful explosions in the human heart. Spring, a flame of it in gold and blue on Brixton hill, spring piling up daffodils in a perfumed glory on Brixton barrows, was the downfall of Gwennie. On her way to the shop she saw that the trees and the grass had become suddenly and piercingly green, and that in the parched flower beds there were blossoms, nameless to her, but as bright and as moving as tears. The sun and the scent of the air—what magician had been mowing a lawn and letting loose an odor of dreams?—fired her beyond the restraits of Brixton on that spring day. The moment of the bust had come.

She knew it. She knew there was no evading her doom. She knew that something had got her tight and that she must go on doing those things that inevitably led to a week's notice. She had felt the feeling before, but never so powerfully as this.

Spring has Gwennie to answer for.

The costume department manager was behaving like a little lord before his window. When she arrived the commissionaire at the door began to giggle and the costume manager grew purple. Gwennie had done nothing much. She had just walked past the commissionaire and said, "Good morning." But she knew from the signs and portents what was happening. In her the costume manager was seeing himself as others laughed at him.

On the stairs to the jabot department the white goods saleswoman suddenly tried to walk with simple dignity and less of that "stuck up" air that was her usual carriage of pride, and her lips became thin and her eyes bright as she heard the girls of the fancy goods suppressing giggles.

Mr. Macaulay Bunc, washing his hands with the invisible soap of which he alone had the secret, suggested that spring showed signs of playing 'avoc with the timetable of young gels. Immediately after Mr. Macaulay Bunc appeared to be suffering from what "the fancy" might call a straight counter with the left. Gwennie was passing him by with a slightly knock kneed shuffle, her face was drawn into lines suggesting the comeliness of the cod, and she was saying through her nose:

"Sich brighta weather this forenoon, is it not, Mr. Boonc? Gollywog dee-part-ment? Yes, Mr. Boone. Firster-left, seconter-right, anupern-down the stairs."

Mr. Macaulay Bunc blinked and choked. He knew—but could not believe—he was just like that.

But he knew how to rule citizens in a Roman manner.

Casually he strolled to Gwennie's counter, trying his best not to walk like himself as he strolled.

"'Arf a crown fine, Miss Jelks," he said loftily. "An' I warns you."

"Make it five bob, an' I'll warn you," said Gwennie with menacing sweetness.

Mr. Macaulay Bunc mentioned to the white goods saleswoman that he thought they were going to 'ave a day of it. That Miss Jelks was out to exceed the limit.

"My opinion is that she 'as already done so. There's a line to be drawn between natural fun and low vulgarity, in my opinion Miss Jelks 'as overstepped." The white goods saleswoman was frigid in her dignity.

"Ho, 'ave you caught it, too?" murmured Mr. Bunc, and he chuckled. The white goods saleswoman was a person prone to catch it. She had an unfortunate manner. The white goods saleswoman, glaring at him, stated that the discipline of a department was according to them that was responsible for that department. She went to the office and lodged a complaint.

The office was wise. It did not giggle until the white goods saleswoman went out, though the manager said, when he had finished chuckling, that they could have too much of a good thing, and that that Jelks girl must beware.

That Jelks girl was just then turning to purple a thin lady who wanted to buy a two-three collar. The thin lady had an idea that she was bound to find the thing she wanted among the ten-and-eleven-threes. Miss Jelks was telling her in a chalky voice:

"Yes, our selection is rather lemited. There is nothin' he-ar you reely could wear. I'll get you down fifty-five more boxes. If we look through them earnestly, it's 'ighly likely we shall find the Nottin'ham collar you desire among the Torchon. The cheepest grades do slip in among the expensive. We arrange it. O, not'll, not tat tall, I like exercise."

Mr. Bunc was not a witness of this drama, but he saw the chalky voiced lady going out in a compressed manner, and he heard the sniggering along the counters, and he saw the light in Gwennie's eyes. He felt that the day of days had come. His heart grew sick.

He went over to her counter, biting his mustache.

"I 'ave me eye on you, Miss Jelks," he said heavily. "It's a week's pay down and the door at once, if you tries any 'anky."

"Hexit, firster-right, seconter-right, an' straight a'ead, madame. We 'ave a good lift, or you can take th' boot, madame," said his own voice in a feminine whisper, as he went away. "A bit too far," he thought; "there going to be trouble. My hat, I wouldn't 'ave this 'appen in my department—not for the mint. Ruin, it'll be."

He knew that the worst had come when Mamie arrived.

Mamie arrived in the sealskin jacket she always wore when the sun was hot, and the whole of the Emporium thrilled with the majesty of her presence.

You will probably know who I mean by Mamie. There is only one Mamie. She is the chorus queen and the girl of the gods, and she draws two hundred a week wherever her short skirts appear beyond the footlights. She is the 10 o'clock turn, and the star that twinkles alone in whatever bill she figures in. There is no need for other talent to fill the Empire's when she appears. Also there are few purses large enough to collect lesser stars for the nights she shines. Mamie is the darling of two houses nightly, and also the richest vein of coined gold the Emporium has ever struck.

When her silver gilt and suede limousine drew up at the door the whole shop fell down and adored her spending capacity. She was ushered from department to department like a queen. She was handled on her travels like a delicate thing of gold and ivory. To lose Mamie's custom would have been a calamity, to offend her would have been a crime that made mere murder pale.

And Mamie was easily offended. You think you know Mamie because you have seen her skirts—or found it difficult to see her skirts—and her historic calves and the wink she tosses so wickedly to the gallery. But you know her not. Mamie was Brixton, too. Very much "the lady." She knew her dignity as a woman and a mother—considerably a mother—and as the decorous and homely (amazingly homely) wife of Bill Erne, the Isle of Wight comedian and local J. P. You think because Mamie can hold her own with the gallery boys in sally and innuendo that Mamie is a flighty bit of goods, but that only shows how little you know about the ladies of the halls.

Just cross that delicate but rigidly defined line between polite talk and what Mamie calls "imperdence" in the moments of social intercourse, and you will see virtuous indignation glowing at its most scorching heat. There is nothing on earth so decorous and conventional as Mamie in her moments of decorum and convention, and you will forget these moments at your peril. She is a great artist—or, as she likes it, artiste—and a big hearted woman to be sure, but flick her on the raw in social manners and you will be praying for the milder experiences of an earthquake before ten seconds have passed.

Mamie chose that fateful day to come to the Emporium.

They perceived the thrill of her presence the moment the big Daimler drew up to the curb. "Mamie was shopping," and those near the plate glass windows craned to see the car with adoration and covetousness in their hearts. Mr. Macaulay Bunc put on

SPICE

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

SYNOPSIS.

Sydney Penfold Isham Chester Elting, whose initials won for him at school the obvious nickname, Spice, comes back to America expecting to find it a dull place after his adventures as an aviator in France. Before he has been home two days, however, things began to happen. From the studio in which he has taken temporary quarters he sees three men breaking into the home of Bernardo Aria, a famous financier. He helps Aria shoot down the marauders, who prove to be emissaries of a band of anarchists against whom the financier is secretly operating on behalf of the government, and on volunteering his aid in the fight is engaged to pilot Aria on trips to Washington by airplane. Then Spice encounters Marcia Briggs, his newly acquired step-sister. His father, an admiral, married a widow while his son was in France, a proceeding which Spice resents bitterly, but Marcia's breezy camaraderie proves hard to resist. And to complicate matters further, Spice finds himself much interested in Aria's beautiful daughter, Esther. Meanwhile, the conspirators meet at a dive known as the 101 club and make new plans for the murder of Aria, delegating one of their number, a scoundrel named Johnson, to get a job as steward on the Elting yacht, which the financier frequently visits. Spice is invited to the Arias' country home near New York, where Dr. Adrian Isaacs, Aria's chief aide, initiates him into the mysteries of an elaborate system of dictaphones by which every part of the house and grounds is guarded. While testing the apparatus for Spice's benefit, Isaacs hears one of the Aria chauffeurs tell of an attempt to get him to visit the 101 club. Some weeks later the Elting yacht arrives for a visit with the Eltings and Marcia aboard. Johnson, the steward, has been planning to serve Aria with poisoned food, but, finding this impossible, makes his way to the hangar and starts tampering with one of the airplanes used by the financier, only to be confronted by Dr. Isaacs with a drawn automatic.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

Exit Johnson.

"I'LL be getting fat if I don't look out," said Spice to himself as at 9 o'clock in the morning he put the finishing touches on his toilet. "Of all the overpaid, underworking sinecures in the happy land of blighty, this one of mine is sure the softest."

He did not feel entirely right about it. For six weeks now he had been a member of the household, and during that time the extent of his expert services had been five air trips to Washington and occasional high flights of an hour and a half or two hours' duration, when Mr. Aria was feeling uncomfortable from his asthmatic tendency, the ensuing relief often lasting throughout the night. Spice had also taken the others for occasional spins in the hydroplane.

But all of this was fun, and between the separate events Spice had nothing to do but play the carefree guest, swimming and sailing and riding and tennis with Esther and Isaacs and Marcia. If there was any atmosphere of danger it did not reveal itself in the slightest subconscious presentiment of evil. The worst of the business for the boy was that everybody else seemed busy. Mr. Aria and his father were often in long consultation, frequently with distinguished visitors, and to these the presence of Isaacs was requested, as private secretary. He also worked late with foreign correspondence in his laboratory, and administered all outside of the house itself.

Esther had her musical and other courses. Even Oakes was studying hard, and Spice, a graduate of the scientific course at Yale and with a good head for mathematics, frequently helped him with his problems. Nevertheless he felt rather like a supernumerary, and this irked him, though he did not permit himself to show it. To make matters worse, he had fallen in love with Esther, and had even a harder time to keep from showing that. Something told him that it would be most injudicious to show it just at that moment. Wherefore, being of a happy go lucky nature, he let things follow their destined course. With Marcia he preserved the same semi-defiant and détachées relations, half friendly, half mocking. She for her part made no effort to force the fighting, but seemed to have become rather interested in Dr. Isaacs, whose admiration for her was very evident.

All things considered, Spice was far from satisfied with his position. He had counted on being a sort of D'Artagnan of the Guard, and found himself instead more of a silken hosed courtier. He was, therefore, ready for anything when, just as he had completed dressing, there came a rap at his door and Isaacs entered, looking rather disturbed.

"I say, Elting," he began, "do you feel like tackling a disagreeable and rather demeaning job?"

"You bet," Spice answered, without hesitation. "Without wanting to growl about it, I'm all fed up on being a household pet."

"There may be nothing in it," said Isaacs, "and then again it may be devilish dangerous. If it wasn't for the off chance of that I wouldn't ask you to take it on. But I really think it ought to be done. My system is to follow up every loose end, regardless of dignity or danger."

"Shoot," said Spice. "I'm your Jemmy Fixit."

"Well, then," said Isaacs, "you may remember the first time I showed you my dictaphone installation, I picked up something from the garage about a place called the 101 club in South Brooklyn?"

"Perfectly. Some guy wanted to take Saunders down there."

Isaacs nodded. "He's been after him again. Saunders ran into the fellow yesterday when he took Mrs. Mordecai to the city. Met him in the garage when he left the car to get his lunch. He gave him a card and told him to drop in there tonight any time after 8. Saunders said he'd try to do so, then came and told me about it. He knows, of course, that Mr. Aria needs some looking after."

Spice's eyes shone. "You want me to look the joint over?" he asked.

"What do you think about it? The chances are it's just a booze dispensary and the local policeman fixed; but it might be something worse. You couldn't impersonate Saunders, of course, but you might show the card and say you were the other chauffeur, and as he couldn't get off he had sent you in his place. My idea would be to rig out in Saunders' uniform and slip down there in the car. You could say that you had been sent in town to take two gentlemen to the Penn station. I'd like to get a bit of a line on the place. If they try to pump you about Mr. Aria and our establishment here, they'll do with a bit of watching."

"I'm on," said Spice. "The fly chauffeur lay is just my meat."

Isaacs looked a little anxious. "If they should happen to be on to you, you might be just their meat. I don't think that's very likely, but all the same you have to mind your step."

"I'll have a gat where I can get to it quick," said Spice, delighted at the possible adventure. "The main thing, I suppose, is to pipe these guys so that I'll know any of 'em if I see 'em again."

"Right-o. It seems a bit odd that this fellow should be so keen about having Saunders go down there."

"Well," said Spice, "I'll be the cooing little stool pigeon. Nothing like having a face of childish candor. If it's a bolshevik bunch, they can't any of them have seen me. I've scarcely been off the place except in the air."

"Mrs. Mordecai wants to go in today for some more shopping," said Isaacs. "You can tool her around this afternoon, if you don't mind, then take her to the station for the 5 o'clock train, get your dinner, and go down there about 7. If the place is all right, your card ought to get you in. If it's not enough, you had better not wait. I'd a little rather you left before this fellow shows up. Mr. Aria doesn't know I'm sending you, and I'll tell Mrs. Mordecai not to say anything about it."

"Suppose they try to make a bolshevik of me?" Spice asked.

"O, treat it as a joke. Don't try to string them along or to start anything. That's thin ice down in that quarter, and for all we know they might be really a dangerous outfit. Look here, call me up on the phone and let me know that you are all right. Do that. If I fail to hear from you I'll have out the reserves."

Spice departed as arranged, looking a very spruce and stylish young chauffeur in Saunders' best uniform. To tell the unflattering truth, he looked much more the part than he did his actual one of veteran air fighter. None would have hesitated to pronounce him a smart chauffeur, probably of Irish origin, and no doubt a young devil with the ladies' maids, while anybody would have found it difficult to believe that this blue eyed, mischievous looking youngster had sent down the flying Hun in flames.

Isaacs watched his going with a worried face, half regretting that he had sent him on this mission which his thoroughness of method seemed to indicate. He might have undertaken it himself but for the realization that the mere sight of his own big, powerful frame, piercing eyes, and dominant features of a Roman centurion would have thrown a panic into a peaceful gathering of anarchists. He looked, as Marcia said, like Ben-Hur, and was perhaps the avatar of that heroic son of Israel.

Unlike his young colleague, Isaacs had found the last few weeks of freedom from murderous attempt neither irksome nor reassuring. Day and night his vigilance had not only been unrelaxing, but was, if anything, increased. He did not believe that the enemy was either discouraged or intimidated. It seemed to him more probable that there might be some design to achieve the destruction of Aria at the moment of some spectacular coup de theatre, to strike at the impressionable and vacillating faction of the popular mind.

For another thing, Isaacs would have been overmodest not to admit to himself that he had Aria pretty well protected by his various lines of defense, and that it would need an uncommonly astute assassin to kill him and escape. This last was the point—for the assassin to escape. The murder of any important personage could be accomplished by a slayer prepared to accept the consequences of his act. But Isaacs knew that he had little to fear in this regard from the slinking killers undertaking Aria's removal. They were not fanatics nor braves, nor even desperadoes. They were merely paid butchers who would run no risk of getting gored.

Through these weeks of apparent security Dr. Isaacs' precautions had naturally become to some extent routine, so that it was merely as such that he entered his laboratory and seated himself at his "listening post." Rocks, negative. Garage, negative. Kiosk, negative. Stables, Mickey the stable boy rubbing down Esther's hunter, on which she had just ridden in [Isaacs could hear the lad's hissing]. Carriage house, negative. Wall corner, small car passing. Summer house, front gate, back gate, all negative. Hangar, Oakes filing something [time he was at his dinner]. Boathouse, negative. Noncoms' messroom, clatter of tableware and murmur of voices; McNeal, the head gardener, asking: "And if ye were oop some thousands of feet the marrning, how wud ye be knowin' whaur to land, what wi' the mist and all?" Voice of—Oakes—Oakes.

But what was this? Isaacs had just heard Oakes filing something in the hangar, and now here he was explaining to McNeal. Isaacs switched on the garage again. Yes, the filing continued. Then he heard the scuffle of feet—and then leaping up, he ran out of the room, swinging shut the laboratory door, which caught with a spring latch, ran down the stairs, out and across the foggy lawn, reaching for his automatic as he sped along.

Dr. Isaacs' alert brain had immediately flashed out a correct conclusion. He was sure that Steward Johnson was in the hangar, and that he was alone. The man had impressed him unfavorably from first sight, had aroused his suspicion, and for a criminal once to arouse suspicion in a bright, analytic mind is certain to result in a conviction of guilt, even though this be not proven to the satisfaction of others. Johnson had made his fatal move in bringing Mrs. Elting's lorgnette to the house the night of the yacht's arrival. Isaacs' analysis of this act had aroused his first and final distrust.

The reason was this, that Mrs. Elting did not once employ her lorgnette in the course of the evening. Isaacs observed later that she did not use them aboard the yacht. He noticed that for close vision she did not appear to need them, and that when desiring to examine something at a distance she availed herself of marine glasses. From this he deduced that she was not myopic, but far sighted, and that the lorgnette was probably for service only in such places as restaurants and the theater, merely to supplement her sight. By the simple expedient of asking her he proved the truth of his theory.

Isaacs next reasoned that Johnson could scarcely have been serving Mrs. Elting for ten days aboard the yacht without observing that she scarcely, if ever, used her lorgnette. In that case why should he have so officiously brought it to her? Other considerations aside, it was not his place to do so. He could have sent it by the launchman or quartermaster. The inference was obvious. Johnson had some other motive for wanting to look about the Aria house and grounds.

The result of this was an effort to discover something about the steward's antecedents. The yacht agents through whom he had been engaged could tell him little beyond the fact that he was furnished with two good references, one of which they had looked up and corroborated. This was because the member of the Bayne family to whom they wrote confused Johnson with another steward who in a short service had proved himself entirely satisfactory. So Isaacs, very busy at the moment, accepted this guarantee for what it was worth, but did not alter his opinion of the man.

So that now, on this foggy day, with the water completely blotted out, Isaacs instantly grasped the truth of the situation. He knew that the steward was in the hangar and what he was about. Realizing how very few minutes would be needed to weaken the machine fatally with file to the stays or hacksaw to the fuselage or acid to the wings, or any of such a number of forms of sabotage, Isaacs did not wait to summon assistance. His only fear was that Johnson might finish his work and make off before he could seize him. Wherefore Isaacs hurried down to the hangar in much the frame of mind of a farmer who hears the squawk of a hen and suspects that there is a skunk or weasel at work in the fowl house. Drawing near, he saw the door ajar, stepped up and flung it open, and, covering the steward with his pistol, ordered him to hold up his hands.

Johnson, like many low grade and cowardly criminals, was not without his streak of savage ferocity, this flaring up only when trapped or cornered. Like the hyena, which beast was his fitting prototype, he might prowl and whine and snarl until his chance arrived, when he saw his chance to dart in, snatch his offal, and scurry off with it. But, similarly, when taken by surprise and blocked from his avenue of escape, his action could be dangerously swift and savage.

Thus now, fairly caught in his murderous attempt, the mind of the man worked with the instantaneous reflex of the lower animal. He realized that capture must mean long imprisonment, possibly for life, as he was neither young nor robust. It was a choice between this and the sudden death, unless he could manage to kill his aggressor in his tracks. Achieving this, he had only to dart to his boat and row off into the fog, throw overboard his tools and weapon, and make his way to the yacht club, when he did not believe that any case could be made against him.

Johnson's decision was immediate. Not only did he suspect Isaacs of being Aria's chief safeguard, but his hatred of him had all the venomous virulence of the slinking malefactor for a corrective personality which it does not fear. Thus, on the summons "Hands up!" his mental process was reflective, like the transfer of a stimulus from a sensory to a motor nerve.

Instead of obeying the peremptory order, even while looking into the muzzle of Isaacs' pistol, Johnson dropped behind the motor, at the same time snatching out his own weapon from a side pocket. He knew, of course, that Isaacs would shoot, but he was counting on that mortal fraction of a second hesitation, the forced offensive which amounts practically to a defensive, and which distinguishes the man of peace from the fighting man.

Perhaps, had he been any but what he was, there might have proved some warrant for the chance he took, as there are few men in private life who would not hesitate an instant before firing into a fellow human. But if Johnson felt venomous hatred for Isaacs, just so did Isaacs abominate Johnson and what he represented, holding him in such detestation as he might have felt for a poisonous trench rat nourished on cadavers. And, fatally for Johnson, this loathing and desire to exterminate was backed by a speed of motor coördination even quicker than his own.

Wherefore, Isaacs' pistol barked as Johnson dropped—and Johnson kept on dropping. The bullet which might have drilled him through the middle of the chest on his failure to obey passed between his eyes instead, and so through the badly adjusted brain—and thus let the mistaken soul out of him. His body crumpled on the cement floor, twitched convulsively, then lay still.

Isaacs, with a white face and glowing eyes, stood for a moment staring at his work as though fascinated. It was the first time that he had ever slain a man, and, while he scarcely considered this creature in the light of a man, still his emotion was considerable. Getting this presently in hand, he proceeded to make a swift examination of the late steward's pockets, and his face grew still whiter as he came upon an empty envelope on which were a few penciled memoranda of no importance. But on the upper left hand corner was the superscription: "101 Club."

. . . . . .

The spirit of adventure was rife in Spice as he trundled the big car into town. Never having done any work of a secret service character, it had a certain fascination for him, as it does for most in ignorance of its dirty features. So here was presented the peculiar spectacle of an ex-army fighting airman trained to the combat in the rush of free air and lofty altitudes rejoicing in the prospect of burrowing a bit in the underworld. A ger-falcon pleased at playing the ferret's part.

The truth of the matter is that Spice was surfeited with fat living and in a frame of mind to welcome anything which might offer a little excitement. In fact he was spoiling for trouble. The conditions of his life for the last few weeks had been such as to raise the pressure of his highly charged vitality to the bursting point. One can scarcely blame the boy. He had stepped from a service of high adventure fraught with the momentary promise of sudden death and requiring the intense employment of skill and courage and dash and daring into one which was even more trying than actual luxury because it was so perfectly hygienic. It would seem to most of us impossible to attain such an ultra degree of health as to feel uncomfortable. But such was actually the state with Spice.

What with such tending as no prince has ever had and none of the dissipations in which such are apt to indulge he felt so well that it sometimes seemed to him as if he might blow up. Perfect living accommodations, delicious and wholesome food exquisitely served, exhilarating physical exercise, regular hours, and absolute freedom of care, worry, and actual work do not by any means constitute the best régime. As David Harum said, "A certain amount of fleas are good for a dog," and Spice did not have so much as a mosquito bite to distract him from his comfort. He was like an athlete trained to the top notch for an event which was never brought off; a bird dog which is never hunted, a fighting cock which is polished and exercised and fed the yolk of hard boiled eggs and chili peppers and selected rice with chopped liver, and never entered in a main or turned loose in the barnyard for a little liberty.

For Spice was really something of a pampered slave where personal freedom was concerned. Isaacs had ordained that either he or Spice be constantly within call of Mr. Aria, waking or sleeping, and as Isaacs was so busily occupied with his varied duties and compelled to go frequently to town, Spice often felt rather like a "sparrow cop." But with less privileges, for he could neither flirt with the maids when on duty nor make a pleasant rendezvous for when he might be off.

The boy was getting very sick of it. He no longer believed his patron to be in any danger whatsoever, and with the impatience of youth he reasoned that if his enemies were still determined to "get" him, some overt effort would have been made by now. Spice was beginning to regard Isaacs as an alarmist, overzealous, even timid, perhaps.

And the worst of the whole business was being madly in love with the most beautiful girl in the world and feeling that to tell her so by even the slightest pressure of the hand would be to abuse a confidence and commit a breach of trust.

Wherefore, although in his heart he believed Isaacs' suspicions of this "101 club" to be one of his many bogeys (like his distrust of the harmless, fishy eyed steward on the yacht), Spice threw himself into the investigation with zeal. Whatever happened he was pretty apt to be offered alcoholic refreshment, and after his period of enforced virtue Spice felt that a drink, whether of malt or iced spirits, would hit near the center of the target on this sultry afternoon. For some reason, the sake of his wind as a track athlete, perhaps, he had never smoked, but when working in the airplane factory there had been Saturday nights when—

Even playing chauffeur, tooling Mrs. Mordecai about the round of shops (to that good lady's vast amusement) was fun. It was good to get in the movement and look at the girls—none as pretty as Esther, of course, but such a lot of them, and feel off his dignity and free. That was the thing—free!

Then, after leaving Mrs. Mordecai at the station, it suddenly occurred to him that in a recent letter from his friend Schuyler this cavalier of the brush had said that he might be in town about the middle of July and on the oft chance of finding him Spice headed uptown for the Schuyler residence. He wanted very much to see his old pal, thank him for the hospitality which had laid the cornerstone of his prosperity, get a joke on him about his present chauffeur's billet. And besides, the painter was something of a sybarite, rich, provident, opposed to arbitrary laws, and therefore perhaps he might—

One sees that Spice was scarcely in the state of mood and discipline required for the conscientious rubberneck and gumshoe sleuth, but, as has been said, he was bursting with youthful exuberance and this was his first afternoon off. He rolled up Fifth avenue in the sumptuous car, looking precisely like the colored art advertisement of its make in the back of a periodical de luxe, and stopping in front of the Schuyler house was immediately discovered by Katie with a glowing face which fell at sight of his livery.

"O, Mr.—I mean Lieutenant Elting," she cried, loyally giving him his title of rank despite his garb of service. "Whatever are you doing dressed like that?"

Spice sighed. "Ah, my dear," said he, "life has its ups and downs. Having faithfully served my country, I am now forced to earn my livelihood as best I may. Is Mr. Schuyler here?"

"Yes, sir. O, Mr.—I mean lieutenant, I'm so sorry. It's beneath your station, and you an ace and the son of an admiral! Mr. Schuyler will be deeply grieved. He's in the studio. I've just taken him up a bowl of cracked ice."

"Then I shall be doubly delighted to see him," said Spice, and leaped down with alacrity. "Don't let anybody steal the joy wagon, Katie."

He sprang briskly for the front door of this potential oasis, quickly enfranchised three flights of stairs, and as he reached the studio door his eager ears caught the popping of a cork. "Dear Dr. Isaacs," thought Spice, joyfully. "God bless the good old alarmist."

He burst in to be greeted with a yell of amazement and delight. Mr. Schuyler set down the bottle of vermouth beside its gin affinity and caught Spice in a welcoming hug, then held him off at arm's length and surveyed him in astonishment and some dismay.

"What the devil's this, Spicey?"

"Alas, Corny, I have only gravitated to my proper level," said Spice. "I had hoped to get a billet as barkeep, but the darn thing went through after all"—he glanced at the table—"for the poor, that is."

Schuyler looked distressed. "I see. Had a row with the admiral about his matrimonial speculation. Knew you would. Who's slick nonessential servitor are you, anyhow?"

"Bernardo Aria's."

A great light dawned in the face of the artist. He glanced toward the portrait, at which Spice was staring as might a Brahmin devotee at his lama. "I see, I see, and what else do you chauf?"

"An air bus or three. I spin the master up for his asthma."

"He takes an awful chance," opined the artist. "You didn't lose any time about it, did you? I see that I nourished a serpent in my studio. Well," he sang:

"O the king will take the queen
And the queen will take the jack,
But the ace he will take any
In the whole damned pack.

"Here's luck to you, you young curly headed devil—don't know that I care much about drinking with chauffeurs and sich, but we're all democrats now."

Spice left Mr. Schuyler's studio feeling rather like an early experiment in steam pressure, or a fire that somebody has tried to put out with gasoline. Having plenty of sense under his willfulness, he declined his friend's invitation to dine, feeling that before proceeding to investigate a possible nest of anarchists it might be just as well to have a little blow.

In actual quantity he had not drunk more cocktails than many a respectable and tired business man might frequently have taken on his way uptown after a wearing day, and with no other effect than a pleasant nervous relaxation. But Spice was not a tired business man, nor had he passed a wearing day for many months. He was a rather overfed youngster of bounding pulse, now entirely unused to the ingestion of alcohol, so that as he went out to get into his car little Katie looked at him with a startled face, clasped her hands, and said: "O, Mr.—I mean Lieutenant Elting, do be careful!"

Spice was feeling anything but careful as he turned out on the Riverside drive. It was then 7, so he decided to run slowly over the road for half an hour, then turn round and make his way back, down Broadway and across the bridge for the "101 club." He had told Mr. Schuyler nothing about his mission, of course, nor had he enlightened him as to his actual position in the Aria household, leaving him to think that he was a combination of air pilot and chauffeur, much to the disgust of this old friend who took his motive to be a sort of cheap, romantic melodrama unworthy his position.

But though far from drunk, Spice was equidistant from his normal mental state. His head soon cleared, but all sense of caution seemed obliterated. His mood was not quarrelsome nor reckless nor even adventurous. He felt merely a slight curiosity to discover what sort of place the 101 club might be and who its members, but was utterly indifferent to what possible danger it might contain for him should his identity be discovered. He had at that moment a most supreme contempt for the perils to be found in all such parties as the bolsheviki, anarchists, nihilists, I. W. W., et cetera, while from the windward berth of several cocktails he could regard the prohibitionists with greater tolerance.

Having got himself cooled off a little, Spice turned the car and made his way to South Brooklyn. He had no difficulty in finding the street and drew up in front of the club, where he switched on his lights, locked the current, and got down. By this time his head was quite steady, but he felt hot, uncomfortable, and for this reason a little irritable. The house with its polished stoop railing, clean windows, and general neat appearance, looked precisely what it advertised itself to be, and Spice's errand seemed to him more than ever a useless one.

Looking Toward Holiday Festivities

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

A STAGE for play of diamonds and pearls is the frock of black silk velvet in the center. Cut with the deep V of the most formal mode, the only touch of contrast comes from a Louis XV. knot of steel ribbon. At the extreme right, royal blue velvet corsage trimmed with silver tulle and gray fox is combined with overskirt of peacock blue satin bearing motifs of the velvet outlined in steel threads. Next to this, a dancing frock of changeable pale green and white faille selects as playmates electric blue tulle, ermine, silver stars, and copper cones with silver needles. At the left, a young girl's dancing frock of raspberry faille and flesh colored net is followed by a stately Egyptian mode wrought with pearl gray satin, peacock blue satin bezet with motifs of green and orchid colored beads, and with steel bead-work.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—If we're Mrs. Ogden Spender Rocks of New York and Newport we don't begin the social season—the real ball bearing season—until just after Christmas. If we're just plain Mrs. John Smith of Simpkinsville and Simpkinsville, the rule is pretty much the same. In either case party gowns are the last things planned.

The evening frocks of this year embrace so many different modes that we have considered it necessary to divide them into two installments—one of last week and one of this.

At the right we are showing this silhouette in a gown which may be worn either at the elaborate afternoon function or for full evening wear. Of course, this model has long sleeves, but as against the tendency to absolutely sleeveless evening gowns we note some dresses which will veil the arm in tulle or chiffon. Here the under sleeves are of that most magical of all textures, silver tulle, and they are banded with the gray fox, which describes the decollete.

For the rest, this gown is an interesting combination of color, and one which indicates the passion for blue that is raging everywhere. The bodice is of royal blue velvet, and this shows at the side of the skirt between the draped folds of a peacock blue satin overskirt. Royal and peacock blues together, you see!

To further cement peaceful relations there are motifs of the royal blue velvet appliqued upon the upper part of the overskirt by an outlining of steel thread.

When it comes to the dancing frock, the classic line frequently yields to the merely "classy." Here boufancy is given the freedom of the skirt city, and we can do almost anything we please. Yet even here in this second model to the right, which was designed for the debutante's and sub-deb's dancing frock, we are relieved to find none of the panniers and panels and bunches of tulle that have commenced to afflict our sensibilities. The line is comparatively without the hip, hip, hooray.

The corsage of this model is of changeable pale green and white faille dotted with tiniest of green beads. The overskirt of electric blue tulle which drapes a garment of the same fabric is scattered over with silver snow stars, and it is held by a wired band of ermine. The last touch comes from copper metallic cones, with silver needles, which fasten the bodice at the side and are found clustering about the wired loops of ermine.

The black velvet gown will always have its adherents among the fashionably gowned. This is because the black velvet gown is the best stage that was ever devised. Here Mr. Diamond and Miss Pearl enact their best dramas. It was indeed as the best possible setting for jewels that the center model of black silk velvet was devised. Even without the jewels one need not feel badly dressed—only a bit chilly. For the back is cut in the extremely deep V which is favored by Paris for the formal evening gown. It, too, is draped about the feet. The front is extremely plain and the only intruder permitted is the Louis XV. knot of steel ribbon appliqued to the back of the bodice.

There are few of our present models of evening gowns which ever attain to such consistency of treatment, however. The rule of the day seems to be toward combinations of various fabrics and colors. What is more, the rythm is all broken up, just the way Mr. Irving Berlin might compose dresses. One may find a sleeve here and no sleeve there, a back of cloth of gold and a front of black velvet, a bunch of tulle on one hip and none on the other, a panel that swoops down to the ground on the left side and stops off short on the right. Everything is uncertain, irregular. Above all, everything is pitting one material against another.

In the next frock this has been done, but in the stately fashion borrowed from the ancient Nile. The Egyptian classic is, in fact, the one which inspires this model with its underskirt—bound in about the ankles—of pearl gray satin and its tunic of peacock green blue, decked in motifs of green and orchid colored beads. The back of the bodice is held, too, by an Egyptian motif of steel beads, the steel being repeated on the bodice and in the garlands which appear upon the skirt. The color blending here is remarkably beautiful.

Another dancing frock for the young girl is the model at the left. The corsage of this is of raspberry colored faille, and it is draped into a long sash of the same material and color. The skirt of this frock is of flesh color net trimmed with rows of buttons covered in the raspberry faille. An upper section, cut into points that make it resemble the double calyx of a flower, is outlined with raspberry colored floss and edged with small oblong silk tassels. Like so many of the dancing frocks, the corsage, as will be seen, is here of contrasting material and harmonizing color.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Mary Brush Williams.

CLOTHES MUST BE CLUTCHED.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—I thought I was going to take independent action, assert my point of view, and perhaps start a movement against certain developments in the French styles. "I don't mind," I set forth, "spending all of my money and nine-tenths of my time on your fashions. I don't mind standing for hours while you arrange a piece of braid this way and that practicing what to do for my unfortunate American figure." I don't even mind, so I said to myself and not aloud, your asking me which way a thing ought to be, although I always make a mental reply that it is not my business to know, and if I did I, like themselves would be making a million dollars or so practicing my skill.

"But one thinig I will not fall for," I finished " and that is after the articles are finished I will not go around Paris all winter holding my clothes on. You've got to fasten them in place."

Kolinsky Coat with Loose Collar.

It is the style you know to clutch at your things every minute, never leaving hold of them, lest you lose the silhouette. "I might meet Edith Wharton on the street some day and she might say something that would take my mind for a moment off of the leading industry of Paris, with the result that I should forget my main business of life, which is to keep that coat in place, and let go of it for one second, in which case for all passers by the illusion of that coat's chiciness would be forever lost."

They did not hear me; they made the coat to suit themselves, and that means it has to be held at throat and waistline, else it makes one look like a non-descript mass. You have seen those coats undoubtedly. The one which the woman is clutching in the accompanying illustration is made by Jenny, and is very effective indeed if the wearer does'nt take her mind off the business of wearing it once all winter. No French woman ever would remove her attention from that task; but the trouble with Americans, the best of them—or the most frivolously worst—is that they will occasionally think of other things. At any rate, this coat has a wonderful collar, made of sealskin like the skirt of the coat, and when clutched at throat, it takes on a lovely line, as depicted in the picture. It also looks gorgeous when left unbuttoned and falling away from the throat, in such a manner as to insure pneumonia to the wearer. The skirt is gathered over the hips and one will reply that the high couture has its nerve to gather sealskin over an American woman's hips, yet Jenny got away with it and did not make her client look more than humanly, legitimately thick. It is the thing anyway to look enormous in your fur coat. It is a sign that the coat is luxurious. The body of this creation is of black satin, as are the sleeves. Of course the thin satin comes in all the places where one should by nature have the warm fur; but what of it—one must put up a smart appearance. This coat has been made with great succes in velvet—the one I saw belongs to a friend. It is brown in color and very supple and lovely. It is also successful in satin, and an admirable model to consider for spring and summer.

But as I was saying, the trouble about the American woman is that she will not devote more than nine-tenths of her time to her clothes. In spite of anything her mind will occasionally wander into other channels. The second fur coat displayed is therefore more practical for her after it has been delivered f. o. b. her salon. It fastens in place. Besides, if she is going to remain in Europe and is obliged to carry her sugar, soap, towel, and divers other equipment with her, there is a certain advantage in having her hands free. The great merit of this coat is that it gives one that swathed and enormous look which denotes wealth, extravagance, richness of coat, and a general air of having it on the rest of the world, and yet this is attained by scenic effects above the waistline. From the waist down, it gives one the slendernes of appearance which denotes that above that longitude one is not as big as one has carelessly made out, that one is so nearly in the image of Theda Bara that one can afford not to try to make oneself look thin. This coat is of kolinsky; the skins above the waistline run round, and below the waistline they go up and down. The collar is not separate, but the entire bodice of the coat blouses into the loose collar effect produced by the Jenny model, and the sleeves are in the same piece. Whether or not it will let those lake winds in through sleeves and that lose back, I do not know, and I may add that I do not care. You will have to put on flannels, wear a cardigan jacket, or look out for yourself otherwise. I am concerned merely with appearances. Anyway, it would be a fine model in brocade, silk, or velvet for the milder seasons. If you wish the pattern for it, you will please write to Mme. Paquin.

The third model shown is a light tan frock in course material, which looks as if it would make one short and thick, only it doesn't. It has a wide, high belt, and a bodice that blouses heavily fore and aft. The skirt, while appearing moderately long [for a skirt of its nationality] is cunningly cut to display the usual length of ankle. The costume is piped with tan silk, and garnished in buttons of the material of the frock. The sleeves are short.

Varied Activities of Women

Arithmetic, bookkeeping, geography, hotel legislation, commercial correspondence, stenography, typewriting, ironing, cooking, linen mending, sewing, and washing are some of the subjects taken at the school for women hotel employes in Besancon, France, which is releasing each week ten women ready to fill positions in hotels ranging from cashier to chambermaid.

Mrs. "Snowy" Baker, wife of an Australian sporting promoter, knows as much about the business of athletics as her husband. Mrs. Baker is the promoter's chief assistant in his business affairs. She has arranged and put over important prize fights without his help and has made contracts under which American boxers invaded Australia for a series of bouts. Recently she took a hand in the theatrical game, arranging for the filming of a thriller in which her husband is to be starred.

Many women are being employed to help repair roads in Great Britain.

If a widow entertains ambitions of marrying a widower her chances are good clear up to the age of 45 years.

The women in Turkey are fast becoming Americanized and now there are more women to be seen on the streets of Constantinople minus veils than with veils.

Nine years ago Miss Sarah Lindley of Osage, Ia., invested $2 and a smile with a tramp who stopped at her uncle's home for a meal. Recently she received notice that the tramp had died and left her $65,000 in Minnesota land and cash.

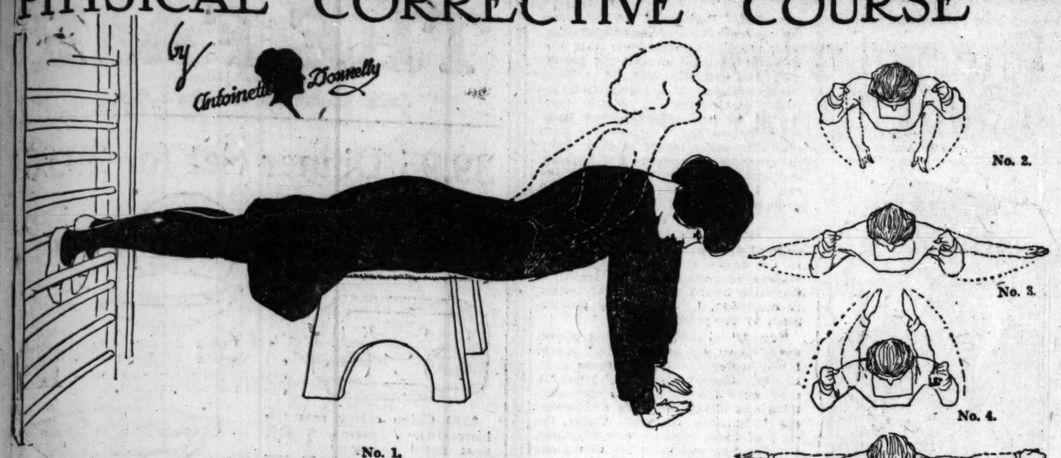
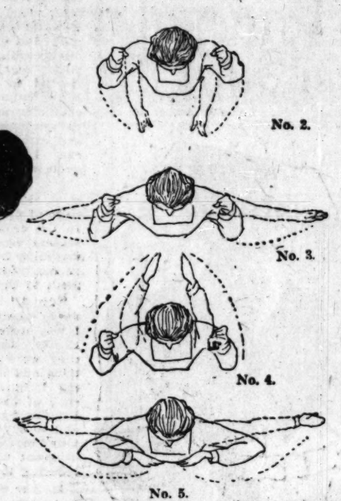
PHYSICAL CORRECTIVE COURSE

By Antoinette Donnelly



No. 1.



No. 2. No. 3. No. 4. No. 5.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Sky on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Tribune."

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

WHETHER you started this physical corrective course with me three weeks ago or not the exercises I am giving you today alone will do wonders for your shoulders, back, and neck. If you have or are threatened with what is known in polite avoirdupois circles as "an old lady's hump" between your shoulder blades or at the back of the neck you have here the chance of being excluded from membership with that gathering therein by the daily practice of these exercises.

And while you are remedying or preventing that at the same time you are thinning down the fat shoulders, fat upper arms, double chin, a too thick waist, and protruding abdomen, for these exercises involve all the muscles from the waist up. In addition they strengthen a weak back.

Or if the neck and shoulders and arms and chest and waist are underdeveloped they may, by the consistent daily practice of the exercises illustrated above, be the means of acquiring perfect development.

Let me suggest that you cut them out and paste them on a piece of cardboard; otherwise the chances are the paper will be mislaid and the valuable hints forgotten.

Also, let me warn you that this set of exercises is strenuous, but the old fashioned theory that medicine that is hard to take is likely to do you most good may be aptly applied here. If there is a strain you may be sure those upper muscles are stiff and set and badly in need of stirring up, or fat will dominate them completely ere long. Be careful, however, not to do them beyond a normal strain, which one experiences after any exercise of long unused muscles.

Take forward lying position, as in illustration No. 1. Now you may do this exercise lying across a low bed or on a couch, or if you have an old chair without a back, or a bench or even an box. But you must be so placed that your feet can be held down and firmly. In the illustration I have shown a cross bar to show the feet position, but that is not necessary, and few women would have access to that at home. If you are tall enough lying across the bed you may secure your feet firmly between the sideboards and the mattress. Or you can arrange the bench or box so that your feet may be held firmly under the dresser. Or you may be able to have some one hold your feet down for you until you are able to do it without this assistance, while lying face down on the couch.

Having feet firmly placed now, heels together, and with hands on floor, slightly turned in, as illustrated, and head dropped laxly down, and body so placed that the weight in rising will come to the thighs, begin to raise the head and chest and shoulders back and up slowly, bringing hands up and place on hips simultaneously with the head and upper body raising, as in dotted line of drawing No. 1.

This should be done at first slowly, care being taken that both hands leave the floor together and that the lower body remains perfectly still.

Practice this first movement five times; then relax completely. If you have not been doing any exercise up to this time you would better do this movement not more than five times, gradually increasing to ten. And confine yourself to this first movement until you can do it easily, which ought to be in a couple of days if you practice this morning and night for the couple of minutes involved.

Then add the arms movements, which you can see and feel yourself will bring into play all the shoulder, back, upper arm, and neck muscles.

First of these arm stretching, as illustrated in figure 2, where you have a front view of the raised upper figure, assume the original forward lying position as in figure 1, and with upper body raised bring hands from hips to shoulders with fists doubled and tense and firm, elbows in at sides, then shoot hands forward, fingers and arms fully stretched. Command aloud: One! Two! And put "pep" in the command and the movement. Do this movement following the original forward lying position for a couple of days. Then add figure 3, whose only difference is the arms stretched outward, wrists straight, and arms stretched to finger tips: and back. Count One! Two!

Then figure 5, raising body from original position, as in figure 1, instead of hands on hips bring them to a cross bend of chest, fingers straight and close together, then fling arms out, in line with shoulders and palms down, and back. Same count.

In all of these arm movements do them briskly. If you have heard army commands and seen army drill apply the same precise, sharp command to your work. Because an exercise done without this element is lackadaisical and of little use.

Now, do not try to do all these movements in one evening. Add one as you feel qualified to do it. But do not be discouraged if you do not get them all, for one or two of the movements done well will profit you much.

Answers to Queries.

JENNY: NO, I DISAPPROVE OF the dry shampoos. Hairdressers have told me that these dry shampoos cause much dandruff and hair troubles. It does sound like plain resoning that if your hair is dirty enough to be dry shampooed it is dirty enough to require water. And when the hair needs shampooing it requires water to do the work. Maybe once in a while there may be a "freak" case that gets along on a dry shampoo, but for the average head, under the average dirt, and dust, and grime conditions of today, a good soap and water shampoo is necessary every two weeks. The dry shampoos clog the pores of the scalp just as a thick powder would clog the pores of the face if left on indefinitely.

ANNA MAY: ANNOYING FACIAL eruptions often come from indigestion and eating rich, spicy foods and pastry. Acne may be caused by carelessness in looking after the skin, lack of cleanliness, faults in exercise and diet, and blackheads. I have a treatment for pimples and blackheads which I shall be glad to send to you if you wish and will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

FAITHFUL READER: I AM afraid noses are like relatives, in the way, one must accept them as they are visited upon us. After one is full grown the shape of a nose cannot be changed by any measures other than a surgical operation, and unless I were sure you would get into the hands of a conscientious person of great surgical skill, I should advise you to accept your nose "as is," softening your sorrow perhaps by the knowledge that every one has her beauty sorrow and some of us have many of them.

IRENE: THE SQUATTING EXERcise will help to overcome constipation. This should be practiced for about ten minutes night and morning: Stand erect, with feet apart, hands resting on hips. Rise upon the toes, then sink the body to the floor, bending the knees sharply until the thighs and legs are doubled upon each other and the weight of the entire body is supported by the toes. The trunk must be maintained perpendicular throughout. My reducing instructions are too long to print here, Irene, but if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to mail them to you.

C. B.: MOST WOMEN WORRY needlessly about their hair falling out. There is a normal shedding of hair. According to one eminent medical authority, the life of a hair ranges from two to six years, after which it falls out to be replaced by a new one. In this way, he claims, about fifty or sixty hairs are normally shed every day. Another authority claims the normal life of a hair varies from several months to two to four years. It is generally agreed on, however, that hair falling varies with seasons and varying health conditions. I shall be glad to send you my treatment for oily hair if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

MADGE: I WOULDN'T WORRY about the hair being straight, because a beautiful coiffure may be arrived at with straight locks, but the thin condition will take a little time and patience to remedy. It can be done, however, and I want you to try this tonic, which has proved most efficient in many troubles akin to yours: Resorcin, 45 grains; glycerin, 1 ounce, and equal parts of alcohol and water to fill a six ounce bottle. Massage your scalp with this tonic every night just as religiously as you brush your teeth before going to bed. There is no trick to massaging. Just dip your finger tips in the tonic and rub the scalp until you produce a feeling of life and glow and a sense of warmth. Then be careful about shampooing your hair often enough to keep it clean and free from dandruff, which should be at least once in two weeks.

A. M. C.: IF THE SUPERFLUOUS hair is on your face, and is of a heavy growth, the electric needle would be the only thing I could suggest to you. However, if it is a light down, you might use equal parts of peroxide and ammonia, which will bleach the hair first and after many applications tends to rot it. If you want a depilatory, however, for removing the hair from under the arms, the following is a splendid formula: Sulphide of barium, 2 drams; oxide of zinc and starch, each 3 drams. Mix these well and keep tightly corked. The paste is then spread over the part and allowed to remain on for a couple of minutes. You then wash it off and apply a good cold cream or soothing ointment to offset the resulting irritation. Generally you can tell when the paste has been on long enough by a slight burning sensation.

A limerick maker, 'tis said,
Got five swinging lines in his head.
He wrote them one day,
And sent them away,
And now he's a dollar ahead.

Are you the author of an original limerick? Can you "think one up"? The Tribune will print a collection of brand new limericks each Sunday and invites contributions. For every limerick published The Tribune will pay $1. Address Limerick Editor, Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Write on one side of the peper. No manuscripts returned.

SUPERSTITIONS about YOUR FUTURE MATE

by Doris Blake

IF you have given your promise to wed, the first day thereafter walk downstairs backward to show you have turned your back on all lovers but the accepted one. This is supposed to insure the courtship days running more smoothly.

A long engagement is fraught with danger of bad luck.

If you receive a proposal on a railroad train, a motor trip, or any public conveyance it is not favored of the gods.

A proposal of marriage received at a dance will bring you luck.

"The maid who asks a man to wed,
Will come to want and beg for bread."

Beware of the spring proposals, says the powers that be in the superstitious land, for spring proposals are not always lasting. It is even said every man's heart in springtime is fickle for a short time.

Not so with the winter proposal, however. It is supposed to be more sincere and enduring.

A man who has been refused three times should take that for a sign his lot will be happier unmarried.

If a young man when proposing is interrupted by another lady than the one he is proposing to, she some day will be his second wife.

A proposal and acceptance by mail is not considered lucky.

Many objections made to a girl's engagement and marriage bode trouble for her.

There is supposed to be considerable luck attached to a troth plighted on Easter Sunday—

"Troth plighted on Christ's rising day,
Is sacred, holy, good, and true;
Let come to me whatever may,
In life or death, I'll cling to you."

Marrying on a very brief acquaintance does not insure luck.

A year of courtship and three months' engagement are considered the luckiest.

Some folklorists say that a girl's first chances are best.

If a girl is a bridesmaid three times or a man is a groomsman three times he or she will never be married.

If the seventh wedding one attends is not one's own one will never marry.

To find out if you're going to have a mate, name two leaves of mistletoe [a man friend's name and your own] and place them before the fire. If they jump up together you and he will marry; the reverse if they don't.

Here's another formula:

Take seven slips of paper and write on five of them the names of possible suitors. On another write, "death" and on the seventh "stranger." Then put them in a box and on seven consecutive mornings, draw out one. The seventh will tell the fortune. If "death" is on the seventh it simply means that you will die unmarried.

When a gypsy girl wants to know how soon she will be married, she whispers into the ear of the first donkey she meets, "Shall I soon have a husband?" If the donkey moves his ear, she will. If he stands immovable, she won't. So if you have a little donkey in your home——

If you wish to know whether you will get a husband or not, knock on a henhouse on Christmas eve; if the cock crows aloud, you will get one—but if it remains silent, you will not.

If you read the third chapter of Hosea, Joel and Amos for three Sundays in succession, the first person you walk with thereafter will be your future wife or husband.

Read the third verse, seventeenth chapter of the book of Job after supper, and on going to bed put the Bible under your pillow with the verse you have read thrust through with a pin and you will call up the image of your future mate.

To marry a lady whose last name begins with the next letter of the alphabet to her husband's name is a sign of great luck and happiness.

If a girl writes the names of her male friends on the ground and places a grain of corn on each, then puts a chicken in the center, the first grain which the chicken swallows will indicate the one she will marry; but if she cannot coax the chicken to eat a grain, she will be an old maid sure.

If you write your lovers' names on a piece of paper, roll them separately in clay, and drop them in a glass of water, the one that rises to the top first will be your mate.

Take the first star you notice, count the numbers between it and the milky way, halve that, and it will give the number of letters in your future husband's name.

If you wish to know when you will marry, the first time you sleep in a strange bed, you shall name the four walls, and whichever wall you see when you first awake will decide for you which of the four persons you will marry.

If you put the mirror under your pillow for three successive nights, you will dream of your future husband.

If you sleep with a borrowed ring on your finger, you will dream of the man you will marry.

If a girl takes a handful of fine ashes and blows her breath hard into them so that they fly into her face, her husband will be unkind to her in every way; but if she blows and they do not fly back at her, her husband will be generous, kind and loving.

There is an old superstition about the darkies, bidding a girl go to a wood pile after dark and draw out a stick:

"Which if it foul and crooked be, and knotty here and there,
A crabbed, churly husband then they earnestly may fear;
But if it straight and even be, and have no knot at all,
A gentle husband then they think shall surely to them fall."

If a young lady wears a borrowed garment to a party, she will meet her future husband.

"If your fellow's name is Harry,
You will not long tarry,
Before you will marry."

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

IN THE CHAMBER OF HORRORS.

DEVIOUS are the ways of the little god of love, and fantastic and garish was the background he chose for action in my case. Chicago, then a crude country metropolis, with latent possibilities, numbered among its houses of amusement a place displaying wax figures and groups of all descriptions.

One evening my father and mother, I had spoken to a strange young desiring to entertain an out of town guest, decided to visit this place. I, a lass of 18, as a special favor, was permitted to accompany them.

We were about ready to return home, having "done" the Chamber of Horrors, and were inspecting a group of wax figures on the main floor.

"Now, this figure to the left," said I, speaking as I supposed to my mother, who the moment before had been at my side, "does not seem in harmony with the rest of the group. His expression seems supercilious and the pose awkward."

Just then the supposed wax figure turned to me with a quizzical look and remarked, "Perhaps, I might change the expression, the pose never."

man! Embarrassment over this contretemps seemed to root me to the spot. But something else, too, rendered me speechless. At a glance from the young man's eyes an electric thrill seemed to pass through my body. Never before had I experienced such emotions; never before seemed so little mistress of myself. But modesty and careful training came to my rescue. I must arouse myself. I must go on with mother.

The thought of mother brought a swift reaction. I glanced about. No sight of mother, father, or Aunt Jane! In the crowd and confusion we had become separated. It was night. I was miles from home, without a penny. In confusion, I explained my predicament to the young man.

"Child," he said, "you must permit me to escort you safely home." Again I was under the spell of those eyes. Kindly, amused, paternal, youthful, they were full of strange contradictions and always with an overpowering fascination for me. Under the spell of these strange, new emotions, I suffered myself to be led to the car and to my home. At the house we found mother and Aunt Jane in a state of great agitation, while father was scouring the city for me.

Mother was voluble in her thanks to my escort (quite unlike her usual collected, unbending self) and begged him to come again when father was home to receive his gratitude.

As my animated "wax figure" left the house he said to me, sub rosa, "Perhaps, if I am permitted to call, I may succeed in overcoming my awkward poses."

Ah! He was a youth! Ever merry and gay, ever with a ready jest to brighten life's solemn moments. Is it to be wondered that now, after ten years of widowhood, memory of his winsomeness serves me as a fountain of hope and joy and youth? E. F.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago

WIDE FIELD OPEN TO WOMEN.

OCCASIONALLY women workers complain of the limited fields open to them in the business world. The limits are mostly imaginary ones and are to be measured by the degree of a woman's ambition. Too few women realize the possibilities in their chosen line of work.

To the writer of the following letter I would suggest a course in public accounting. This work seems especially suitable for her, and the training would open a limitless field in which success would be almost certain. The fact that only a few women in the country have attained the distinction of C. P. A. ought not to be a deterrent, but rather an inducement to try and win a place in a profession that holds so great a promise of success.

"Dear Miss King: For the last eight years, ever since finishing high school, I have been employed as a bookkeeper for a small firm. My training consisted of an elementary course in bookkeeping taken with my high school studies, while my experience has been limited to one business and one firm. Nevertheless I feel that I am an exceptionally good bookkeeper. I never have had any serious difficulty in balancing my books or in making up my monthly reports, and I have frequently been complimented on my work by my employers.

"The firm pays me as much as it can afford, but my salary is a great deal less than I am contented with. For the last year I have been on the lookout for a new position, but judging from the offers I have received from other firms, I find that I am being paid a rather high salary for a bookkeeper, so I have stayed on at my old job.

"I am becoming restless at my inability to procure a better position and earn more money. Bookkeeping seems to be the work I am best fitted for, but as I see no chance of a better job in this line I am growing discouraged.

"I have been thinking of going to evening school to take up some other commercial work, but as mathematics has always been my strong point I'm afraid that I might not be as capable or efficient in any other field. There are really so few things that a woman desiring to earn her own living can do. Bookkeeping, stenography, filing, and selling are the extent of her endeavors in the commercial line.

"She has gained a small foothold in one or two of the professions, such as medicine and the law, but these fields are so overcrowded with men that a woman has to make a superhuman effort in order to gain recognition.

"Would you advise me to stick to my present work or to try another line?

If a course in public accounting is for any reason not to be considered by C. L. R., I would advise her to change her position, as there are many firms that give women bookkeepers chances at executive positions when the occasion arises. In looking for a new position the opportunities for working into a big job ought to be taken into consideration, and not merely the initial salary offered.

A woman of my acquaintance who started as bookkeeper for a large eastern manufacturing house eventually became manager of its most important branch house, with absolute control of its affairs and employés.

ETIQUETTE

By Elizabeth Van Rensselaer

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

STICK TO SIMPLICITY.

WITH the more formal festivities and entertaining that winter always brings in its wake, come, too, additional problems and responsibilities for the hostess. There are such questions as what to select for decorations, what china, silver, and glass to use, and how to arrange the various things that continually bob up to perplex and worry the woman who likes to invite her friends to meals in her house.

Simplicity is the best keynote in all cases. Shaded candles [in the evening], and a bowl of flowers in the center of the table are all that is necessary to give it an artistic air. With the snowiest of linen and the most gleaming of silver and glass [and as little as possible of both!], this will make a charming and pleasing adjunct to even the plainest meal.

Using the dinner plate as the central object, the correct plan for setting a place for a formal several course dinner is as follows:

To the left and farthest away is the fork for the appetizer or oyster or fruit cocktail; next comes the fish fork, then the meat fork, and finally the fork for the salad. Farthest away to the right is the soup spoon; next to it is the silver knife for the fish course, then the dinner knife, and, nearest the plate, the knife for the salad course. Across the plate at the top are laid the dessert and after dinner coffee spoons, the latter being farthest from the plate. The glasses for the meal are put at the upper right hand corner of the plate; the napkin may be placed either on the service plate or to the right.

R. T. G.: The bridegroom and best man take their places at the right of the chancel steps after the minister has entered. Then the ushers, bridesmaids, and maid of honor in the order given walk up the aisle. Last comes the bride on her father's left arm. Upon receipt of a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be happy to mail you a list of reliable books on etiquette.

Is It Proper?

"Dear Miss Blake: Do you think it proper for six or seven girls about 13 or 14 years of age to go to an early show in the evening with a bunch of school boys of about the same age? I don't mean as fellows, but just respectably going without any foolishness.

"DOT."

If the mother of one of you girls would go along on the movie show party it would be quite all right, but it would be rather precocious and not at all good form to go otherwise.

Poor at Conversation.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a young man of 21 very dearly, and want to be with him very often. But why is it when I am with him I never know what to talk about to keep up the conversation? And when we go to a movie we are not talkative, and very quiet?

"I am 19. Would it be too young to become engaged? My folks approve, but his don't.

BETH."

It isn't necessary to talk at a movie. It disturbs people close by and there is nothing in the world more annoying than having people talk during a performance on the legitimate stage, is there? But when you go home, it would be easy enough to talk about the show and the players you like and stories you have read that would make good movies in your opinion and then the newspapers are so full of things these days, they supply much "talk" material. Why don't you get some good book and read together when you have an evening to spend? It's a good habit to acquire and one many nothing of the instruction one is gathcouples find great pleasure in to say ering along the way.

Down on the Derby.

My cheeks grow warm as I remember an occasion several years ago when my blushes almost burned me up. I went to church one Sunday evening with an escort who wore a stunning new derby hat. [Thank heaven those hats are almost relics now!] The congregation rose for the singing of the first hymn and at the close of the song there was a loud report. I had sat down upon that stunning new hat.

A Lifelong Search.

I recently visited a mining camp that is owned by two brothers. I was introduced to one of the brothers and remarked to him that his wife had been explaining to me the workings of the mine when he said, "I have been looking for a wife all my life; I wish you would bring her to me." I had been introduced to the bachelor brother instead of the married one. H. C. W.

Above Suspicion.

A young man had just entered the service of our company and was assisting in one of the stores that was having much trouble with shoplifters. The manager had occasion to call his attention to a customer on the floor who was under strong suspicion, and urged him to keep an eye on her, giving him her record as he had it. I assure you the manager was a bit embarrassed by the reply: "O, I know her; she's my mother-in-law."

Listening to the Neighbors.

One evening my neighbors, with whom I am quite friendly, were having a loud discussion. From my hall window I could hear everything that was said, so I stood there taking in the discussion. Suddenly without a second's warning I was caught with a sneezing spell. I was embarrassed enough without having Mr. Man come directly to his window and close it.

CONFECTION SUGGESTIONS.

It would be a pleasant indulgence to rant about the vagaries of our sugar supply, but an enumeration of the different phases of the sugar famine we have passed through recently would probably profit nobody anything. It certainly will be more profitable to discuss the cooking of sugar, since there is a good gambling chance that there will be some small amount to cook, if we carefully get our allotted pound a day every day. True to the well known psychology of human nature, people are rarely so eager to cook anything as when they cannot get it to cook.

If the amateur sugar cook or candy maker or the experienced cook out of practice really gets sugar thoroughly cooked—that is, the wet put with it or only that naturally in it all cooked out—the product is too likely to be a rough and ragged rock, quite unrelated to the various sorts of standardized sugar rocks known in the confectioner's business. Once obtaining these rocks, they think that the sugar used is spoiled and lost. Not so; it may be remelted. Yes, remelted, not once but many times over, if it is at no time burned.

Remelting of Sugar.

The theme then of this discourse is the remelting of sugar. I believe that the knowledge of how to melt sugar successfully and perhaps to keep it melted is one of the great secrets of the confectioner's trade. By the way, some kinds of amateur sugar rocks need not be completely remelted. Take those which have resulted from cooking too long a caramel mixture. Fifteen seconds may be too long. They may be so hard that they will fly into all sorts of bits when broken with a hammer, yet if they are set in a warm place they will soften, may then be marked off in small squares like any caramel, cut up, and perfectly shaped between two knife blades. Moreover, if those caramels so made stiffen up again just put them in a plate on the radiator or the top of an oven, and when they have softened up you will find that you have the best sort of a chewing caramel. Knowing this simple remedy you need never run the risk of a new dentist bill because of eating rocky caramels.

The professional candy maker has what he calls a "batch warmer," before which he keeps soft mixtures that when cold will be rocky or brittle. He manipulates these mixtures in the heat. Before the open oven door of a not too hot oven we may do the same thing, or we can warm a batch in the way suggested for the caramels. I have even put a rocky cake of caramel in a frying pan over a tiny bit of fire till it softened and was workable.

Use Scraps in Caramels.

But about remelting or salvaging sugar, which is no more likely to cook again to a rock than the fresh sugar we started out with, I think I have really something important to say. To give credit where credit is due let me say I got the best part of the idea from Mrs. Elvira Merigold of Paducah, Ky., who wrote me a long letter about her success in making caramels. Previous to this I rather scorned renovated candies. In this letter she said:

"If you should be so unfortunate as to spoil any batch of candy, weigh it up as sugar and use it for caramels. Save all scrapings and leftover icings. Sometimes when dipping bonbons the cream gets gritty. Save and use in caramels, allowing just a little more than if clear sugar was used. Cook your caramels in a large kettle to allow plenty of room to boil up."

There follows this a long description of how a mixture may be divided up, each portion treated differently by use of different flavors and nuts, chocolate, fruits, and combinations of these, to make a great variety of caramels. Tough caramels are salvaged by partly melting them and combining a half with nuts, etc.

How to Soften Caramels.

Mrs. Merigold advises a more than generous amount of glucose or corn sirup for caramels. A little is almost a necessity, and two tablespoons to a pound of sugar is about the least we can use. Further directions from this source are:

"By testing the sirup in cold water you can have the caramels of any consistency you like. Hard caramels are as unattractive from a chewing point of view as too soft are to the eye. However, if you should get them too hard add milk or cream and cook over. If too soft add milk or cream and cook over. Stir your caramels from the moment you put them over the fire until they are done. Use a wooden spoon or paddle and stir gently, just a slow agitation over the entire bottom of the kettle. Hard stirring will cause them to sugar."

The emphatic things, then, are gentle and slow stirring, and remember to use the wooden spoon for every sort of stirring in metal.

Messes of Cooked Sugar.

Looking around for messes of cooked sugar to make some caramels with, I took some butterscotch sirup made of brown sugar, a remnant of what had been butterscotch sirup made of white sugar which had sugared off in a day or two, because the sugar had granulated around the pan it was cooked in; a praline just made as an experiment; two of the pieces of what I call below brown sugar kisses—a pound in all—and cooked these first with a cup of top milk to 230 degrees. Then I added a cup of cream, pouring it into the mixture in a fine stream and stirring it gently. This was cooked until it gave the proper test in cold water. It was flavored with vanilla and the chopped nuts in the praline.

The difficult point in caramel making, about which we might write several pages, is to stop cooking the mixture at the right moment and as suddenly as possible. When it gets to the swirling bubble stage it is already too stiff. The point between that and that in which the mixture runs readily from the spoon is a precarious one.

But melting sugar, say brown sugar, is something that is worth while knowing how to do, and it is not overeasy. Brown sugar melted to just the right stage, not burned the least trifle, immediately mixed with chopped nuts and possibly flavored a bit, makes an agreeable kiss when dropped on a buttered dish in globs. But different batches of sugar behave in different ways. Let it warm slowly, stirring it until it seems to crawl—this is brown sugar—of itself, then increase the heat and stir from the melting point. Heat slowly at first or the sugar will be too much dried out and rocky, etc. Much must be learned by actual manipulation. No description can more than suggest right behavior toward such a truly temperamental stuff as sugar.

Prunes as Confection.

Prunes made into a confection are far nicer for eating either with meat or as a sweet than most people realize. Wash carefully, soak well, cook in a covered kettle until tender enough for the stones to come out readily, remove these, roll the prunes in sugar, and fry gently in a little butter till well glazed. Cooked in a covered kettle prunes swell to double. After being cooked tender the skins will easily rub off or up, so they must be handled with particular care in removing the stones or they will be mussy.

Apple jelly is often stiff enough to be cut into nice squares which may be rolled in powdered sugar and served as we serve Turkish pastes. It may be made extra stiff and flavored with peppermint. In this case the skins of greening apples cooked in water to cover are perhaps best, but the pink crab apple jelly or the jelly made from any pink parings is prettiest.

All measurements are made level. These recipes. A teaspoon of medium size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Young Chicken Baked With Salt Pork.

Singe and remove the pin feathers, using a strawberry huller for this purpose, a large plump young chicken. Cut off the neck on a line with the top (shoulder) joint of the wings. Carefully split the chicken the entire length of the backbone; remove entrails, lungs, etc. Wash and dry both inside and outside. Twist the wings and second joints to loosen the tendons and flatten the breast bone with a blow from the cleaver. Arrange thin slices of fat salt pork in the bottom of a dripping pan or a double roasting pan; place the chicken above the pork, skin side up; sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour; cover wings, legs, and breast with thin slices of pork and place in a hot oven. When well seared over and flour is delicately browned add one-half cup of boiling water, cover and cook in a hot oven one hour, basting often with the dripping in pan, and dredge with flour after each basting. More water may be added if needed. Remove chicken to serving platter. Toast eight triangle shaped slices of bread, then dip them into the dripping in the pan, turn them once that they may become well moistened, sprinkle with finely chopped parsley, and arrange them around the chicken. Garnish with sprigs of parsley. Melt two tablespoons of butter in the baking pan, add four tablespoons of flour, stir until well browned, then add gradually one cup of the liquor in which the giblets were cooked, stirring constantly until sauce is smooth, season with salt and pepper, and add one-half teaspoon of sauce soup seasoning and one-half cup of hot cream; strain into a hot sauce boat.

Creamed Oysters in Puff Paste Patty Shells.

Melt two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan, add two cups of oysters, and cook one minute or until the gills curl. Remove oysters at once and keep warm. To the liquor in the pan add two tablespoons of flour, one cup of chopped celery, and one tablespoon of lemon juice, cook ten minutes, then add two eggs well beaten and one cup of hot cream. Stir until mixture thickens, add oysters, and season with salt and white pepper. Do not allow mixture to boil after adding oysters. Serve in crisp hot puff paste patty shells for luncheon or Sunday night supper.

"Celery Cabbage" Salad.

Finely shred crosswise part of a head of "celery cabbage"; there should be three cups. Wash, pare, core, and quarter one large or two small Jonathan apples and cut in thin slices crosswise (divide the quarters lengthwise if apples are large, before slicing), or cut apples in Julienne strips. Add one-half cup of crisp celery cut in thin slices crosswise and one-half cup of blanched and shredded almonds. Toss all lightly together and dispose on five cold individual salad plates. Mask with mayonnaise dressing and garnish with tiny bits of pimento, or sprinkle with paprika. The success of all salads depends upon the crispness of the "greenery" used as their foundation, and that the materials used, including the dressing, are thoroughly chilled.

Smothered Bananas.

Peel and cut four large bananas in halves lengthwise, then cut the halves crosswise. Melt two tablespoons of butter in an omelet pan or in the blazer of a chafing dish, add two tablespoons of sugar and one-half cup of orange juice or sherry if it is available. When hot add the prepared bananas and cook until bananas are soft. Remove to hot serving plates and pour over orange sauce. Serve with the meat course in place of fritters or serve as a light dessert.

To make the orange sauce mix two teaspoons of arrowroot or cornstarch with one cup of sugar. Add two cups of boiling water and cook over a slow fire twenty minutes, stirring constantly the first five minutes, afterward occasionally. Add the grated rind and juice of two small oranges, one tablespoon of lemon juice, and one and one-half tablespoons of butter. Serve hot.

Raisin Fanchonettes with Meringue.

Cover six small inverted individual pie pans (measuring 4¼ inches in diameter and 1¼ inches deep) with pastry, prick the surface with a fork to prevent past "blistering." Place on a baking sheet and bake in a hot oven until delicately browned. Remove shells from the outside of pans, set them on the inside of pans, and fill with the following mixture:

Cook one and one-half cups of chopped seeded raisins with water to cover until tender. Add one cup of sugar, the grated rind and juice of one orange, and the juice of one lemon, add one-eighth teaspoon of salt and one tablespoon of butter, and the yolks of three eggs well beaten; continue cooking over a slow fire until the eggs are set. Fill the shells with the mixture and spread with meringue made of the remaining whites of eggs beaten until stiff, then add gradually three tablespoons of granulated sugar while beating constantly. Piling meringue pyramid fashion on the small pies, then sprinkle lightly with sugar and browning them evenly in a moderate oven adds greatly to their appearance.

Serve these dainty fanchonettes with cheese fingers, as dessert for dinner.

Rice Griddle Cakes.

To two cups of boiled rice (hot or cold, but with kernels distinct) add one-half teaspoon of salt, one cup of sour cream or rich sour milk, mixed with one-half teaspoon of soda and two well beaten egg yolks. Stir until ingredients are well blended. Sift together one cup of bread flour and two teaspoons of baking powder; add to first mixture, then cut and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Bake on a well greased hot griddle turn when cakes are well filled with bubbles. If the mixture appears too thick add a little cream. Rice lacks fat; therefore if the milk is not creamy add two or three tablespoons of melted butter.

Serve hot with butter and maple or brown sugar sirup, for the noonday luncheon for school children.

Baked apples or baked winter pears and either cocoa or milk will make a pleasing combination for their lunch eon and they will be well nourished.

When griddle cakes, waffles, or muffins form the chief dish for children's luncheons, use full milk and do not lessen the number of eggs called for in the recipe. If this is done, the food value of these foods is materially lessened.

Cranberry Frappe.

Pick over and wash one quart of cranberries, add two cups of water, and cook until soft; strain through a cheese cloth, and add two cups of sugar and the juice of one lemon. Chill and freeze to a mush. Serve in stem glasses with roast turkey in place of cranberry sauce or jelly.

My Experience with a Burglar

Obliging.

One day I was feeling in an exceptionally fine humor as I entered the flat building where I lived. Meeting a man coming out loaded with bundles, in order to be accommodating I opened the door for him to pass out and even overtook him to hand him a package which he had dropped.

Upon entering my apartment I found it had been ransacked, and the overburdened man whom I had been so anxious to assist was evidently the guilty party. M. R.

A Lucky Throw.

I awoke one night just in time to see a man getting out of my window. I picked up an ink bottle, the only thing handy, and threw it at him. It was a lucky throw, for, although it didn't hit him, it struck the window and splattered him liberally with red ink, which identified him later. K. S.

Kept House for Awhile.

My uncle and aunt went to Cincinnati for the week-end, and upon returning found that a burglar had "kept house" for them while away. He not only slept in the bed, but prepared a meal, smoked my uncle's cigars, took a bath, exchanged his soiled underwear for a fresh suit, helped himself to a suit of my uncle's clothes and an overcoat, and departed, I trust, much refreshed. N. J. C.

The "Burglar's" Answer.

I was aroused from my morning work by a neighbor lady, who came rushing in with the news that there was some one in her cellar.

Of course, I thought he must be very daring to come out in daylight for his work. I armed myself with a stick of wood and made my way very quietly over to the cellar door where the "robber" was concealed. I peered in, expecting every moment to be jumped upon. I heard nothing, so I called in: "Come out at once, or else I will fire on you."

The supposed robber answered curtly: "You had better not try any of that, or there will be something doing. I am the water man!" C. P.

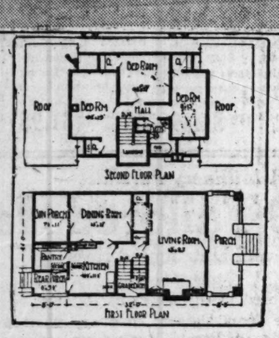
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By Anita de Campi

A house of shingles & stucco.

COURTESY—AMERICAN BUILDER.



Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for a personal reply.

SHINGLES AND STUCCO.

ONE of the first decisions that the prospective home builder must make is in regard to the materials that are to be used in his new house. This decision is becoming more and more difficult to make, for the reason that materials and combinations of materials are increasing in variety. For many years American homes were constructed of two materials—lumber and brick, with here and there a stone and mortar house. Now there are hollow tile, stucco, shingles, and a wide variety of wood products.

One combination of the newer sort that is used extensively is shingles and stucco. An all shingle house is pretty, but there is a monotonous sameness about these walls that architects have broken by the use of stucco. A house of this type is shown in the accompanying illustration. The outside walls up to the first floor sill and the porch pillars and walls have been covered with stucco, while the balance is of shingles in their natural color.

Shingles improve in appearance with age, some of the most artistic of home exteriors being found in the old houses of New England. Inventive genius has discovered a method by which new shingles can be given the appearance of age by a chemical treatment that is much used. In consequence, the modern home builder can have a shingle house with all the handsome appearance that age and weather give the shingles.

The silvered effect that is secured by this method is shown on this six room story and a half house and blends perfectly with the stucco, and, coupled with the other good features of the exterior of this home, makes it an exceptionally good looking place in which to live.

On the first floor of this house are three rooms—living and dining rooms and kitchen. Three bedrooms and bath are shown on the plan for the second floor.

One of the interesting features of the interior of this home is the large living room and the manner in which the dining room has been connected with it. Each room retains its privacy, but the wide, cased opening, with glazed doors on the dining room side, permit their being thrown together when occasion requires. The living room is large, 25 by 13 feet, and has a fireplace with bookcases on either side at one end.

The open stairway, between the living room and kitchen, is conveniently placed, and part way up is a landing with a window bay, in which a seat can be placed. Three good sized bedrooms opening off a central hall, with the bathroom adjacent to all of them, complete the interior arrangement.

Story and a half houses have a feature that is most desirable. That is the opportunity for numerous closets of large size that is given by the slope of the roof. The dormer window projections on both front and back make it possible to have large bedrooms, while at either end of the rooms, under the roof, there is room for the closets. How this space has been utilized is shown on the second floor plan.

Another good feature of this house is the sun porch that opens off the dining room. This is of a size that will allow it to be used for either a breakfast porch or a sun parlor. As in all good modern house designs the kitchen is arranged so that its equipment can be placed to make the work easy, and a pantry in which the ice box is kept is connected with the rear porch, eliminating the necessity for the ice man to tramp through the kitchen.

The dimensions of this house are 24 by 32 feet, exclusive of 8 foot porch projections at both front and rear.

In furnishing, simplicity and comfort have been well thought out. The floor covering and the curtains are alike throughout. Mole colored chenille rugs are used and champagne tinted gauze casement curtains. In the living room is an overstuffed davenport eight feet long, covered with a lovely velour having a black ground and a million small flowers, subdued in color. Some cushions repeating these colors are in soft Italian stripes.

A big loungy arm chair is in black satin. Several smaller chairs have loose cushions. Some are covered with dull Italian striped silk. The walls are plain paneled walls in French gray, but a triumphant decorative note is sounded in a beautiful overmantel floral painting. A detail of the kind gives such value to a decorative scheme. It is not an extravagant piece and well worth buying because it will always be pleasing. It is a copy of an old Dutch painting showing a great bouquet of flowers in an urn, all on a dark—almost black—background.

The lighting fixtures are fitted with small parchment shields, ornamented with a triple band repeating the colors used in the cushions.

Several incidental pieces are in the Italian type, in dull finished walnut with just a touch of color rubbed in.

An oblong bas-relief is fastened flat against the wall and beautifully colored. It is the well known portrait of a woman by Donatello, a fascinating profile with a Mona Lisa charm of mystery about it. Italian candlesticks are among the other minor things that give distinction.

Why is it all so lovely? First because it is restful. There is not a single piece of furniture in the room that suggests discomfort. Then the incidentals have been selected with a certainty that it does not cost any more to have good things than to have tawdry ones. They can all be found without much trouble right here "in our own home town."

MISS M. T. E.: Use simple undercurtains of voile and the drapes as per sample. The color scheme you suggest will do nicely, but I should not use scarf for piano. Let the small decorative objects in the room bring out the color and life of arrangement.

R. V. D.: Tear out the old fireplace and substitute a ready made mantel that can be had in simple Italian style, made of fine cement.

The Above Sales for Monday at Both Stores

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

9459—Young girl's or small woman's bungalow apron, to be slipped on over the head, with round V, or square neck and short length kimono sleeves. It is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years.

9484—Woman's dress with chemisette and closing at the left side front. The fronts extend into tabs below the waist line and the sleeves are in long or short length. The two piece straight gathered skirt has a regulation waist line. It is cut in sizes 36 to 44 inches bust measure.

9461—Child's rompers closing at the back, with waist and short sleeves in one piece and with round neck, with or without collar, or with square neck. The bloomers are in two pieces, and it is cut in sizes 1, 2, and 4 years.

How to Use the Patterns

If you have any question relating to sewing that you would like to have answered write to Clotilde, Chicago Tribune inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

THE child's rompers, number 9461, is an excellent pattern for the play garment that has to be a part of every little person's wardrobe.

Shrink the material before cutting out, and remember to make it loose everywhere. The pockets will please a child mightily, but if you don't want them to tear the rompers, put "stays" under the upper edges on the wrong side of the bloomers. A little length of inch wide linen tape makes a good "stay," and after the pockets are basted in position on the bloomers, cut pieces of tape about one inch in length, turn the raw edges under, and hem down to the garment on the wrong side, so that the pocket in being stitched on will have the stitching come directly through the middle of the tape. Be sure that the tape comes a tiny bit about the ends of the pocket.

If elastic is used in the casing at the knees, it must not be too tight. Children can be made irritable and nervous by some discomfort like this and not be able to tell what is troubling them.

Number 9459 is a bungalow apron, designed especially for young girls and small women. It is designed to slip on over the head, instead of having any opening. It would be a wise precaution to take a piece of old muslin and fold according to the directions on the pattern, and cut out the upper part of the pattern. A piece twelve or thirteen inches long will be big enough, but have the width wide enough to include the sleeves. Cut out with the desired neck opening and then baste the side seams and slip on over the head, to be sure that you have made it large enough to get in and out of without tearing.

The belt should be several inches larger than a close waist measure, and after the apron seams are finished and the belt made, put the belt on and let it fall into place, then put pins in at the under arm seams, showing where the bottom of the belt comes, and make narrow straps of the same or trimming material, and stitch on each side seam for the belt to slip through.

No. 9484 is an attractive model for a dress, and one that can be easily made at home. Never forget to apply your own measures to any new pattern you may be going to use. Also be sure and lay the entire pattern on the material, exactly according to the directions given on the pattern, so as to be sure it will all come out. Frequently one can shift the pieces about on the cloth, cutting more economically by so doing.

The tabs on the waist must be lined, letting the lining extend a little above where each tab ends. Lay the right side of lining and tab together, stitch together in a narrow seam, and turn the lining to the wrong side.

The long sleeve shown in the picture is good looking, and not difficult to make. The cuff is, of course, lined, and the lining stitched to the cuff around three sides—the wrist and length edges. Turn the lining to the wrong side, baste and press. After the sleeve seam is finished and the lower edge gathered between the notches, turn in the bottom edge of the outside of the cuff and lay in place on the sleeve according to the notches, lapping the upper cuff edge over the under, and baste and stitch. Then hem the cuff lining down over the seam and fasten the cuff with snaps. It is necessary, to be sure that when the cuff is stitched on it won't be too tight at that place, and if the material is at all heavy a loose measure there should be taken. Try the sleeve on before stitching the cuff on. And in stitching the cuff and lining together the ends of the seams should be left free, so as to allow for the turning in on the bottom edge.

After the sleeves are stitched into the armhole the seam across the top of the shoulder should be laid towards the shoulder seam and hemmed to the lining for a distance of about two inches either side of the shoulder seam. This makes the sleeve lie flat on the shoulder. On thin dresses where there is no lining, stitch through to the waist that same distance. If the seam is not fastened there it often turns down towards the arm when on, and gives an ugly appearance.

A skirt placket should be perfectly finished, and when it is the opening is practically invisible. But when carelessly done, it is very evident. The upper side of the opening has a faced hem and the side that laps under an extension hem. Take a strip of silk, satin, or lining about three inches wide and the length of the opening. Fold it together down the middle, and stitch the raw edges to the skirt edge, stitching a little inside of the seam line on the skirt. Then turn the facing towards the wrong side, making the fold exactly on the seam line, and that will bring the stitched seam a little underneath. If the finish of the skirt will allow of it, stitch the facing to the skirt three-eighths of an inch from the edge, the length of the opening. This makes a substantial place to sew the hooks or snaps without sewing through to the right side at all. The extension hem is often made by cutting the skirt seam for that length a little wider than ordinary, and letting that serve as the extension, lining it and stitching the lining on its outer edge to the skirt exactly on the skirt seam line, thus marking a guide for the sewing on of the eyes or snaps. Backstitch in small stitches the faced and extension hems together on the wrong side across the bottom.

Codfish Tomorrow for Dinner

Get a package of Gorton's Codfish from your grocer, and try one of these simple recipes. An economical, delicious meal, with practically no trouble to prepare.

Gorton's Codfish, Creamed

Let the fish stand in cold water, to freshen, for several hours. Then put into stew-pan with fresh water, and let come to a boil. Pour off nearly all the water, add milk, and thicken with flour to make a cream, stirring well to prevent burning. After cooking, remove from fire, stir in slowly one or two eggs well beaten, add butter. Serve with boiled or baked potatoes.

Gorton's Codfish Balls.

Let codfish stand in cold water for several hours, to freshen. Then put on stove in pan of fresh water, and boil about 15 minutes. Remove, chop fish and boiled potatoes together, using one part fish to two parts potatoes. Add one egg well beaten, and form into balls. Flour lightly, and fry in hot pork fat to a nice brown.

Gorton's Codfish comes in one-half and one pound sanitary cartons. For sale at all grocers.

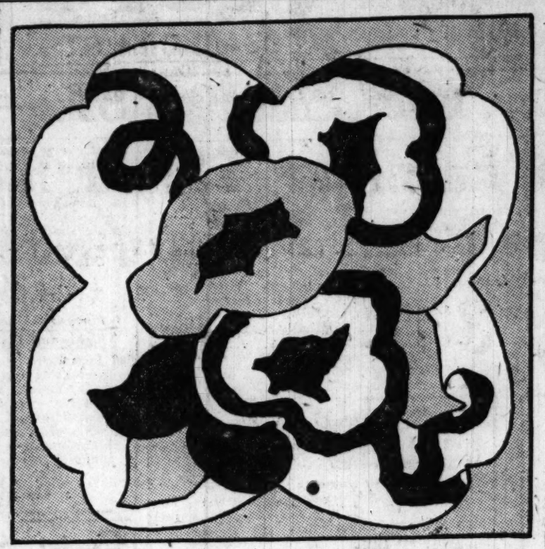
PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK. By Clotilde

GIVE her a pillow top in silk that you've dyed yourself in a batik pattern. Does that solve the problem? Or make several of them for your own living room. They do make wonderfully artistic bits of color. And they're much easier to dye than you think.

The all-over pattern for the silk is achieved by repeating the unit of design given in full size on this page. This unit of design is four inches square. Repeating them one after another will give you a lovely design and omitting each alternate design makes a pattern just as lovely and with much less work. The back of the pillow need not be ornamented at all.

Orange silk or turquoise blue silk makes the most fascinating color schemes. But you can use unbleached muslin, pongee, or white cotton crêpe equally well. Suppose you are making an oblong pillow twelve inches wide and twenty inches long. On a piece of material 14x22 inches (that allows one inch all around for seams and shrinking in dyeing) lay off with a soft pencil five squares 4x4 inches in length and three in width. The small picture of the oblong pillow will explain how to do this. Then trace the design given here eight times in the squares designated. Fasten the design in the paper directly over the pencil square and trace lightly with a blunt pencil, using carbon paper between the design and the material for the pillow.



Heat some paraffin in a saucepan until a blue haze is seen to rise from the surface. Then, with an artist's bristle brush No. 3, paint the paraffin (which is then just like water) on all those parts of the design that are gray in color.

Prepare a package of scarlet dye according to directions, except that the amount of water added to it should not exceed two quarts. For batik dyeing the dye must be strong. Allow the dye to cool to a temperature of 60 degrees Fahrenheit, or even less. Then immerse the material for the pillow in this dye. Stir it until it is a very dark tone, as washing out the dye will lighten it and, furthermore, wet material is always a darker tone than when dried. Rinse the material in cold water until all superfluous dye is washed out. Now paint over all the spaces that are black in the design with paraffin. Prepare some violet dye in the same manner as the scarlet dye. Immerse the material, when the dye is cold, stir and rinse. When dry remove all the paraffin by soaking the material in about two quarts of gasoline. Dry and press. Be sure to dye the material for the back of the pillow, along with the part having the batik design, each time.

If you wish a square pillow, lay off five squares along the top and five along the side and place the design in each square or in alternate ones, just as you wish.

Waffles—Um-m-m!

A Chicago teacher of Domestic Science writes: "There is more ease in the preparation of waffles made from because the batter is of better consistency and does not adhere to the iron, as do the others."

Whether it's for pancakes, muffins or waffles, it will pay you to say "VIRGINIA SWEET" instead of "Pancake flour" to your grocer.

TRY THIS RECIPE—Beat the yolks of two eggs, add one cup milk, three tablespoons melted butter and one cup VIRGINIA SWEET PANCAKE FLOUR; mix thoroughly. Bake on hot, well-oiled waffle iron.

All good grocers sell VIRGINIA SWEET PANCAKE FLOUR. Say plainly to yours: "VIRGINIA SWEET—no other, please."

the new vacuum bottle that will not break

IN American homes the vacuum bottle has won a permanent place. Hot drinks or cold drinks whenever they are needed! But how easily the old-fashioned glass-lined bottles break! Who has not wanted an unbreakable vacuum bottle?

To meet this need a new kind of vacuum bottle has been perfected. It will not break, even if it is dropped.

Absolutely no glass or any fragile material is used in the construction of the new Stanley Vacuum Bottle. It is made of steel and lined with Amalite.

In the home, on motoring trips, on board ship or train, at the office—everywhere—the Stanley Ferrostat Vacuum Bottle is proving a new convenience and a new economy. It will never break.

The crew of the NC-4, Hawker, Alcock and all the other overseas pilots—British and American—used Stanley Bottles.

The United States Navy adopted it after severe tests.

It is made in a handsome rich black finish in one and two quart sizes. It is the only vacuum bottle that can be had in this convenient two quart size.

The most economical

Naturally the initial cost of the Stanley is higher than other vacuum bottles, but in the end the Stanley is the best investment for it has no cost of upkeep or refills. The first cost is the last cost.

Buying Fish by Mail

BUYING fish by mail is simply the working out of the old principle that "a straight line is the shortest distance between two points." And in this case, the "straight line" way—the direct way—is the easy, safe and satisfactory way. It's the way that insures freshness and flavor in your fish that is unobtainable otherwise.

Ever since that day, back in the early "eighties," when I sent out my first pail of mackerel, I've kept this one thought firmly in mind: "My fish must always be better than folks can buy in their local stores or I can't hope to sell it." The fish which your dealer offers are simply what he can buy from the middleman. He is too far from the source of supply to obtain selected grades of fish. I am right on the ground—I get the first choice of the best catches—clean and pack everything, fresh from the ocean, in the most sanitary and best equipped building possible to build. Then it is shipped direct to you.

No matter where you live, you can have from me, for your home table, just as good fish as we folks here on the seashore enjoy. I take all the risk of pleasing you—everything is sent subject to your complete approval—if you are not fully satisfied your money will be refunded without question. That my fish must satisfy and that my way of doing business must please is shown by the way this business has steadily grown, I now serve over 100,000 families in all parts of the country. Now is the time to send us your order and prove for yourself what a splendid treat Davis sea food will be for you and your family.

FRANK E. DAVIS,

Salt Mackerel—

The Davis Kind

Make the Best Fish Meal Ever!

With the cool weather here we advise you to buy some of your Fall supply of mackerel now. Fall fish are always the best—they are fat, thick and well meated; the fat running through the entire fish makes them tender and well flavored.

The Spring and Summer catch (while much cheaper) are poor, lank fish, which it is almost impossible to freshen, and, consequently, are dry and tasteless.

We have some of the fat Fall fish which we advise you to buy now, the larger sizes being especially desirable. If you think them too large, halve one lengthwise, which will be sufficient for several persons and you will find it good value, being even richer than the small fish.

The sizes and prices follow. Order at least part of your Fall and Winter supply now.

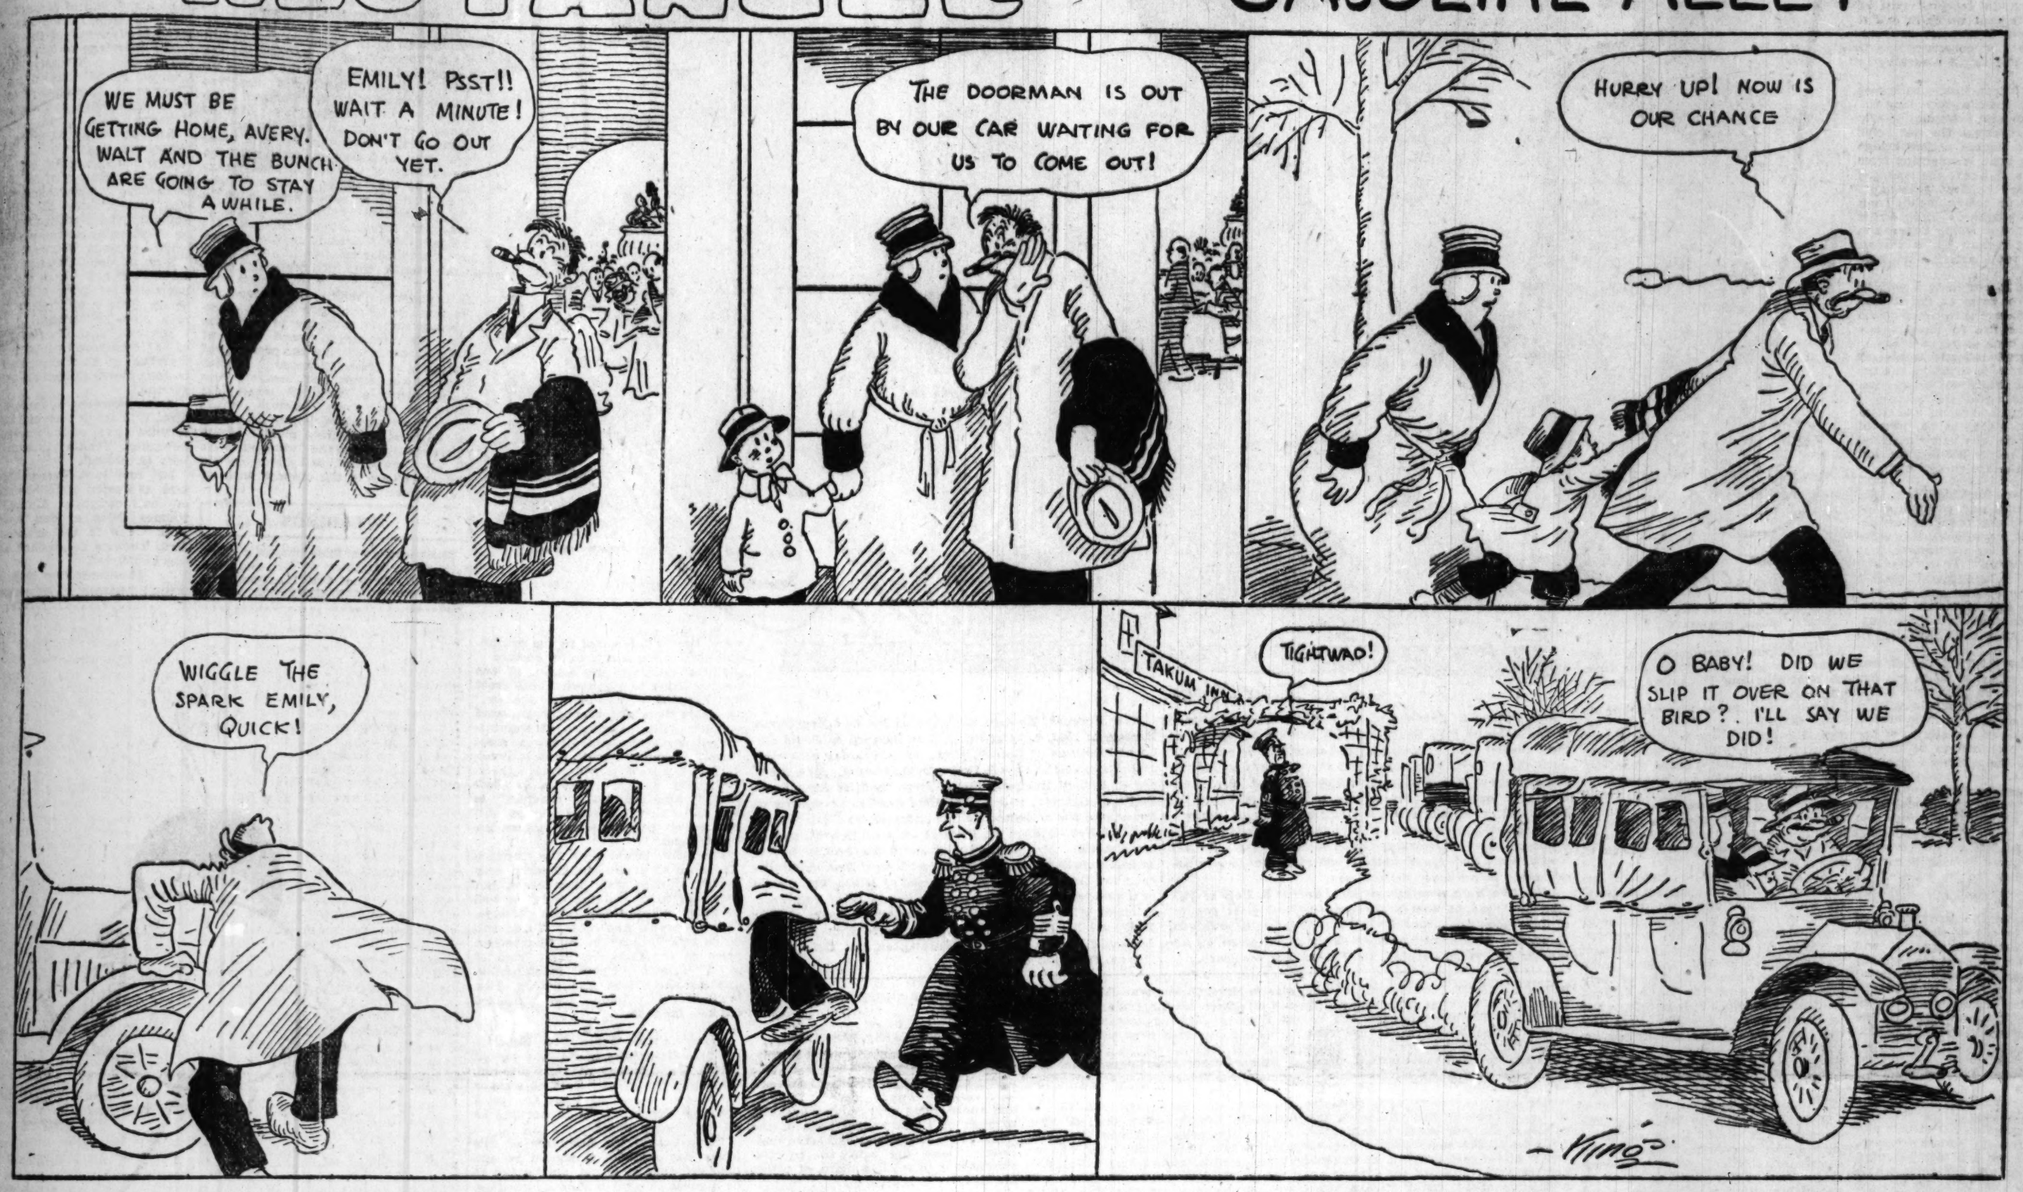
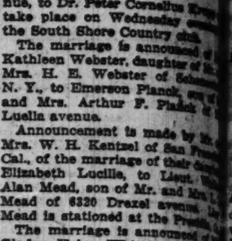
THE RECTANGLE... GASOLINE ALLEY



CHRISTMAS CHEER..

(EARLY VARIETY)

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY



Another Chapter in Chicago's Era of Construction

By Mme. X.

IN years to come, when what we now call the boulevard link has become such an accepted part of everyday life that we don't call it anything, a few Chicagoans will remember this era of construction. It is picturesque and worth recording in some fashion.

Don't let us forget, in the splendors of completion, today's two long inclines of Michigan avenue slowly creeping to a meeting; the red brick skeleton of the double decker bridge which, joint by joint, is emerging from the river bed and bank; the ups and downs negotiated by foot passengers hurrying north on the boulevard from Randolph street towards Rush street bridge; the fierce traffic congestion which daily, at certain hours, threatens the city's main artery with apoplexy.

This moment in our history will, in a decade or two, seem as unreal and incredible as does the reconstruction period after the fire to those whose memories hark back as far as that.

One of the really effective pieces of architecture which is to adorn the triumphant thoroughfare will be the Crerar library building at the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and Randolph street. This is to be built of Bedford limestone, the same material as that of the public library, the Art institute, and the University club.

Good Stone for Chicago.

It is a beautiful and suitable stone for Chicago's smoke drenched atmosphere, though why we don't make more use of our own Illinois limestone it is hard to understand. It is the one known material to hold its own against the devastations of our gas charged, disintegrating, and defacing smoke. Age gives its dazzling exterior a softening, mellow color most soothing to the eye.

Only about a third of the Crerar library structure is now to be put up. This will include on the top floor a huge reading room with windows looking north, east, and south. The library is to occupy the two top stories of the structure and promises to be one of the great scientific reference libraries of the country.

There is a "gentleman's agreement" among certain prominent architects to emphasize the architectural unity and beauty of that part of Michigan avenue which lies north of the river by instituting and maintaining a certain uniform eye-line to be marked by bands of electric lights like those on other buildings.

This will make the perspective of the boulevard, by day or night, a striking and impressive feature. It will also provide, in a measure, that quality most lacking in American municipal architecture—harmony. It is to be hoped that they succeed in this endeavor to make every structure on the avenue a harmonious part of a beautiful whole.

Society Lacks Leadership.

With such a setting as is planned for Chicago, a society to fit should be developed, for Chicago society is in as transitional a stage as her streets and architecture. Society leaders are born, not made, and we are in need of a renaissance of definite character, which should provide us with leaders to guide us from that materialistic chaos now called "society." We are without form, elegance, ideals, or distinction of any kind, though there are people in society who have some or all of these qualifications.

We have had such leaders in the past, remarkable women, who left Chicago and went forth into the world, and wherever they went made a deep impression. Perhaps, had Chicago attained the beauty and symmetry planned for this city they might not have left her.

Wherever they went the same qualities that made them conspicuous here gave them prominence elsewhere. So Mrs. Potter Palmer was renowned in London and Paris, as she was here, for her jewels and costumes, her personal beauty and wide hospitality. Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh's entertainments in her Sixteenth street palace in Washington were as noted for their charming stateliness, their "grand manner," as were her similar entertainments here in earlier days, in her Lake Shore drive mansion. While today in Washington, as of yore in Chicago, there is no hostess quite so popular, so entirely the ideal of what a hostess should be, as Mrs. Marshall Field. There is a certain sumptuous, splendid, gay kindliness in her hospitality, not to be matched anywhere, which makes its impress on her countrymen and foreigners alike; so that it is not to be wondered at that a reception at her house was the one unofficial social engagement made for the Prince of Wales by those arranging his recent American tour.

Problem for Psychologist.

There is something for the psychologist to study in the extravagant interest this nice, wholesome, rather undeveloped, youthful Britisher excited among young American girls. I know one maiden, of an otherwise intelligent mentality, who has his pictures about her room, who cuts them out of every magazine and newspaper where she can find them, who talks about him in accents far from mild. I hear of others with the same obsession. Half a dozen well known young damsels went to White Sulphur Springs recently because he was there, recuperating from his strenuous tour before returning to his native land.

One can't make out whether it is his royal status, or his really engaging, open, thoroughly likable face and boyish air which captures them. I hope we've got beyond that stage when royalty and titles make any appeal to us Americans. You know, it's really rather ridiculous nowadays to be either a king, a prince, or a duke. It is as if one of the birds in the Lincoln park bird house could say, "Look at me! I'm a dodo."

An Italian prince or duke of the house of Medici, traveling in this country some months ago, sent word to a friend in Chicago that he would be at the Blackstone hotel on a certain morning. The friend went to look him up and was told that no such name was registered there. As he was turning away he spied the descendedit of Lorenzo the Magnificent sitting in the lobby, and going up to him asked why the hotel clerk knew nothing of his being there.

"Dio mio!" he explained, "because I sign myself in this country as 'Mr. Smith.' How silly it woud be of me to do anything else!"

A British earl was lodging at the same hostelry a few years ago. Having occasion to communicate with him the writer told the hotel telephone operator that she wanted to speak to Lord Exmouth. "Is his first name Lord?" inquired the operator.

Walpole to Tell of Russia.

Hugh Walpole, who, if reports can be believed, is the most attractive and really companionable personality among the modern English writers, arrived in Chicago yesterday. He is the guest of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, who gives a luncheon for him today. This afternoon he is billed to deliver a talk on Russia at the little Court theater in the Fine Arts building.

As he is the only foreigner who has seemed of late years to have any gleam of understanding of the Russian psychology, and as to this insight he unites a delightful, whimsical attitude towards the world at large and a deft use of the English language, the lecture promises to be a rather rare treat.

Confessing to an irresistible disinclination to such intellectual diversions, as a rule, a feeling not lessened by Galsworthy, Dunsany, et al., the writer would overcome many obstacles to be present at Mr. Walpole's discourse in that austere little hall today.

To be at the same time a capable writer and a good talker is an unusual combination. Most of the former are a solemn, silent, sad fraternity, having only one medium of expression—the printed word. On the other hand, the glib, entertaining, brilliant talkers are, as a rule, inadequate, poor writers, the ideas they would express coming at the bidding of the tongue, but getting all tangled up when the pencil or typewriter is their outlet. So, most famous authors are failures on the lecture platform. Hugh Walpole is said to be an exception to the rule, which is probably because he doesn't take himself too seriously.

Notable Visitor from France.

Another notable personality whose approach is announced by local heralds is Mme. Clemenceau-Jacquemaire, the daughter of the famous "Tiger" of France. As her mother was an American, we have a partial claim on her.

Plans for her entertainment include a luncheon given at the University club by the French consul, M. Barthelemy, on Saturday, Dec. 13; a luncheon the following day at Mrs. Arthur Ryerson's; a dinner that evening at the Arts club, with one or two French playlets in the evening.

Mme. Clemenceau-Jacquemaire will talk on Monday evening, Dec. 15, at Orchestra hall on "The Soul of France," under the auspices of the Alliance Française, of which Henry Patten is president. On Tuesday a tea at the Casino will be given in her honor by many organizations, among which are the Alliance Francaise, the American Fund for French Wounded, the Matinées Françaises, the Fortnightly, the Friday club, the Scribblers, the Wednesday club and the Women's City club.

She is said to be "chic, clever, charming." Let us hope she has, in addition to these desirable qualities, a good constitution. American hospitality has been known before to send many a foreign visitor home limp and exhausted.

Historical Society Entertains.

Speaking of hospitality; that sturdy, devoted shrine of patriotism and civic pride, the Chicago Historical society, is giving a "real party" tonight, and another one next Sunday evening, to such of the wounded boys of the Drexel Post hospital as can leave their beds. There are said to be 500 wounded or ill soldiers there, of whom about 400 are bedridden.

During the recent Victory Reunion Circus and Hippodrome given by the American Legion of Illinois at the Dexter pavilion in the stockyards, the historical exhibit there attracted crowds of visitors. It was composed of relics and trophies of all the wars this country has engaged in since 1776, and was guarded by such convalescents from the Drexel Post hospital as were able-bodied enough to take charge of it. A cheery, friendly lot of men they were, keenly interested in the exhibit, and glad to explain it to all comers.

These men will be guests of the society today and a week hence from 3 to 7 o'clock. There will be "movies" to divert them and a supper to round out the visit. Members of the historical society are invited to meet them. Clarence Burley, who is president of the society, will receive them, and many who are anxious to show that "ungrateful as a republic" is not an entirely merited phrase will be there to give these war victims the "glad hand."

The little cripples at the Country Home for Convalescent Children may not be able to walk themselves, but they can make walking dolls, as well as many other things such as toys, dollies, aprons, and bibs. These will be on sale Tuesday in the Elizabethan room at the Congress hotel from 10 to 5 o'clock. Their indefatigable and devoted friend and patron, Mrs. William J. Chalmers, has organized the sale for them.

Entertained While You Buy.

Next Saturday opens the great Board Walk bazaar at the Coliseum, for which the greater part of what is called society—or at least the most vigorous element in it—is working at an increasing speed.

In justice to the designers of this seven day festival, it should be emphasized that it is not only going to be a great fair for buying and selling, but it is to be a place for diversion. Every device to amuse, cheer, and distract the visitor will be found there. "Movies," fortune tellers, side shows, cabarets, wheel chairs, merry-go-rounds and their ilk will clamor for patronage. Just to wander up and down and see the town's notabilities in fancy dress of various devices will be worth the price of admission. Some of the costumes proposed—well, they're just unbelievable, while others it would certainly be worth while to walk miles to see.

The air will be resonant with bands of music, and the whole place promises to be an orgy of clamoring and victorious colors, surpassing anything yet accomplished in Chicago in this line. Considering that Mrs. "Joe" Coleman, Mrs. John Carpenter, and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank are running it, it is safe to predict for it entire success.

Opera's Greatest Support.

How much this city owes to the Chicago grand opera's greatest patron and main support, Harold McCormick! In the present period when the serious illness of Maestro Campanini deprives the enterprise of its director and guiding spirit, Mr. McCormick devotes hours every day to working in Mr. Campanini's stead at the opera headquarters. He is as conversant with the ins and outs of this complicated organization as the "maestro" himself, and is determined, as far as possible, to fill the gap created by the latter's unfortunate and regrettable absence.

Every one interested in the opera—and the number runs up into the thousands—hopes that Cleofonte Campanini will be able soon to resume his post as managing director and impresario. He has for many years been a striking and attractive figure in our civic life. An evening of grand opera at the Auditorium without the presence of himself and Mme. Campanini in that well known, lower box nearest the stage, seems a curiously incomplete affair to the opera habitué, while there is no orchestra leader so graceful, so sure, so entirely master of his whole equipment as the "maestro"—as all who know him, call him. So his swift recovery is the sincere wish of the community.

AFTER 1870-'71.

While anxiety and gloom seem to be the unescapable concomitants of post-war periods, they improperly are so because tabulated and card indexed experience tells us that each period of gloom has been brushed aside by surprising and sound prosperity.

It was so after the Napoleonic campaigns and it came again after the Franco-Prussian war. In 1870, France was reckoned the first power on the continent. Napoleon III. was a war lord of the first dimensions and many nations shrank before his glance. Germany was a strange jumble of small kingdoms and principalities without unity either politically or commercially.

On the heels of a crushing defeat at the hands of the Germans, the French capital was turned topsy turvy by the commune. The red peril of today in the United States is a faint cry compared with the stentorian bellow of 1871. In the war and the commune uprising 140,000 were killed, 340,000 were removed to hospitals, and France was compelled to suffer the loss of Alsace-Lorraine with a population of 1,600,000.

In addition to these blows, France was obligated to pay Germany 5,000,000,000 francs and to support the German army of occupation until the indemnity was paid. France was given until 1875 to pay the staggering indemnity; yet, in 1873 the last franc was paid, the German troops were removed, and France was on its feet again. A great patriotic loan had been announced. The government asked for three and one-half milliards of francs. The response was the astounding sum of forty-three milliards. Within three years France was a going concern.

At the same time, while a victorious nation, Germany had passed through three wars—those of 1864, 1866, and 1870. These were years of anxiety. Yet, out of a group of unorganized states Germany rose to unity. In 1875, some 2,000,000 tons were exported in 18,233 ships. In ten years the export trade grew to nearly 4,000,000 tons in 34,211 ships.

We see that the period of reorganization in both France and Germany was about four years. In 1874, Herr Camphausen, the Prussian minister of finance, said: "The year 1872 has been unprecedented for the largest surplus revenue ever known in this country. The accounts of 1873 would present an almost equally brilliant result."

And yet there are many among us who feel discouragement only a year after peace, and with industry returning to normal with exceptional facility. We are observing symptoms which have appeared time and again and have as often dissolved. The ghosts of famine and disruption have stalked in each post-war period. But they have been only ghosts. Depression has been mental and easily dissipated by the facts of production and commerce. Red perils are not new. Extreme radicalism has trod in the wake of every great conflict. Radicals have made the greatest advances where gloom was densest and public morale lowest.

There seems something hopeless in the prospect of constantly advancing prices. The common citizen is appalled and likely to fall into dejection. The fortification against this dejection is a community mood of determination to save, to buy wisely and carefully as against buying the first thing that presents itself, at whatever price, and a resolution to dispense with everything unessential.

The average citizen must feel himself a part of a great movement to retrench. When retrenchment becomes general there will be a tumble in prices. This period of readjustment is not new. It is absurd to fall into dispirited acceptance of what seems an unusual and unprecedented situation. The situation neither is unusual nor unprecedented. The thing has been done over and over. We should know the processes of recovery by this time and put up a good front against them.

BENEFITS OF UNIVERSAL SERVICE PROVED.

Nearly every city which has or is threatened with revolutionists and the disorders they attempt, finds active support of order in the American Legion. The A. E. F. men back up the police. They support law and order. Their organization, their training, and their principles make them the most effective part of the citizenship.

These men are the product of universal military service. They defended their country. They now are ready to protect its processes and its laws.

The argument for universal service is based upon the conviction that it makes a country safe and that it produces intelligent, courageous, loyal citizens. It strengthens the social discipline needed in a republic. It supports the instinct for order which must prevail in self-governing people.

The character and the acts of the men who have had the training support the arguments made for universal service. Instead of being afraid of universal service, the nation ought to be afraid not to have it. It is a national defense and a school of citizenship.

MILLENARIANISM.

The perversion of national instinct which is exhibited in some of the vehement espousal of the covenant of the league of nations in this country is, we believe, merely episodic, but it is indicative of the pace a fervor can strike.

There are Englishmen, not all tories and reactionaries, who are saying that they wish they had a few American senators to keep the British hat on straight, but there are Americans who damn Lodge and his followers as enemies of their country.

We probably are in an interesting stage of millenarianism which destroys rationality in perception and reflection. Groups of people thus affected sometimes do as the Dukhobors, give away their clothes and start on a pilgrimage.

Our Dukhobortsy would send Uncle Sam out into the brambles without his heel strapped trousers and the enemies of the nation are merely the Americans who are trying to keep the old gentleman's clothes on him.

THE NEW CONSTITUTION.

We hope there is one rock bottom principle upon which all the delegates to the constitutional convention agree—a principle that nothing can divide them upon, that nothing can defeat.

That is the principle that the new constitution be a constitution in form and substance and not a bundle of statutes.

We refer to our constitution as the fundamental law of the state. That is what it should be. A statute is not fundamental. It belongs among the laws we are willing to change with changing times and experience.

A constitution should deal only with fundamentals; things we believe in year in and year out; institutions we wish to be solid; the framework upon which we know we can depend; the things we approve in long experience and do not want to make subject to the moods that come and go; the things which do not have to be tinkered with year by year.

Any nation or state which appreciates that real progress and social welfare require a groundwork of solidity must insist upon a fundamental law as distinguished from the body of laws which deal with constantly changeable conditions. This fundamental law or constitution represents our profound convictions and durable institutions which, while they evolve and therefore change, do not do so overnight, but in a gradual response to the deeper laws of human progress. A people that places all its laws and institutions at the mercy of its own passing impulses, passions, prejudices, and hasty judgments will never enjoy the solid prosperity which can be founded only on an intelligent footing of security and permanence.

There are many ardent men and women who do not understand this and who would have our constitutions and our laws in a constant state of flux. They call this democratic freedom. Yet it is democracy defeating itself. It is democracy putting itself at the mercy of its own least wise moments.

Wise democracy knows itself, its weaknesses, which are a part of our common humanity, as well as its strength. It therefore considers deeply how it would be guided in the long run. It foresees how, at moments, it may be blinded by impulse or confused by ephemeral events, and it says: "Certain principles we, the people, know in quiet moments of sane thought, principles approved by long experience of storm and calm, of struggle and peace, are sound principles which will guide us wisely and control us when we need control. Therefore we in our full power and sovereignty now ordain that these principles shall be our defense and our enduring guide. These are fundamental, a part of our lasting self, and they shall be the constitution of our state."

It is hard for men and women who are ardent in the pursuit of some particular good or in attack upon some particular evil to believe their chosen reform is not necessarily of this fundamental nature: It may be a man who wants to prevent innkeepers from cutting their bedding too short. Short bedding on a cold night is unpleasant and may be dangerous. The reformer may have a passionate sense of its injustice. He wishes to make it forever impossible and he therefore demands that a regulation of the length of sheets be imbedded forever in the fundamental law.

Of course we all see it does not belong there; but there are many desirable provisions which are not so obviously out of place in a constitution and yet are out of place there.

We hope our convention will draw a strict line; keeping out of the fundamental law things that are not fundamental; giving us a constitution that is short, simple, basic, and general in principle.

Then we shall not be forever tempted to be whittling, tinkering, and tampering with what should stand solid for many years, a shelter in all weathers, a steady guide amidst confusion.

Democracy, if it is to succeed as a beneficent form of human organization, must be efficient, and it never can be efficient unless we guide ourselves by sound and consistent principles and find for ourselves a footing which is not in the shifting sands of our moods and impulses. This is wise in the life of the individual and equally wise in the life of the community.

OUR EXPORT TRADE.

[From the San Francisco Chronicle.]

The whole world desires to buy of us, and we have abundance to sell. The neutral nations and all which did not actively participate in the war are entirely solvent, free from high taxation, and prosperous to an extent never dreamed of before. What they wish to buy they are able to pay for.

Before the war the preponderance of the trade of most of these countries was with Europe. The European connections were suspended by the war, but not broken, and the European belligerents are naturally exerting the most strenuous efforts to win back the trade, especially with South America, transferred to us during war time.

We have no cause of complaint that such efforts are made, but neither do we wish to surrender trade gained in countries with which before the war we did not have our just share. We desire to compete vigorously but fairly and honorably with all the world for our share of the world's trade.

Whether we shall do so or not will depend on the workers of the country, who are far more interested in the outcome than any other class of our people. With our abundant raw materials and our tremendous installation of machinery we are able to produce far more than can be consumed at home. The managers of our industries are alert and can sell goods if we can deliver them.

Unhappily they cannot assure delivery. Strikes for still higher wages are continuous and widespread. It is not true that cost of living has increased faster and more than wages have increased in our basic industries. Employers are willing to shoulder the new wage costs if sure of the cooperation otherwise of the workers.

That which is at stake is not merely the employment of today. It is the steady employment for years to come for the workers and their children and grandchildren, and at wages which will enable the workers to own their own homes.

It is up to the workers to make sure of steady work. If they seize the opportunity while it is open they will get it. If they insist on stirring up strife and going on strikes the workmen of other countries will get the jobs which they might have.

THE PROMOTER.

How wonderful, this man who knows
That men astute and wise,
Purblind to moonshine such as glows
Before us poet guys,
That even most sagacious men,
For hard-boiled judgments noted,
Will chase a star beyond their ken
(If properly promoted).

Who calls this man a grafter
Or jeers the stocks he bears?
He lifts the smoky rafters
And shows you golden stairs.
He points to mother lodes of tin,
Or rocks with silver coated,
And proves that fairy ships come in
(If stocks can once be floated).

He talks the Timbuc-Tulsa line
To where the gusher roars,
Or to the Onbeyonda mine—
(This poet never bores);
To apple groves beyond compare,
Plantations dwarfing speech;
His mileage takes you anywhere
(That magic carpets reach).

God bless this benefactor,
Whose poems never stale,
Who sells a birthright of romance
For wads of common kale.
From sordid bonds relieved, you learn
To tread the rainbow track.
He guarantees a safe return.
(That is, he sets you back.)

It seems to me that poet norm,
From Greece to Hindustan,
In time dopes out a native form
To touch the simple man.
Our Vergils sing of golden gleams
In ads that ever please;
Each Yankee Milton ever dreams
Prospectuses like these.

Joe went to Mt. Carroll to a physician, who removed seventy shots out of his body. While there is no thought of any serious consequences Joe does not feel any too kindly toward the Chicago men.

GERMS AS WORLD MENACE.

As congress wrestles with proposals for a league of nations it is interesting to knew that the International Red Cross offers a plan for another league of nations—a proposed league against a foe far more destructive to the human race than war—viz.: preventable disease.

Communicable diseases cannot be restrained by custom houses or be stopped by international boundaries. Within five years Mexican typhus has reached across the border and laid low many people 500 to 1,000 miles or even more north of the Rio Grande.

Influenza is commonly believed to have its home in western Asia and periodically to flow out to circle the world. One reason we went to war with Spain in 1898 was because it permitted a hotbed of yellow fever in Cuba to periodically infect our country. Plague, now present at New Orleans and Oakland, was brought to us, directly or indirectly, from the orient. But why multiply illustrations? Contagious diseases are international.

The Red Cross organizations of various warring countries, having been working side by side for several years, decided to hold a conference to devise a league of nations against disease. The conference met at Cannes April 1 to 12, 1919. It was proposed that there be established a central bureau.

One of the functions of this central bureau will be to assemble and digest the public health laws and sanitary codes of the important countries and cities of Europe and North America, to digest theso laws, and to distribute the digests widely among public health authorities. If it is decided that the health laws of a given country are below the prevailing standards, the central bureau will stimulate the national Red Cross of the country to agitate for better laws, and, if desirable, assist in the drawing of standard laws.

The conference stressed certain features of health work as of great importance. One of these is vital statistics. Until a country gets births and deaths recorded and contagion notified it is not in a position to pass health laws intelligently or to appropriate money wisely for health work. A merchant might just as well try to conduct his business without keeping books.

The central bureau will try to get the different countries to adopt standard methods of registering births and deaths and tabulating them according to a standard plan. Since one-half the states, including Illinois, do not have standard birth registration, the league might well come right over here and get to work, without waiting for the nations to sign or fighting in Russia to stop.

The conference recommends that public health laboratories be established in every country. The laboratories should examine water, milk, and other foods; diagnose tuberculosis, diphtheria, and other forms of contagious diseases, and manufacture vaccines and curative sera. The report of the conference, speaking of laboratories, says:

"This is the most important and perhaps the governmental health function from which the physician receives from the authorities a really valuable service. When this service is properly rendered it is highly appreciated by the medical profession, and it serves to foster cooperation and good feeling between the health authorities and the profession.

"We believe there is no other agency more potent in improving the standards of medical practice in a country than the service of a public health laboratory which has been administered so as to bring about the wide use by the medical profession of the facilities which it offers."

The conference advocates strongly the employment of a full corps of public health nurses, and emphasizes especially the need of education in public health. At the head of the list of educational agencies newspapers are placed.

The people of certain countries in Europe have no conception of the health education done by newspapers in this country. With them newspapers never touch upon health subjects except in the advertising columns. In one country of which I know the newspapers bar references to health subjects from their editorial and news pages as being indecent, but in their advertising pages they carry medical copy that would not be allowed in this country.

The report says disseminating among the people a knowledge of the simple laws of healthful living is the most valuable means whereby we can promote their physical well-being. Hygienic precepts and practices at school and the training of the older girls in the essentials of infant care and homemaking are of fundamental importance as a means of contributing to the health and happiness of a community.

A special section of the report is given to town planning. Many cities in America are now deeply interesting in zoning and town planning generally. New York, St. Louis, Milwaukee, and Chicago are exceptionally interested. They are limiting the height of buildings, fixing the width of streets, and preventing congestion of population. In the main the advocates of these measures are trying to prevent the blighting of properties. The health authorities attending the International Red Cross conference regarded town planning and zoning as health matters of first magnitude.

Whatever makes for sunlight and air in living rooms and lessened crowding and increase of playgrounds is a health measure. Housing was emphasized by the conference for the same reason. The report mentions the use of architects and engineers along with nurses and laboratory men as health agents. If the problems of school ventilation and heating were better solved, health officers would have less to do.

The report emphasizes the urgency of two health situations. The first is the decrease in birth rate. Figures published in the public press within a month indicate a great reduction in the British birth rate. One health officer reported a birth rate of 12.5. This is less than the average death rate. The British birth rate kept up very well during the earlier years of the war. The French birth rate was about as low as the death rate at the beginning of the war. It was much lower than the death rate in the latter years of the war.

The birth rate of Germany was high twenty-five years ago. Beginning several years before the war, the birth rate of Berlin was not much higher than the death rate, and the remainder of Germany was not much better off in this respect. The United States census now at hand will reveal conditions in this country. It is the general belief that, except among the foreign-born, our birth rate is at the danger point.

The second urgent condition is the high death rate among children, especially among babies. It is true that much is being done to make babies safer, but the need is urgent in view of the declining birth rate. There are groups of people in this country where 970 out of each 1,000 babies live to be 1 year old, and in comparison other groups where only 700 babies out of each 1,000 reach 1 year of age. It is not fair that conditions so good and so bad should continue to exist side by side.

The only disease which has seriously hampered any army during the late war was typhus. The Serbians and Roumanians paid and now the Russians pay a terrible toll to this disease. Had there been no Red Cross, the Serbian people would be no more than a memory now. The Roumanians are its debtors to almost as great a degree. The reports are that typhus and famine menace the bolshevik government of Russia more than do the White armies just now.

The Red Cross was active in helping Russia as long as that help was allowed. Naturally a Red Cross conference meeting in Europe in April, 1919, selected typhus as an object for special effort. The plan recommended to the central bureau to combat typhus comprised the following:

1. Make digest of literature on the epidemiology of typhus.
2. Survey typhus infected areas to determine the prevalence of typhus and its significance as a cause of sickness and economic loss.
3. Work with the local government and local philanthropic agencies in controlling the disease.
4. Select a local area and eradicate the disease there, keeping careful records of methods employed, results accomplished, and money spent.
5. Prepare full reports on these local demonstrations and use them to stimulate other localities to get rid of their typhus.
6. Determine the methods of control which best suit the climate, habits, food, and economic conditions among the people to be interested.

In a more general way the activities of the central bureau to be established by the national Red Cross societies in the alliance are:

1. To stimulate the development of Red Cross societies in countries where such societies do not now exist.
2. To cooperate with governments and with other philanthropic organizations.
3. To submit programs for national movements to control tuberculosis and malaria and other great waste producing diseases.
4. To work for prevention rather than cure. To stimulate health programs that will keep the people well rather than to spend money to cure people sick as the result of their own bad habits or as the result of faulty customs.
5. To aid in the control of great paralyzing epidemics, such as those of cholera, yellow fever, and typhus.

FIGHTING RINGWORMS.

A. C. C. writes: "Would you mind giving the best treatment for an old case of ringworm?"

REPLY.

Get an ointment consisting of sulphur and ammoniated mercury, each thirty grains; salicylic acid, twenty grains, and lanolin and vaseline, each half an ounce. Apply twice a day. Spend ten minutes rubbing the salve in well. Unless you irritate and inflame the area you will not accomplish much. So much for ordinary ringworm. Ringworm in the hair is not so easily cured, and you will save time by going to a skin specialist.

REPLY.

AMERICAN LEGION.

Headquarters, 29 South La Salle street, Chicago.—Applications for membership in the American Legion are still pouring in and the organization will soon be boasting of 400 posts in Illinois. It will be of benefit to every man who served Uncle Sam honorably during the late war to join the American Legion. The standard of the Legion is 100 per cent Americanism, ignoring political status and possible rank or rating of a man while in the service. The blank printed above may be filled out by any eligible member and mailed to the Illinois headquarters of the American Legion in Chicago, and the applicant's name will be placed on the roll.

The new booklets about the American Legion will soon be in circulation and may be had upon request and a stamped, addressed envelope to the Friend of the Soldier, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

BOND NOT DELIVERED.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I am an ex-soldier and am writing to you to see if you know when the government is going to pay the soldiers the bonds they paid for in the army. There are a lot of soldiers who paid for bonds in six months' time and a year and are now out of work and could use the bonds very nicely. I can get no satisfaction by writing to Washington. E. S.

The bonds are supposed to be delivered as soon as payments are completed. As you live in Chicago, we advise that you have your bond traced by the bond section, 120 West Adams street, Chicago.

MORGAN BILL NOT PASSED.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Some time ago I read in your paper that the government will loan to ex-service men a sum of money to build a home. Can you please give full particulars about it? I was in the navy and now wish to have a home if I can raise a little more money. What is the rate of interest and how long a time is given to pay back the principal? B. A.

This was a bill introduced in congress by Representative Dick T. Morgan of Oklahoma, proposing that loans be made to ex-service men to the amount of $4,000. Repayment was to be made in sixty years, with interest of 3½ per cent per year. Loans may run for the entire period of sixty years or be taken up in whatever payments the holder finds convenient. The bill has not been passed.

SWEET BILL PENDING.

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 25.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—You have mentioned several times in your paper about a bill in congress which will allow the insurance to be paid in a lump sum to the beneficiary in case of death of the insured. As it now stands, the insurance payments will be stretched out over twenty years, won't they? Please tell me if this bill was passed. R. F. A.

The bill referred to in your letter was introduced by Senator Sweet. It passed the house of representatives, but has not passed the senate yet. According to the present provisions of the war risk insurance act the benefits will be paid to the beneficiary in 240 monthly installments.

SERVICE IN CANADIAN ARMY.

Peru, Ind., Nov. 24.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I enlisted in 1915 in the Canadian army, with which I served for two years overseas. Have I forfeited my citizenship in the United States? I am an American by birth. Thanks for the information. W. K.

On the conditions stated you have not necessarily forfeited your citizenship to the United States. The proper course for you to follow now is to write to the chief naturalization examiner, 776 Federal building, Chicago, stating your case. He will advise you when a naturalization examiner will be in Peru, at which time you may arrange to appear in court and take your oath of allegiance to the United States. It will be necessary for you to produce your honorable discharge from the Canadian army.

MERCHANT MARINE AND SHIPPING BOARD.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—In what way are the merchant marine and the United States shipping board connected or are these synonymous terms? Where can one enroll in the merchant marine? I have been in the army, served with the 20th division. Please let me know if the merchant marine schools are still in operation. C. E. C.

The merchant marine includes all vessels shipping under the United States flag, whether by private concerns or not.

The United States shipping board controls only ships owned by the government.

The merchant marine is accepting enlistments. Men who have not had sea service and are wishing to enroll should appear at the recruiting office, 116 North Dearborn street, Chicago. Men who have had sea service should apply for training to the office located at 1 South Dearborn street. The service requires training, hence the schools are still in operation.

TRAVEL ALLOWANCE.

Chetek, Wis., Nov. 24.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Is there a difference in the rate of mileage for final travel pay between an officer and an enlisted man?

Yes. An officer is allowed 4 cents per mile and an enlisted man 5 cents per mile.

WOLF! WOLF!

Chicago, Nov. 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The burglar alarm of the Meteor Tire company, Forty-seventh street and Michigan avenue, gets out of order on the average of once or twice a week. The policeman on this corner never seems to even notice it. Each time I have reported it to the local authorities, Forty-eighth and Wabash.

Last night I called this police department, Forty-eighth and Wabash, three separate times to see if we couldn't get a little relief from this noise. They informed me this bell got out of order from the jarring of the street cars and promised each time to see that it was shut off, but nothing was done.

If an alarm gets out of order just from the jarring of the street cars and is allowed to ring the rest of the night, I fail to see what protection it is to the owner and it is only a nuisance to the neighborhood.

Can't something be done about this, as it is annoying, to say the least, to have one or two sleepless nights each week. M. R. E.

Wish to advise that this alarm has been turned off and will be kept turned off until the same has been put in perfect condition. JNO. J. GARRITY,
Chief of Police.

REALLY! A TACK EVERY TIME!

Chicago, Nov. 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I am writing you in regard to a furniture factory next door. We have a garage, the only entrance of which is facing the alley, and what we are running in and out get a tack in the tire nearly every time. These tacks are thrown from the windows and from the sweepings. If anything can be done I would greatly appreciate your efforts. W. H.

Investigation shows that the tacks come from a furniture factory. Boys going through the alley reached in the open window, taking the tacks off the window sill and scattering them about the alleyway. Steps have been taken to prevent this being done in the future.

THOS. H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Schools.

CAN DO.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you inform me whether it is true that it is not legal for an American to marry a Japanese and why it is not? It will be conferring a great favor, as the question has come up among a number of people among whom I work. A. R.

There is no such limitation in this state. There might be in some states.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LOOK IN DICT. FOR "TORT."

Chicago, Nov. 27.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—If party while inmate of asylum attacks and seriously injures a visitor, can party, can damages be recovered from first party's estate? First party has never been adjudged insane up to time of attack.

In general, the estate of an insane person is liable for his torts.

MY, WHAT A DISPOSITION.

New York, Nov. 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As a warm advocate of the great League of Nations, a mild American and a rabid Britisher, I want to take off my bonnet to you and say with the most profound emotion, "Hail, Chief," after reading your stunning and clarion noted editorial entitled "Peace First" in your issue of Nov. 22. It is so comforting and soothing after the rough defeat that the glorious league received at the hands of those insect senators to know that the illustrious Chi. Trib. has settled the whole affair and accomplished that which even our own beloved and distinguished president could not compass—precipitate us head foremost into the league. It is so magnanimous of you to put this little job through, and I am sure that congress will now be glad to not assemble next month, as soon as they find out that such a strong power is fully prepared to solve all our domestic problems. After you have arranged the coal strike, the railroad situation and the question of 2.75 you might take a day off and straighten out Europe. But the only fly in the ointment is that a prophet is not worth much in his home town. How about Mayor Thompson and the Hearst I. and R. proposition? H. G. PERKINS.

MUST BE MISTAKEN.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Will you believe me?

It happened only this morning, to be exact, at 7:40 a. m., at Kedzie and Twenty-sixth street. It was standing in an alley just north of Twenty-sixth street. Wait a minute, brother. This was not an ordinary wagon. It was an ash wagon, and the driver was actually gathering ashes.

I rather hesitated to write, fearing you would refer me to the item a year or two ago of some one seeing a robin at Christmas time. A READER.

VIEWS of a TRADE-UNIONIST (V)
by George J. Knott

[Mr. Knott is an ex-president of the Chicago Typographical Union.]

RESPONSIBILITIES OF TRADE UNIONISM

TRADE unionism is accumulating a load of responsibility, the character and extent of which it is doubtful if the membership fully comprehends. Like a democracy, it faces many perils menacing permanent stability, three of which are the antipathy for analysis, the conceit of success, and the demagogue.

Analysis is not an asset of trade unionism. It knows what it wants, formulates its demands, and presents them in terse form for compliance. The employer does the analyzing when he faces the ultimatum. His analysis may be short, inviting hostilities, or it may be diplomatic, partially disarming a militant spirit. A union on strike begins the analysis when the small change runs low and the meager strike benefits fail to provide.

Conservative unionism is continually struggling to logically analyze a threatening situation and provide a policy securing a maximum of benefit at a minimum of expense and industrial turmoil. Sometimes in the desire to accomplish that object a difference in opinion results in internal dissension—not in a change of policy, as so many critics charge, but a change of program in carrying out the policy. There is too much moral cowardice in trade unionism. It follows the leader—sometimes believing the leader is wrong—but it lacks the moral courage to face ridicule or derision. One will often hear in confidential confessions between friends, "I voted for the proposition, but was not in favor of it," or, "I did not vote at all." The secret ballot comes nearer to getting the true expression of one's convictions. One may talk one way and vote another, and judging from results it is frequently the case, particularly in voting on strike propositions. Enthusiastic harangues might be counterbalanced with effect, by logical argument, but the conservative man hesitates and finally stifles his convictions.

THIS may appear paradoxical, but it is not without a pardonable feature. In discussing politics, religion, or any of the day's questions one can be reasonably sure he is not alone in his contentions, and assurance of support encourages him.

But in a union meeting the conditions are different. He joined the organization that he might better his condition and that of his fellow workmen, and, conscientiously, he is in accord with the spirit of the proposition under debate, but on the question of expediency he differs. If he supports the apparent prevailing sentiment he violates his judgment, and if he protests any point bearing on the question he assumes a degree of responsibility as an obstructionist and having his motive questioned.

There may be some responsive minds waiting for him to set the pace for moderation, but as he glances over the crowd of tensely drawn faces he mentally calculates the number of supporters he can gather. The radical appears in complete control; he has the noise, the enthusiasm of hysteria, and the atmosphere of a majority combined into one overwhelming force. It is more than many men have the courage to oppose and the conservative quiets his conscience with the reflection that if the membership can stand a possible disaster, he can. He might face death without a shiver, but the displeasure of his fellow members makes him a moral coward.

Like other institutions, trade unions have progressive periods, succeeded by nonprogressive; periods of constructive policies and periods destructive; they have capable, businesslike administrations, sometimes succeeded by periods of grafting, incapable, demoralizing administrations—just like politics, just like business. Unions are composed of all creeds, nationalities, and politics. Neither fads nor fancies constitute a bar to admission; if one declares himself to be a sympathizer with the intention to abide by the constitution and by-laws, he is eligible. They are just such men as one meets in everyday life—neighbors, friend, or casual acquaintance.

TRADE unions have made greatest progress under conservative administrations with a liberal policy and the ability to put it in force; the careful consideration of questions with a view to gaining advancement through logical courses; or, if that fails, a wisely constructed plan of action that will compel recognition through force of circumstances to which the employer must agree. Mankind generally, and employers particularly, make war on dictatorial policies, but a well grounded case in a spirit of conciliation, with the strike held in reserve as a last resort, has resulted in a high percentage of settlements in labor disputes. Unions make steady and lasting advancement under this policy; the force is moral, it is normal, it is irresistible.

When the radical element gains control of the organization much of the constructive work of the conservative element is nullified. It is pointed out that the union is dead—is ineffective. If a scale is under consideration, it is easy to charge the terms are not satisfactory—that this point is a loss to the union or that point sold out or neglected; a feeling of unrest is aroused through such arguments, members become suspicious, and declare a show of belligerency to regain lost ground. Officials are not always leaders in radicalism; one or two smooth talkers may sway a meeting to extremes against the judgment of the officers, who must obey the mandate.

A large percentage of the membership constitute the self-satisfied element who believe in the articles of faith, but are content to leave the conduct of the business to the active members, officers, and committees. When long time contracts and scales are closed they settle down to a humdrum existence, feeling secure in their situations, taking little interest in the detail work. They are the dues paying membership, swimming along on the sea of contentment, somewhat analogous to the average citizen of our boasted republic plodding along between elections, accepting the lobby influenced legislation of the political boss with resignation. When situations are imperiled through a strike or lockout they wake up to the exigencies of the hour and begin the quest for knowledge of the circumstances.

IT is at this juncture the influence of the active man is most potent—the conservative for good, the demagogue for calamity. The conservative finds himself in a swirling rapids of conflicting opinions, often with the tide against him, while the rabid extremist finds productive soil in which to sow the seeds of discontent, posing as the specially appointed guardian of labor, playing on the credulous by assuming that without his penetration and watchfulness the labor movement is doomed. Conceited wisdom and the applause of his following make him an arrogant player to the galleries, and his influence on emotional natures encourages him in originating and advocating ridiculous or outrageous measures. A most effective argument is the insinuation of espionage on behalf of the employer and an attempt by a conservative to steer a rational course is seized as proof that the conservative is more interested in the welfare of the employer than his fellow members. Strange as it seems, the conservative, viewing questions from all angles, is at a disadvantage and he realizes it. The accusation makes him timid, and he hesitates to advance an argument that insures clamorous unpopularity because of the contemptible insinuation.

One should be permitted to express his views without being charged as a traitor, a hired agent, or a spineless quitter. Hired agents do not create suspicion by opposing radical measures. They are more successful when coinciding with the radical or outdoing his radicalism. Opposition bars him from confidence; therefore sympathetic participation rather than suspicious opposition is necessary.

A radical never considers the possibility of disaster. A conservative does not favor a peace-at-any-price program, but he is unwilling to kill a promising prospect by overloading with riders that are whimsical, nonessential, or clearly unreasonable.

When trade unions encourage accuracy and keenness in mental vision, the power of delving into remote angles, the capacity for tracing minute distinctions, while on the other hand employers favor and encourage coalition in industry with the same enthusiasm they display in other directions, then radicalism, having nothing on which to exist, will die a natural death.

OUR CONSTITUTION
by Urban A. Lavery

Explain this to your children. Then you'll learn about it yourself.

THE probability that Illinois will have a new constitution next year makes the historical background of the state a matter of especial interest for all citizens. The various steps by which Illinois emerged from the wilderness and came to be a sovereign state—quite as important in the affairs of the world as many of the nations of Europe—have a new meaning and a new application at this time.

Down to 1763 all the great territory which included Illinois had been loosely occupied by the French, but the treaty of Paris at the close of the French and Indian war transferred it to Great Britain. The first governmental act of Great Britain was exercised by virtue of a proclamation of Gen. Gage, then stationed in New York, as the commander in chief of the British army, in the year 1764. This proclamation did little more than assert English rights to the territory under the treaty of Paris. In 1771 the people of the territory of Illinois, in a "general assembly" held at Kaskaskia, formulated a demand for a civil government based on the liberal charter of Connecticut. Here was the first step toward popular government taken in Illinois. This demand was rejected by Gen. Gage and by his successor, Lord Dartmouth, as being too popular; but the latter gentleman prepared a scheme of government of his own, which he called "A Sketch of Government for Illinois." The plan fixed all powers in royal appointees, and it is interesting to note that it was indignantly rejected by another "assembly" at Kaskaskia in the following year. Here was the first instance of the people of the state rejecting a proposed constitution.

In 1774 parliament passed the Quebec act, which provided a form of government for the Illinois territory, but became of the approaching revolution it never was put in force. The principal event of the revolution affecting Illinois was the capture of Kaskaskia by Gen. George Rogers Clark in 1778, acting under a commission from the governor of Virginia. In the same year the legislature of Virginia established the "county of Illinois" and provided a form of government for the entire Northwest territory, and a governor was appointed over all three "districts" of the "county." An election for judges and sheriffs was held the same year—the first popular election in the state. The government continued as a "Virginia county" until the close of the revolution, when the federal government assumed control.

IT is worth noting that several other colonies in addition to Virginia claimed rights in the Northwest territory. All these claims were ceded to the United States by quitclaim deeds from New York, Virginia, Massachusetts, Connecticut, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, given during the years from 1781 to 1802. A quitclaim deed from Georgia in the latter year finally perfected title in the United States.

There was some delay on the part of congress in assuming jurisdiction over the new territory, but finally the "ordinance of 1787" was passed, providing an outline form of government for the entire territory. This "ordinance" later largely influenced the fundamental law of all of the states of the northwest.

In 1800 congress created the "territory of Indiana," which was made to include what is now Illinois, and for a time the name "Illinois" ceased to exist. However, it was not for long, and by an act of Feb. 3, 1809, congress created the "territory of Illinois," and the name of the state was revived. In 1812 the voters at an election approved the proposal of the governor to establish a legislative branch of the government. It is interesting to note that there were only 300 qualified voters in the territory. The legislature was elected in the same year from the five counties of the territory—St. Clair, Randolph, Madison, Gallatin, and Johnson.

SIX years later the legislature directed its delegate in congress to petition for admission as a state, and as a result an enabling act was passed by congress in April, 1818. This act is of especial interest to people of Chicago and Cook county, because previous to that time the northern boundary of Illinois had been fixed at 41 degrees 31 minutes, which ran some place near the city of Joliet and did not give Illinois access to Lake Michigan. It was urged in congress that such a boundary line would turn the commerce of the state away from the lake and toward the Mississippi and the south, and thus make a southern state of Illinois. This argument prevailed, so that it is primarily due to a question of "slavery" that the territory including Cook county and the city of Chicago became a port of the state of Illinois instead of the state of Wisconsin.

As is generally known, a constitutional convention met at Kaskaskia Aug. 3, 1818, and finished its work in twenty-three days. The constitution was largely copied from the neighboring states of Kentucky and Ohio. This constitution continued until it was replaced by the constitution of 1848. In 1862 a new constitution was submitted to the people, but rejected by popular vote. The constitution of 1848 remained in force until replaced by the present constitution of 1870.

It will thus be seen that the following are nine links in the chain of the constitutional history of the state: [1] The French military government; [2] the military government of Great Britain; [3] the "Virginia county"; [4] the Northwest territory; [5] the Indiana territory; [6] the Illinois territory; [7] the constitution of 1818; [8] the constitution of 1848; [9] the constitution of 1870.

Each link has left its imprint on our law of today—the French occupation gave us the names of many of our counties and cities; our county organization is largely based on the Virginia plan; the "ordinance of 1787" has given us our laws of inheritance, etc. Thus the new constitution, however modern, will have its roots deep in the past.

THE AMERICAN LEGION
An interview with Franklin d'Olier.

FOUR men sat in the smoking compartment of a Pullman car on a train bound from Minneapolis to Chicago several weeks ago. One was a clergyman. Conversation turned on the convention of the American Legion.

"Who is this fellow D'Olier they elected their national commander?" asked the clergyman. He addressed the chap next to him, who, as it afterward developed, had been a member of another of the war veteran organizations that blossomed for a time after the armistice but eventually submerged its identity in the American Legion gracefully and with all hearty support.

"Why, he's just a plain, substantial American business man, with no strings tied to him, no political ambitions, no axes to grind, no powerful corporations back of him, a man with a superior gift for organization, a fellow who made good over in France in the quartermaster's department of the service of supply after giving up his own private business in Philadelphia," replied the veteran enthusiastically.

After a bit of a pause the clergyman turned to another of the quartet and asked him about D'Olier.

"O I reckon he's one of the Wall street gang out to clean up something for himself and his crowd," was the answer.

The clergyman was at sea. Two widely divergent opinions. He turned to the fourth man of the group and asked him his opinion of the new legion commander. The man smiled a bit and replied rather whimsically:

"Yes, I know him pretty well. I guess he's the new type of fellow the first speaker described."

To this day the men are ignorant of the fact that the fourth member of the "touring talk-fest" was Col. Franklin D'Olier himself, the first commander of the American Legion.

COL. D'Olier was asked the other day to sum up the aims of the legion and to give something of his own vision of the purposes of his new "100 per cent Americanism" organization. The interview was given in the national headquarters of the American Legion at 19 West Forty-fourth street, New York.

He put his finger down upon the preamble to the constitution of the legion and quoted:

"For God and country we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the constitution of the U. S. A.; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a 100 per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the great war; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state, and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom, and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual happiness."

"There you have the whole program in a nutshell," added Col. D'Olier. "The American Legion is centralizing its efforts along definite lines. First, we are interested in getting jobs for returned veterans, putting them back into civilian life as quickly as possible where they may be useful to society and to themselves again, and taking care of all disabled men through occupational direction. Second, the legion is vitally interested in the creation and firm establishment of a military policy for the United States. There is no thought of bringing about a military autocracy. The world has had enough of Prussianism. But these men who went over there and fought for a principle are determined to make America 100 per cent American and to make America safe for herself through the years to come.

"LAW and order are to be maintained. In every community in this country legionaires stand ready, by reason of their consent as manifested at the Minneapolis convention, to back the recognized minions of the law in every measure necessary to the maintenance of law and order and the sovereignty of our government. They are ready for action at any time and will close ranks to keep America supreme and above and against these extremists who are seeking to overturn a government and a democracy for which thousands of brave young Americans laid down their lives.

"The American Legion will combat bolshevism and radicalism all the way. The will of the men has been expressed in this direction. They have gone on record as recommending a constructive Americanism program for combating anti-American propaganda and lawlessness, and it is now up to translate this order with their cooperation into concrete acts.

"The Minneapolis convention recommended the establishment of a national Americanism committee whose duty shall be to realize in the United States the basic ideal of this legion of 100 per cent Americanism, through the planning, establishment, and conduct of a continuous constructive educational system designed to combat all anti-American tendencies, activities, and propaganda; to work for the education of immigrants, prospective American citizens, and alien residents in the principles of Americanism; to inculcate the ideals of Americanism in the citizen population, particularly the basic American principle that the interests of all the people are above those of any special interest or any so-called class or section of the people; to spread throughout the people of the nation information as to the real nature and principles of American government and to foster the teaching of Americanism in all schools.

"Just plain common sense and patriotism is dealing with this all-important phase of American life at the present time," continued the national commander. "Give the people all the facts in the case; let them know the true significance of this ugly menace directed against the very foundation of our free government; educate those who do not know what America really and fearlessly stands for—and then common sense, just plain American common sense, will work out the problem of our salvation."

IN one way Hugh Walpole is the most welcome of all the visiting writers from other lands who have come to the United States a-lecturing. There have been others who have had a greater international fame, others who have a greater wealth of literary experience, through long years of creative work, but there has never been any one with a more vital interest in America as a producer of literature as well as of dollars. It is not hard to imagine many of our most distinguished English literary visitors leaving New York with the same unsullied innocence about what American writers are accomplishing with which they landed on our hospitable shores. There has been a courteous lack of curiosity among most of our visiting lions as to the roarings of American kings of the literary forest. Perhaps they think us cubs and the roarings yelpings. Hugh Walpole has come, it seems, to discover America more than to be discovered by America.

Equipped with a wider knowledge of American contemporary literature than any other literary visitor whom I have met, he is boyishly eager to know more and more, to find literary treasures which he may take back to share with his country, which, he says, really wants to take us literarily to her heart, but which has never had the opportunity. He is not only welcomed by us but he hospitably welcomes us to his own country. Personally Hugh Walpole has the advantage of being young and of being what even the least dilettanteish would be forced to admit is a "regular guy." He will lecture this afternoon in the Fine Arts building on "The Modern Novelists." If he lectures with the gusto and enthusiasm with which he chats casually, the afternoon will be a memorable one. And have you read "Jeremy" yet? It's a delight.

"Green Ladies" [Appleton] is the name of an English country estate, not, my dear Wilbur, a modern version of Molière's "The Learned Ladies." The story is a not too eventful one of love, etc., as Christopher and Columbus would say, by a new English writer, W. Douglas Newton. No American writer would have let himself in for such an inevitable joshing as that title will get.

And the state of the ladies' knowledge may well be said to bring us to "Were You Ever a Child?" [Knopf], by Floyd Dell. It is a wholly delightful book on education—which in itself seems a paradox—full of radical but common sense masquerading as foolery, a sort of literary-educational pie into which the most amateurish Jack Horner can stick his thumb and pull out a plum luscious both as a criticism of the present admittedly inadequate educational system and as a bit of literary jollity. Floyd Dell has in him much of the child that he writes about, a charming naïveté, disinterested curiosity about life, an interest in creating something beautiful. He has made no profound contribution to the question of education, but he has succeeded, as he says in his preface, in disturbing "the notion that education should be written about in a heavy, unintelligible, and soporific manner." Floyd Dell, you may remember, used to be literary editor of the Friday Book Review of the Chicago Evening Post. He is now an associate editor of the Liberator, after the trials (literally) of the Masses.

Yearners who keep asking "when is Blasco-Ibanez coming to Chicago?" may find some surcease in the announcement that he will give a lecture on Sunday, Dec. 14, under the auspices of the Chicago Spanish club at Recital hall in the Fine Arts building.

Romain Rolland, author of the famous "Jean Christophe" trilogy, wrote in Switzerland, where he fled after his "Au-dessus de la Mêlée" had made France an impossible place for him to live in. From him there came a letter a year or so ago saying: "During the last two years of the war I have written an Aristophanic, satiric, poetic comedy of the day called 'L'Ane de Buridan.' I am writing two novels, likewise inspired by present-day events. One is a novel of meditation entitled 'L'Un Contre Tous.' The other is a novel of young love. Add to these a Rabelasian novel the hero of which, a native of Burgundy, like myself, gives his name to the book, 'Colas Breugnon.' This is finished and was even printed in 1914; it awaits publication in the office of my Paris publisher until the end of the war, for I am loath to have its gayety made public amid the sorrows of the present time." Of them all "Colas Breugnon" is the only one to be published in the United States.

There are still a few men and women in the world who are not ashamed of the simple, homely sentiments, who frankly love their mothers despite the fact that it is much smarter to cut mother off with a fat annuity and ten dollars' worth of flowers on mothers' day, whose hearts sincerely echo to the patter of baby feet even after the drooling sentimentalities of the popular songs about five little toes. No one hates sloppy sentimentality more than the person who has a deep and true sentiment in his heart. Once in a while a little book is written which tightens such a person's heart strings without making him ashamed of the gentle tear that comes to his eyes. Such a little book—scarcely more than a short story—is Robert Gordon Anderson's "The Little Chap" [Putnam], the simple picture of a child's home in the hearts of unpretentious neighbors of those who can call him their own and of those whose own child is dead.

Mrs. A. Burnet-Smith has written a pleasant, chatty little book about her experiences in the United States called "As Others See Her" [Houghton, Mimn]. It is mostly about American women whom the author met as a lecturer for the conservation of food during the war. There are many keen observations, some clever criticism and much sincere admiration in her gently humorous pages.

"Hunkins" [Doran] is a political novel by Samuel G. Blythe, who can dash off a story of politics with the same ease and facility with which most of us write a letter home saying we're very busy and will write later. Nothing new ever happens in politics, only the old reforms and grafts in a new form. Mr. Blythe dresses up his puppets in the newest cut of heroes and villains and manipulates the strings and behold, a very readable, intricately fascinating drama of the last word in politics. "Hunkins" is the story of a veteran organization, a forerunner of the American legion, which cleaned up the politics of a town long run by a boss, who, pleasantly if not convincingly, turns out to be a sheep in his wolf's clothing.

"Rudyard Kipling's Verse, Inclusive Edition 1885-1918" [Doubleday-Page] is a monument to the poetic power of the best known writer of the last quarter century. The futurists of verse may give Pegasus an extra pat and he may kick his scornful heels in Kipling's face as he soars into the realms of a new Parnassus, the mid-Victorians who still think that Tennyson and Elisabeth Barrett Browning wrote the only verse that's easy to read and worth reading may shield their eyes from the debaucheries of Kipling's Tommies and clutch at their hearts as the great warring cannon of words boom out, but no one can say that Rudyard Kipling has not, in a peculiarly powerful way, sung the song of his times. I say times advisedly, and not time, because it is that immediate sensitiveness to a change of national consciousness that has always characterized his verse. With none of the delicacies of the loveliest English poetry, with no appeal to the senses, with little of that beauty of sound which makes of a group of words a melody, Rudyard Kipling has, however, won a place in the hearts of the world by the sheer power of his convictions passionately shared.

"Helena" [Dodd, Mead], by Mrs. Humphry Ward, is a pleasant after the war story of a Romneyesque girl who, after a jaunt into the realms of freedom, disguised as war work in London, wages war upon her guardian with self-determination as its object. A peace treaty founded on the late-lamented fourteen points was more likely to be signed than Helena's promise of cessation of hostilities. But that jolly little fixer, who goes around, even on the coldest days, clad in a "tasty" bow and arrow, did a little expert archery and Helena forgot that she was a new woman warring against tyranny. It is a relief from the usual guardian-ward plot to find Helena not in the process of becoming Mrs. Guardian, as the finis is written—but why she doesn't is known only to Mrs. Humphry Ward. She wants to be, obviously, and you'd much rather have him marry her than the angler who has been baiting him all his life.

No one who has an interest in the Russian situation—and it is only the person so sleekly certain of his own and his country's prosperity who does not watch Russia with anxious eyes—no one who has a sense for the fundamental justice of hearing all sides of a question can afford to miss "The Bullitt Mission to Russia" [Huebsch] the exact record of the testimony of William C. Bullitt before the famous committee on foreign relations of the senate. It is a tragic record of a great international fiasco, of the opportunity which the peace commission had to foster the negotiations for peace in Russia, a scathing, though indirect, denunciation of the two biggest of the big four and a clear statement of the aims and operation of the soviet government in Russia. It is a trifle trivial to hit upon one phase of the Russian soviet rule and comment upon it when far more important things must needs go undiscussed for lack of space, but a most illuminating sentence is this "The first class [which can buy one and one-half pounds of bread a day, as compared with the third class which can buy but a quarter of a pound a day], includes soldiers, workers in the war and other essential industries, actors, teachers, writers, experts, and government workers of all sorts." Actors, writers . . .

And that reminds me of a most interesting article by Frank Swinnerton in the Athenæum for Oct. 31, called "Author and Publisher," in which he makes very plain the good publisher's attitude toward first novels, which are, as Hugh Walpole said just before he came over to America, doomed owing to their unprofitable character. Frank Swinnerton has a rare opportunity to judge nicely between author and publisher since he is both, and his first novel "Nocturne" [Doran] was received here with more ardent acclaim than often falls to the lot of a first book.

If you yearn and palpitate for a throbbing tale of India, with tense situations, rough and perilous roads for true love to travel and all of the other trapperies of a popular-priced production of the classic of great love, you'll like Ethel M. Dell's "The Lamp in the Desert" [Putnam].

Another Indian novel is Robert Chauvelot's "Parvati" [Century]. M. Parvati is a son-in-law of Alphonse Daudet. In the original French "Parvati" has been very popular. The author has just sold rights in the book for an opera.

Someone says, "Why is it we never have novels about circus people? There ought to be a lot of novel material in a big tent." And before the final t is sounded, there is a novel fresh off the presses begging to be read. "Her Elephant Man" [McBride], is by Pearl Doles Bell, who was fascinated by the circus life she saw when she interviewed Bird Millman, the famous slack wire performer, and who became a frequent guest of Ringling Brothers' circus. And that reminds me that George F. Worts, who wrote "Peter, the Brazen" [Lippincott], spends a month each summer, with Webster and Briggs, the famous cartoonists, as clowns with Barnum & Bailey, so his publishers say.

"Love Letters of Bill to Mable" [Stokes], contains in one not too bulky volume the complete amatory correspondence of Bill to "Dere Mable," "That's Me All Over Mable," and "Same Old Bill, eh Mable."

HELP!

By Guy F. Lee.

"Chadsey Quits Job, but Not Fight."—Headline.

When the sun its own vitals at last has burnt out
And the sands of the desert grow cold;
When stilled for all time is the radical's shout,
And the strike is a memory old;
When the ocean dries up; when we don't give a rap
Whether school keeps or not—perhaps then
That futile, inutile education board scrap
May fade from the annals of men.

I'm weary of reading of Jacob M. Loeb,
Of Chadsey and Mortenson, too;
I'm ill with perusal of ouster and probe,
And of all of the horrible stew.
I'm tempted to wish that I'd learned how to curse,
At times almost feel I could fight;
For that pending, unending board wrangle is worse
Than the Yards on a hot summer night.

The Sergel bunch irks and the council's a bore,
And the howling of Hoyne causes sighs;
But, believe me, of every enduring bete noire
This Solid Six row is the prize;
It's Ennui personified, Pain at its crest—
O Fate, for sweet charity's sake,
Please wind up that rusty old trustmobile just Before we all jump in the lake!

Rabbit Raising as a Home Industry

Some Hints on an Interesting and Profitable Back Yard Occupation

By Frank Ridgway.

RABBIT raising on a backyard scale is no longer an experiment. The Belgian hare has been kept as a pet in this country for many years, but recently it has become of great commercial value as a source of meat and fur. While the commercial end of the rabbit business is growing, there is still a considerable demand for rabbits to be used as pets.

People in America are finding out how good rabbit meat is, how nutritious it is and how cheaply rabbits can be grown. There are thousands of small rabbitries in this country producing rabbits that are used for meat. The fact that rabbits are easily grown and are a cheap and excellent substitute for the ordinary meats is likely to turn the attention of many more persons to rearing the animal.

The supply of meat rabbits is still quite small, for the fancy end of the business has created a great deal of interest and there is a big demand for breeding stock. The meat producing phase of the business is rapidly growing and breeders believe that eventually the rabbit industry must stand or fall on the value of a rabbit as food.

Belgian hares, Flemish giants and New Zealand reds are probably the most popular for meat rabbits. "As popularly and broadly used, the term 'Belgian hare' includes the Belgian, Flemish giants, the New Zealand reds, and possibly one or two other breeds," according to F. L. Washburn of the University of Minnesota. "The three mentioned are to be regarded as the utility strains of rabbits on account of their size, rapidity of development, fecundity, and the fine quality of their meat. In fact, the comparative rapidity of production and the consequent large amount of meat produced in a short time, the cheapness of their food and the small amount of space required are to be regarded as their chief recommendations. One doe may produce more than forty-five pounds of meat in six months and the claim has been made that 200 pounds a year is possible."

An Indiana breeder's advice to beginners in selecting the foundation stock is that in this line, the same as in poultry, he should follow his preference as to which variety of rabbits to breed. He advises beginners to read some good book on the subject. A few fundamental suggestions coupled with a reasonable amount of common sense is the best plan.

In buying stock the beginner should be very careful and see that he is getting healthy individuals. Start on a small scale, is the advice that comes from successful breeders. There is much to learn, and it isn't necessary to have more than three does, and one or two does that have been bred will be sufficient. The young does should be saved from each litter. When the stock has increased to six or more good breeding does the owner will be justified in buying a high grade buck. Young rabbits will probably cost more, but it will not pay to buy old ones. Old age is indicated by long hair, coarse long claws, and excessive flesh. Does more than 2½ years old are usually of little value as breeders.

Where rabbits are to be used for food only the selection is of less importance than where they are to be bred for show purposes. An animal with plenty of size and of good hardy stock is about all that is required. Select animals about a year old for breeding stock.

Belgian hares may be managed in hutches or in outdoor fenced runs, but the hutch system, with its various modifications is the one now in common usage, whether the rabbits are being grown for show or food. Hutches can be crudely made from dry goods boxes. If a permanent rabbitry is being established more elaborate hutches will be needed. The principal features to observe in building hutches is that they should be made so they can be kept dry, clean, and well ventilated.

The Belgian hare will thrive in a small area, requiring but little exercise. Where the rabbitry occupies a part of barn or shed the hutches may be built very simple. A convenient hutch that is to be used indoors, one that is recommended by the government and is now becoming a favorite size among fanciers, is 2x2x6 feet. A movable partition is used in one end, dividing off one-third of the space for a nest or sleeping compartment. A hole large enough for the adult rabbit to pass through is made in the partition. A wooden door opens to the sleeping compartment. The remaining portion of the front of the hutch has another door made of wire netting with small meshes.

With the outdoor hutches the roof should be sloping and the eaves made to extend over the edge to protect the rabbits from rain. A board or cloth should be provided to place over the screen door in case of rain or severe cold weather. Indoor hutches of the above dimensions can be easily moved outdoors during clear, warm weather and taken back under shelter at night or when there is a storm.

While the Belgian hare requires but little exercise and thrives in a six foot hutch if it is kept clean, it is best to have runs. Mr. Washburn says "ideal conditions are found in runs. These may be of almost any length, one approximately 4x20 feet being sufficient to accommodate eight or ten rabbits. These runs should be made of one inch wire mesh and have a top of the same material to keep off cats and other enemies. The bottom should also be of wire mesh covered with from to six inches of soil. This prevents their digging out." In one corner of the run place a rainproof nest about 2½x3 feet by 14 inches, with a board bottom. The bottom should be kept off the ground and the nest box supplied with an abundance of straw in the winter. The run should be provided with a door to facilitate feeding and caring for the rabbits.

The problem of feeding rabbits is simple. A definite ration is not necessary. Then thrive on a diversity of vegetable foods. While they will eat leaves and roots of many varieties of vegetables, a few staple foods are sufficient, and the owner may feed those materials that are available and cheap. Rabbits do well on the waste materials that come from the garden and during the spring and summer the owner need not be at any expense for feed.

During the winter months grain and hay may be fed. Some green foods, such as cabbage, spinach, rape, or kale leaves, should be given during the cold months. Oats, either whole or ground, is the best grain for rabbits but cornmeal, barley, and other grains may be fed occasionally. Dry bread may also be fed. Clover, alfalfa, or timothy is a necessary part of the diet, especially in the winter.

If only a few rabbits are kept one should study their individual likes and dislikes. As a general rule it is best to feed twice a day. The grain and green food should be given morning and evening in quantities that will be consumed at each feed. Hay should be kept in the hutches where it will be available at all times.

Rabbits should not be paired until they are about 7 months old. Some breeders delay the mating until the animals are 10 months old. The gestation period is about thirty days. Does may have as many as eight litters and possibly more within a year, but this is not advisable. Experienced breeders say that the best results are obtained where they are limited to four or possibly five litters a year, the young coming at intervals of four or five weeks and within thirty-one days after mating.

At the rate of four litters a year each doe would produce an average of about thirty rabbits annually. However, litters of ten or twelve occur, but an average of six or seven is all that should be saved. The young should not be handled until they are several weeks old. They will leave the nest when about 3 weeks old, at which time the nest box should be cleaned and furnished with fresh straw. The crude practice of lifting rabbits by the ears should be discouraged. This is not only painful to the rabbit, but often causes the ear to lop. They can be easily and properly handled by grasping the loose skin just back of the shoulders, and the weight may be supported by placing one hand under the hind quarters. Young rabbits should not be handled before they leave the nest unless it is absolutely necessary.

Rabbits that are sold for meat usually bring the greatest profits when they are about 3 or 4 months old. They may be shipped alive in crates. The best plan is to start in the business on a small scale and while the rabbits are increasing in number a local market may be developed. Often in towns where there are restaurants, hotels and boarding houses the surplus rabbits may be disposed of. But one should not begin raising them in large quantities and expect a good profit until he has developed a market.

AMONG US MORTALS

THE CHURCH FAIR

By W. E. HILL

Copyright, 1919, N Y Tribune Inc.

Mrs. Fred Grubb has had an awful time making her booth, "the Peace Booth," look like anything. To begin with, the corner florist absolutely refused to lend the dove of peace for decoration, and little Edna's doll had to do instead. And then, how can you arrange your counter tastefully when all you have to do with are boxes of crackerjack and packages of C. J. disinfectant? At least, that's practically all Mrs. Grubb could induce the merchants to donate.

Bertha, Billie and Aggie Buick, who always do everything in unison, are getting ready to bow to some fortunate youth.

The sexton (who does undertakings and embalming in odd moments) is really awfully good company and almost never talks shop, so they say; that is, when you get to know him. Old Mrs. Tripp, who is going on ninety, doesn't know what a jovial soul the sexton is and doesn't like the way he stares at her. It is Mrs. Tripp's opinion that the sexton is a mercenary man who is always on the lookout for business opportunities.

An unmarried curate has to be awfully wary if he wants to stay single. Mr. Widge, feeling the safety of numbers, is cutting up and carrying on, as Miss May Belle Meager expresses it, "something awful!" He is pretending to run away with something all trimmed with pink rosebuds from the "Vanity Booth."

Mrs. Jones' new slippers hurt her. She slipped them off and now she can't get them on again.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cuff don't get out very often, and this is a great treat for them. Really, Mrs. Cuff doesn't remember having such a lark since McKinley died and she saw the funeral ceremony.

The turkey supper in the parish house. The turkey has just given out, but there's the choice of baked beans or cold tongue.

Marshall had just decided to make a break for the movies down the street where the Mack Sennett "Bathing Beauties" were showing. He would have been just about in time for the second show if Mrs. Lester Jewell (who was going to make everybody have a good time or know why) hadn't swooped down and dragged him off to meet "three lovely girls—who have been sitting all by themselves in a corner all evening—you'll be crazy about them! Not pretty, but awfully nice girls!"

THE THEATERS

By Percy Hammond

University of Chicago, Nov. 28.

Dear Critic:

You disarm criticism of your criticism of the action of the Juvenile Protective league in seeing that the laws of the state were enforced in connection with the play, "Daddies." So gently you administer the slap upon the wrist, it might almost pass for a caress. Almost.

Let us not argue the value of the law. It stands upon the statute books, and in these days, so condemnatory of "radicalism," public objection to a law might tend to classify us as conscientious, which heaven forfend. Still less should we be wise or safe in arguing that the law, existent, ought not to be enforced. Mr. Debs' dungeon is said to have been made "as comfortable as possible," but I have no longing to share it with him, nor, I think, have you, even though the enforced retirement would mitigate your melancholy by freeing you from the necessity of attendance on such shows as chiefly empurple our intelligence nowadays.

But, gentle Ariel, does not your tongue discompose your cheek somewhat as you write that the action of the law "deprives a larger public of the play's salubrious, though infantile, instruction in charity and unselfishness"? The "instruction" in the Elsie books, in the glad good cheer of Pollyanna, in the knickerbockered molasses of Little Lord Fauntleroy, is to that of "Daddies" as Epictetus to the maxims of Henry Ford. O, tempora! Salubrious! When I find Percy Hammond, in these days of tumult and shouting, taking seriously enough the hopeless inanity of a play like "Daddies" to call it salubrious, I wonder where on earth I am to turn for refuge from sentimentality.

Unless, as I have hinted, the phrase is a cry from a heart so overburdened as to prefer its irony misunderstood; in which case, accept my humble apologies.

JAMES WEBER LINN.

Prof. Linn's despondent breast-beats, sounding so forlorn a tattoo among the chill retreats of Academus, summon me to cheer him with the assurance that he may continue to use THE TRIBUNE as a haven from sentimentality upon the stage.

Not, perhaps, so stanch a shelter as he would desire; for timidity is essential to comfort in newspaper criticism of the drama, and a stealthy sneer satisfies one's conscience; is sometimes recognized by one's wiser habitués, and is frequently overlooked by those who disagree.

But THE TRIBUNE hopes to remain for Prof. Linn a sort of a shack, as it were, whereunder he may have protection from the dripping goo-goos until the happy old-times of the angry, berserker critic return, and bad plays will be called bad plays in so many words, no matter how good large audiences believe them to be.

If a professional daily newspaper reviewer were to describe "Daddies" as a "hopeless inanity," as Dean Linn has done, grievous would be his punishment. His letters would be unpleasant to open, acquaintances would shun him upon the streets, and his few friends would telephone him to ask him where did he get that stuff. If Dean Linn will pause a while from learning and be wise, he will know that in these days of tumult and shouting every playgoer is his own final critic, and a permanent, personal judgment is registered with every shift of the Spearmint. Therefore the selfish reviewer is a cautious pussyfooter, treading prudently and furtively between the lines. In disparagement of a play he uses such obscure words as "infantile," hoping, desperately, that some one in the University of Chicago at least will figure it out and understand what it means. But yearning to enlighten the elect by such subtleties it seems that he only annoys them, and the bourgeoisie as well.

One trouble with Mr. Linn's protest is that he is used in the University to the higher things which raise the thoughts while touching the heart; and he is remote from the alphabet and the primer. He pooh-poohs the word "salubrious", when applied to "Daddies" because "Daddies" is not an advanced nor an educated drama. Yet the A. B. C.'s are in a way salubrious and instruction is contained in the multiplication tables. Mr. Linn will not deny that while Mellin's food is inane to the adult taste it has its nutritious attributes, and we should not banish it from our nurseries simply because it is for the immature. "Learning hath its infancy" and "Daddies" is merely some paper blocks, which, put together, misspell sacrifice and unselfishness in large, red, and juvenile monosyllables. It is a baby play, but as Mr. Shaw has said, the sappier the drama the greater its influence.

Music and the Musicians

By W. L. Hubbard

THE second week of the opera season brought much of enjoyment and considerable of interest. Illness of Mr. Dolci necessitated change of bill Monday evening, and the rehearing of Montemezzi's latest work, "The Ship" ("La Nave"), was thus unavoidably postponed, "Butterfly" being given instead. The Borowski ballet "Boudour" had first showing on Tuesday night, following "La Boheme," which Puccini master work became particularly interesting because of the successful debut of the American soprano, Evelyn Herbert, as Mimi. Yvonne Gall and other members of the French section made their reappearance on Wednesday, and Miss Garden accomplished her reentrance Thursday in Massenet's "Cleopatra."

The Wednesday evening performance proved the musically notable of the week, for it brought further acquaintance with "The Vagabond" ("Le Chemineau"), the opera by Xavier Leroux which had its premiere the last matinée of last season, but which otherwise was unknown to Chicago opera patrons. It is an opera of uncommon beauty and appeal, the story is the finely idyllic drama of Richepin, and the music is as unusual, yet as hauntingly appealing and colorful, as is found in any modern score.

Leroux has fashioned a musically illustrative accompaniment which mirrors faithfully the moods and movement of the drama, and yet impresses as astonishingly free, untrammeled, and independent so far as operatic music conventions and rules are concerned. The orchestra is as proud of its liberty, and of having its own way, as is the Vagabond himself. And yet, just as he cannot live without contact with his fellow beings, and just as he is of use in helping them when in need, and in bringing out their qualities and worth, so the orchestral score would be meaningless and powerless as music without the contact of Richepin drama, and so, too, it brings out and enhances what the drama contains.

It is a score so unusual that hearing it once creates eager wish to hear it again. The scoring oftentimes is light in surprising degree. Only a single instrument will be employed at times, again only a few of the strings, the wood winds alone, or combinations of strings and wood winds.

The music is in the Debussy manner, the Debussy of "Pelleas and Melisande," but is a shade more definite, more melodious, and more appealing. It also contains delicious bits of humor and quaint whimsies not found in the Debussy score. The scene, for example, of the two old topers sitting in front of the inn at the crossroads in act three is accompanied by as clever instrumental funning as could be wished. The whole range from this lovable jollity, to dramatic seriousness almost tragic in character, is traversed and successful. The voice parts, too, fit the word phrase and mood remarkably. All in all, it is a score exceptionally interesting, exceptionally appealing, exceptionally beautiful.

Whether the opera will hold place in the repertory remains to be seen. It may, and it is, to be earnestly hoped it can, for it is of genuine worth. But if it does, it will be because the Richepin story has not only a human note that reaches out and compels sympathy but because the motives of the drama and their employment are so simple, so direct, and so true to human experience that even the least informed onlooker can grasp them and understand.

"The Vagabond," like "Louise," has its primal and vital value in the story itself, and not to be able to understand and follow the story closely and intelligibly is to be barred from the major portion of the enjoyment the two operas afford. "The Vagabond" is far more easily grasped than is "Louise," for Richepin has not woven into his drama anything like the sociological and humanitarian doctrines which Charpentier purposely voiced in his drama of life on Montmartre. It is therefore more quickly comprehended. But it, like "Louise," requires constant understanding of the text to derive full enjoyment and appreciation of the opera. A thought which would not down during all of the excellent performance given last Wednesday evening was that of how much real value was being lost to the Chicago patrons.

When, O when, will the powers that direct our operatic destinies catch a

News of the Theaters

Miss Laurette Taylor will perform her husband's new play, "One Night in Rome," for the first time Tuesday night in New York. Her rôle is described as that of "an Italian woman of distinction and subtle intelligence." In the roster of players are H. Cooper Cliffe, Louise Beaudet, Mrs. Felix Morris, Thomas Coffin Cooke and Greta Kemble Cooper.

In approval of Miss Leonore Ulrich and her new Chinese play, "The Son Daughter," Miss Geraldine Farrar puts into use the following adjectives: Remarkable, poignant, moving, delectable, lovely, vivid, haunting, marvelous, smooth, silken, turgid, flexible, and exquisite. "I want to express, however poorly," she adds, my wholehearted satisfaction over Mr. Belasco's achievement.

Willard Mack is ready to be starred by A. H. Woods in his own new play, "Poker Ranch."

"The Scandals of 1919," which begins a season tonight at the Illinois, is the enterprise of George White, the dancer. It is of the "revue" type, except that its travesty is of current events rather than of New York plays. Ann Pennington and Mr. White are the leading entertainers, and the others include Yvette Rugel, Adele Ardsley, Lou Holtz, Lester Allen, and George Bickel.

"La La Lucille," which supplants Mr. Stone at the Colonial tonight, is by Fred Jackson, author of "The Velvet Lady," with music by George Gershwin. Active in singing its songs and reciting its story is Sam B. Hardy, whose rôle is that af a young husband desiring to be divorced, so that he may comply with the provisions of his uncle's will.

Pleasant news from the Blackstone is to the effect that on Tuesday, Dec. 9, Miss Lola Fisher and Emmett Corrigan will appear there in "Roxy," a new play by Claire Kummer, under the direction of George C. Tyler. The cast will include Miss Beryl Mercer, who was well liked here when she acted at the Playhouse a year or two ago in "The Lodger." It was Mr. Tyler's intention to present Miss Lynn Fontanne in "Made of Money" following Mr. Arliss at the Blackstone, but he decided to give that comedy the advantage of further performances in the New England suburbs before bringing it here.

From Mr. Kaufman's column in today's New York Times:

John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" will have its first American performance tomorrow night in Washington at the Shubert-Garrick theater. Thereafter it will probably go to New York, although there is at present no theater available.

Also about to be launched is the George C. Hazelton-Ritter Brown drama, "The Whirlwind," in which Mimi Aguglia, the Sicilian actress, hopes finally to find a vehicle which will carry her into New York. "The Whirlwind" will be presented in Pittsburgh a week from tomorrow, and if it proves worthy it will have the privilege of waiting for a New York theater.

W. A. Brady has accepted a play entitled "Opportunity," written by John T. Glynn, who never wrote a play before. It is said to be on the general plan of "Experience" and "Every Woman," which obviously means that it is more or less allegorical. One of its scenes, so confides Mr. Brady, shows a panic on the stock market, and the play, as a whole, is directed against the popular craze for acquiring money quickly and with a minimum of endeavor.

Cyril Maude, returning to London after a long absence in America, appeared earlier in the month in a new farce by Sidney Blow and Douglas Hoare. It is a dramatization called "Sir Richard in the Pantry."

"When Cyril Maude's voice was first heard last night from behind a screen," says the London Times' account of the premiere, "the whole house broke into applause, so well are actors remembered by their voices. Mr. Maude could not come out for the moment, being immersed in a portable Turkish bath, and when he did come out it was only to get, as Lord Richard, into still hotter water.

"It appeared there were financial troubles for which Lord Richard was not really to blame, but he was nevertheless wanted by the police. Anyhow, he had to hide and thought he could hide most securely disguised as a butler. You have, then, to picture Mr. Maude as an amateur butler, cleaning the plate with bootblacking (or whatever it was) and being violently wooed by the cook (in the substantial person of Miss Connie Ediss). All the humors of the kitchen are there, and when they are exhausted Lord Richard is suddenly in a position to be himself again and to chase to his heart the Lady (Miss Lydia Bylbrooke) whom he has been serving as butler—and who has been aware of his real identity all the while.

"It is all very light and nonsensical as a farce should be, and, what is most to the purpose is a capital vehicle for Mr. Maude's airy humors and Miss Connie Ediss' emphatic fun."

The Prince and the "Follies"

By Burns Mantle

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Associated Press reporters, linking adjectives with all the other reporters who wrote pieces about the Prince of Wales' visit to New York, are agreed that Albert Edward proved himself one grand little fellow. His smile, they insisted, was as completely disarming as any that royalty ever flashed here about, and his consideration for his hosts and their committees was a perfect tribute to the care with which his mamma has brought him up.

But when they came to their illustrations of the prince's great humanness they overlooked his choice of theatrical attractions in New York. We entertain royalty rather niftily on Broadway, given half a chance. They have only to suggest a new something that would add to their entertainment and Rodman Wanamaker, chief receiver of the great, immediately ties himself and his committee into bowknots until that something is secured.

Thus when the prince was here, even though his five day program was stuffed with more entertainment than he possibly could assimilate, he was privately asked just what he would like to see in the way of a theatrical entertainment. And the prince, without any hesitation, answered that while he was keen for the drammer what he most wanted to see was Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies." They had figured so prominently in the illustrated prints he was quite familiar with their general makeup, and if it would not be too difficult to secure a couple on the aisle, say in the third or fourth row, he would enjoy going very much.

Mr. Wanamaker thereupon assured his highness that while he had little influence in his own right he was pretty close to a friend of a friend of Mr. Ziegfeld's and he would see what could be done. So the prince saw the "Follies"; the "Follies" saw the prince, and, taking it by and large, it was considerable meeting. He also saw the "Happy Days" spectacle at the Hip, and it reminded him awfully of the Christmas pantomimes at home.

David Belasco's "Son-Daughter" is with us, and the secret of all the wizard's six months behind closed stage doors is out.

Lenore Ulric is the star—Lenore with a clean, pink and white face and a speech robbed of the accents and burrs with which it has been thickened the last few years. The performance is an earned triumph for her, and the production another feather in the headdress of her manager.

"The Son-Daughter" is not much of a play. Not, at least, what the classicists of Longacre square describe as a "whale of a play." It is a nice little Chinese melodrama, subdued in tone, soaked in atmosphere, and played in the key of tragedy.

Little Lien Wha has, sitting in her window in New York's Chinatown, fallen in love with young Tom Lee, who is studying at Columbia university. She would most respectfully like to marry with Tom Lee, and is not at all backward in saying so. Neither is her august father strongly opposed to the match. But—

Just then many things begin to happen. In the first place, the revolutionary party, fighting to make China safe for the republicans, cables for more funds, suggesting that the true patriots will, if necessary, sell their daughters to rich merchants in order to raise their assessments. Then, it is discovered that young Tom Lee is none other than the son of the prince who is leading the revolutionary forces; that his father is dead; that he (Tom) must cross the Pacific to carry on the fight, and that he will have to get started pretty darned quick or the hatchet men will get him.

Then it is, too, that Lien Wha makes the great sacrifice, for isn't love of country many times a finer thing than love of self? Conducting her own auction, she sells herself to Fen Sha, the gambler, for $100,000, and tearfully says good-bye to Tom Lee, to youth, to love, and to life.

Fen Sha is really the worst of the imperialistic spies, known as the "Sea-Crab," and he craftily decides to recover the $100,000 he has paid for Lien Wha by the simple expedient of murdering her father on his way to the bank. He also orders a knifeblade thrust through the ribs of young Tom Lee. Then, he turns with a light heart to the anticipated joys of matrimony. Anticipation, however, is as far as Fen Sha gets. That night, as he sat with little Lien Wha, she deftly twisted his silken queque around his throat and strangled him to death. After which, she hurried with a shriek of triumph back to Tom Lee, who was not dead but near it.

Miss Ulric has improved considerably, even since the days of her "Tiger Rose" success. She is now a clearly spoken actress of good address and a real talent for suggesting the true suffering of an emotional female. She is most ably assisted, particularly by Albert Bruning and Harry Mestayer. Edward Lowe is the hero and Thomas Walsh the father.

glimpse of the light and the truth where operatic conditions in this country are concerned! Grand opera could now so easily be made a permanent, virtually self-supporting, mighty cultural influence in our national and social life, if only the one step indispensable for the bringing of it to the American people would be taken. Make it intelligible to us by giving it to us in the language which we know and speak, and the problem would be solved. If our public will pay what it does now for an entertainment which it has to get through a thick wall of unintelligibility and positive ignorance, what would it not pay and do for that entertainment were it made clear and understandable, and all its countless finer beauties and meanings placed within reach?

Could that day come, operas like "The Vagabond" and "Louise" would be beloved, and the way thus opened for all that is best in grand opera from foreign fields, and our own American composers would be enabled and encouraged to create and to take their place among the opera masters of the world.

Two interesting artists were brought forward on Tuesday forenoon at the second of the Kinsolving Musical Mornings in the Blackstone. They were Nina Tarasova, the Russian singer, and Maurice Dambois, the Belgian cellist. Mme. Tarasova was a newcomer, in fact her initial appearance in this country took place only last May.

She proved on Tuesday to be first and foremost a personality. She has that indefinable, indispensable attribute which men and women, especially those on the stage or platform, must have in order to hold and sway their fellow humans. No one can tell wherein this power lies, no one can tell what it is. It is, or it is not, and the person without it is destined to failure or only moderate success, while the one who does have it is likely to attain his aim.

Mme. Tarasova has personality and she interests, holds, and grips her hearer. This even when she is singing in Russian, which the majority of her auditors do not understand. And to the art she practices the medium of the comprehended word is peculiarly vital. For she lays heaviest stress on the import of the poem rather than on the melody to which it is set.

How clear, potent, and vital her art and skill are was demonstrated in the French and English numbers she gave on Tuesday. In the Scotch "My Laddie" and in Mana Zucca's child song, "Great Bear," with its humorous "Woof," which so frightens the little one, she handled the text with a skill which extracted from every word its fullest significance and yet did not impress as being exaggerated.

She "paints the picture" just as does her French prototype Yvette Guilbert, and while her art possesses something that in a way seems broader and heavier than is that of the eminent Gallic artist (the difference is probably the racial difference between the Russian and the French), yet her vivifying of the text is none the less exact, clear, and potent.

Mme. Tarasova's voice is a deep mezzo, peculiarly Russian in its timbre, and yet a voice which soon exerts appeal. So keen and bright is the intelligence and so sincere the emotional and dramatic feel back of the interpretation, however, that it would not matter whether the artist had voice or not. She would hold and sway her hearers just the same.

Two groups of Russian folksongs were given, and while they interested by their marked national flavor and much of their poetic meaning was made clear by the singer, yet they did not appeal so strongly of course as did those in which the text could be understood.

Mr. Dambois quickly established himself as a cellist of rare gifts when first he appeared in the United States, and the favor then won has found no reason for being withdrawn or lessened since that time. His tone is of exceptional loveliness and sensuous appeal and his interpretative talents are those of an artist. He makes the cello an instrument varicolored and interesting instead of the merely sweet medium it so generally is. His playing is of the kind that can be heard again and again and ever with enjoyment and live interest.

Wednesday forenoon, in the Ziegfeld theater, Louis Cornell gave a piano recitale that interested and pleased. The young man comes from New York, it is understood, and that he is an admirer of the modern was shown by his program. He did away with the conventional commencement and subsequent order of selections. Beginning with Chopin and Debussy he made the Liszt Sonata the central number of his musical scheme. Just why pianists feel obliged to commence with Bach and Beethoven and climb down the whole chronological ladder is inexplicable save on the ground of the customary. It is genuine relief to find a pianist who has the courage to offer something rousing and inspiriting at the commencement of his recital when his hearers are fresh and ready to enjoy. By beginning with Chopin and Debussy, Mr. Cornell won immediate attention and the remainder of his offerings fell on willing and appreciative ears.

His playing is of high order. He commands abundant technic—every pianist nowadays does or else is out of the running before he starts. And he adds to this technical facility and skill which enable him to do all with ease and finish, a keen sense for the melodic line, a singing tone, a sane emotionality, and a feel for the musical phrase which when present raise mere piano playing to the plane of the interpretative and beautiful. He presented the Debussy Preludes with the colorfulness and the delicate nuance they require, and the Liszt Sonata he gave with a technical certainty and with an authority and a dramatic intensity and impulsiveness that made it interesting and meaningful. And to accomplish this with this Sonata is to do much.

WITH GEORGE WHITE'S "SCANDALS OF 1919" ILLINOIS

The Opera; Concerts and Recitals

Mme. Galli-Curci will make her reappearance with the Chicago opera next Thursday night, when she will sing Gilda in "Rigoletto." The occasion will be lent further interest by permitting the debut here of Gino Marinuzzi, the new Italian conductor, of whom much is expected, and also will bring forward for the first time the new tenor, Tita Schipa, and afford chance to hear Mr. Galeffi as the jester.

Monday night a repetition of Montemezzi's "The Ship" ("La Nave") is promised. Tuesday evening Miss Garden will appear in her master portrayal of the title rôle in Massenet's "The Juggler of Notre Dame," being assisted by Mr. Duffanne and Mr. Huberdeau in leading parts. Wednesday night "La Boheme" will be repeated with the same cast as gave it last week, and will be followed by Borowski's gorgeous ballet, "Boudour." Saturday afternoon the Puccini three one acters are to have their Chicago premiere. In "The Cloak" Dorothy Jardon, Edward Johnson, and Carlo Galeffi will appear. In "Sister Angelica" Mmes. Raisa, Van Gordon, Pavloska, and Slade will be the principals. In "Giann Schichi" Evelyn Herbert, Edward Johnson, and Carlo Galeffi will form the cast. Saturday night "Carmen" will be sung at popular prices, Mary Garden being the gypsy, Nina Morgana the Micaela, Fontaine the Jose, and Contreuil the Escamillo.

Today will be one of difficult decision for the music lover. Three concerts, each of them of genuine worth, are offered simultaneously, while at the Auditorium an extra performance of Verdi's "The Masked Ball" is to be given. The concerts are wholly of the violin and string instrument kind, so that whoever cares for vocal art alone will know that the Auditorium and the excellent presentation the Chicago Opera company gives of "The Masked Ball" is the place for his patronage. But the majority of music lovers care not alone for singing. Instrumental art when of a high kind also appeals. Choice will therefore be difficult.

Jasha Heifetz, whose violinistic triumphs last season are by no means forgotten, comes to Orchestra hall this afternoon at 3:30 for his first recital here this year. At the same hour Isolde Menges, who is declared one of the ablest women violinists of the day, gives a recital in Kimball hall, and at the same hour, the Flonzaley quartet, than which there is no better in existence, is to offer its first of three chamber music concerts in the Blackstone theater. Let him who knows what he wants choose!

Mr. Heifetz has programmed for his recital the Cesar Franck A-major sonata, a fantasy by Bruch, Dvorak's G major Slavonic dance, Burleigh Perpetual Motion, the Legend of Godowsky, Wieniawski's E-flat major Saltarello Caprice, and the Paganini "Non piu mesta."

Miss Menges has chosen for her recital the Mozart concerto in A-major, Kreisler's transcriptions of Dvorak's G-minor Slavonic dance, of the Schubert Rosamonde Ballet music, and of the Pugnani Prelude and Allegro, Boyd's Samoan Lullaby, the Bach Chaconne, Medtner's C-minor Nocturne, Debussy's "In a Boat," and the Chabrier "Scherzo Waltz."

The Flonzaleys were booked originally for the Playhouse, but the change in management of that auditorium compelled Miss Kinsolving to seek place elsewhere, and the Blackstone theater was the only one available. The series will therefore be offered there. The quartet has suffered one change in personnel. Mr. Ara, the viola player, after his service in the war, felt that his technic had suffered to such a degree that he would require considerable time to bring it back to former standard, and fearing lest his present possible inefficiency might mar the perfection of the ensemble, he refuses to assume his old-time place. His successor is Louis Bailly, formerly viola player of the Berkshire quartet. The program for this afternoon consists of the Haydn Quartet in D, op. 76, No. 5, Smetana's Quartet "From My Life," and Victor Herbert's "Two Pieces for String Quartet," written especially for the Flonzaleys and still in manuscript.

Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony will be the main number in the program of the Chicago Symphony orchestra next Friday afternoon and evening in Orchestra hall. The soloist will be Harry Weisbach, the excellent concertmaster of the orchestra, who will play Lalo's Spanish Symphony for violin and orchestra. The program further includes the Overture to Weber's "Der Freischutz" and Two Poems—Winter and Spring, by Ernest Bloch.

The next regular concert in the Kinsey recital series in the Ziegfeld theater will take place next Wednesday morning at 11, and will consist of a program given by Charlotte Peege, contralto. The selections scheduled are "Come raggio di sol," Caldara; "Vittoria, Vittoria," Carissimi; "In Prison," Faure, "Tous deux," Hahn; "The Swimmer," Widor; Grieg's "With and Water Lily," "The First Meeting," and "Thanks for Thy Hand"; Rachmaninoff's "The Island," "At Night," and "Floods of Spring"; Crist's "Into a Ship," Harling's "Wind of the East," Pierce's "The Lamp," Carpenter's "May, the Maiden," Sibella's "Girometta," and Parker's "The Lark Now Leaves His Wat'ry Nest."

The Civic Music association announces the first of four free concerts to be given Sunday afternoons at 3:30 at Hamlin park, North Hoyne and Wellington avenues, the first taking place today. The program consists of Maunder's cantata, "A Song of Thanksgiving," to be sung by St. Peter's choir and soloists.

Eric De Lamarter announces that all manuscripts for the organ sonata for which he has offered a prize of $100 must be in the hands of the judges not later than tomorrow. They should be sent to Mr. De Lamarter at 126 East Chestnut street, Chicago.

The next of the children's concerts by the Chicago Orchestra is scheduled for Thursday afternoon, Dec. 11.

Sophie Braslau, contralto, will give a song recital in Orchestra hall on Sunday, Dec. 7.

Frieda Hempel will be heard in recital in Cohan's Grand opera house Sunday, Dec. 14.

Isolde Menges

Miss Menges is the English violinist who will be heard in recital this afternoon in Kimball hall.

THE LONG WOOD HORN of the Puritan

produces an effect entirely different from other phonographs.

The PURITAN WOOD HORN is a rectangular channel resembling an organ pipe, extending from the Tone Arm to the base of the cabinet, the lower opening being as wide as the cabinet itself. It is the most effective amplifier of sound yet devised.

The sound-waves from the reproducer are carried in full volume to the listener, but are mellowed and filtered by passage through the long wood horn.

Hissing and surface noises from the record are completely absorbed. The resulting tone is PURE, SWEET and REALISTIC.

The peculiar form and position of the PURITAN WOOD HORN permits records being carried in the upper section of the cabinet.

The New Puritan Reproducer

Is the strongest and most sensitive known. It forms part of a Sound Box that is 100 per cent perfect, yet of the simplest construction.

Any disk record can be played on the PURITAN, and it gives the best results from any record. It needs no "synchronizing"

A comparison with any other phonograph always convinces the listener that the PURITAN is the "Super-Phonograph." Hear it at the following stores:

Right off the Reel

A READER'S REVIEW.

By Miss Tinée.

IT certainly takes you, my dear readers, to see the "different" side of things. It seemed to me that just about everything in the world that could be said about "Broken Blossoms" had been said. But I was wrong.

Up in Owen, Wis., is a movie fan who saw the production and took his pen in hand, to great effect, I'll say. Follows the opinion of E. C. M. on the Griffith production:

"Dear Miss Tinée: I seen a picture last night called Busted Blossoms and believe me its a scream. They's a Chink gets tired of his home town and goes to So. Clark St. in London and opens up a store. He gets stuck on a little Jane that lives with a pug. And this here pug is some bad actor. Every time he gets peeved he beats up this little Jane. After giving her a good beating because the soup was too hot he blows to his training quarters and she sneaks down the street and does a faint in the Chink's store. He carries her upstairs and rubs liniment on her and fixes her up good. The pug gets into the ring and who do you think he's to mix with? If it aint Kid McCoy I'm a dutchman. Gee, but the kid's fat and wears little side whiskers but I knows him in a minute. Well the bell rings and they hop to it. The kid was laying down. I could see it in a second. Why the way he let that bad guy get away was fierce, and then in the third the bad guy slips him one and down he goes for the count. Some bird tips off the bad pug that the Chink has his Jane and he beats it down there to clean him up. But the Chink's out getting some chop suey or something so the pug smokes up the joint, grabs the little Jane and runs her home. Then he takes his wimp and just moulders her dead. The Chink gets tipped off and he grabs his gat and goes to the pug's house. The pug reaches for an ax but the Chink starts his gat working and he sure pumped some lead into that pug. Then he takes the little Jane back to his joint, lights the candles and falls on a sticker. I blames Kid McCoy for it all. If he had a-been in any kind of shape he could have cleaned that guy easy. E. C. M."

Wild excitement in the office! Everybody was talking at once.

"What's the matter?" I asked of the beautiful blonde who sits directly at my left when I sit facing west, back of me when I sit facing north.

She said:

"A man just called up and he said he was a friend of Joseph Santley's and Joseph Santley said that Richard Barthelmess was in a Chicago hospital taking a cure for overwork under the name of ——."

"My goodness!" says I. "By all means get the hospital and see if this great man is really on tap."

Whereat the beautiful blonde, with fire in her eye, registering zeal in every movement, had the hospital on the wire and not only found that —— was on tap, but she got him on the wire.

"Hello," said the beautiful blonde in mellow tones. "Is this Mr. Barthelmess?"

Said a weak, horrified voice at the other end, "Who wants to know?"

Said the beautiful blonde to me, sotto voce, "I think he's fainting!" Aloud: "Why, this is THE TRIBUNE calling and we were told that you were Mr. Barthelmess and were recuperating here under an assumed name. A rose by any other name is just as sweet." said the beautiful blonde—only she didn't say it. (We never get fresh over our phone.)

"O," said the voice at the other end. "He's getting weaker every minute," said she at this end. And then he burst into fervent speech.

He was not Mr. Barthelmess, but he might just as well be Mr. Barthelmess, because he was always being taken for Mr. Barthelmess. He was only unlike Mr. Barthelmess in the following particulars: He was sick and Mr. Barthelmess was well. He was 30 and Mr. Barthelmess was 24. And he didn't draw the salary of Mr. Barthelmess. Also, he was in Chicago whereas, Mr. Barthelmess was in Florida.

"You know quite a good deal about Mr. Barthelmess, don't you?" said the beautiful blonde in Pinkerton-like tones. Whereat, the voice at the other end, growing stronger every moment, said heaven knew he had reason to know about Mr. Barthelmess, having Mr. Barthelmess thrown at his head every minute of every hour of every day of every year of his life!

Then, he said: "If you can't take my word, come out and look at me."

Well, the beautiful blonde said that something about his voice made her feel sure it was Richard Barthelmess. She said she adored Richard Barthelmess, and would love to see for herself whether or not it was really Richard Barthelmess. So, I said:

"You might drop off there on your way home and see if you want to."

She wanted to. She did. It wasn't.

Frank Keenan prophesies that there is soon to be a revival of the costume play on the screen.

Her enthusiastic press agent informs me that Texas Guinan is becoming known as the "Female Bill Hart," and that she will soon be featured in a series of two reel Western photo dramas. Oh, all right!

Constance Binney has no use for seven come eleven. Three, she says, is her lucky number. Miss Binney is soon to appear in a Realart picture called "Erstwhile Susan"—a modern version of little old Cinderella.

Gloria Swanson denies that she is engaged.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

S. M.: Mary MacLane, not Mary MacLaren, played in "Men Who Have Made Love to Me." So far as I know there are not two actresses by the name of Mary MacLaren. The following is the cast of the film: Mary MacLane, herself; the callow youth, Ralph Graves; the literary man, R. Paul Harvey; the younger son, Clif Worman; the prize fighter, Alador Prince; the bank clerk, Clarence Derwent; husband of another, Fred Tiden.

L. E. S.: Mighty glad you like the column. You don't like it any better than I like your letters.

P. E. M.: Don't say "bah!" to me! I think what was written was perfectly right. However, I'm glad to hear from you even if you do say "bah!"

PROHIBITIONIST: I don't suppose the moving picture people will be any more likely to have the chance to purchase liquor than the rest of the world. You say you think that scenes that show wine being served should be barred from pictures. Can't agree with you. Pictures are supposed to conform with what really does go on in the world, and wine is served, you know—or was. I think you're dead wrong about the other things you criticize, too. One could never achieve progress with the tactics you recommend.

ALICE R.: Thank you, for telling me where the "molicepan" poem was first printed. Just a minute, while I tell my readers. It appeared in "Bambi," by Marjorie Benton Cooke. Could you, by any chance, know where this following brilliant joke originated?

"What's your father?"

"My father's a mince pie."

"Your father's a mince pie?"

"Yes, my father's a mince pie."

"A mince pie?"

"Uh-huh! My father's a spy in the mint." (Ouch!)

RUTH AND VIRGINIA: All right, my dears, in due course of time the picture you request shall appear in roto, said their godmother kindly.

FOOLISH FACE: You are right! Your question makes me think of a question and answer that I saw in a children's "why" book once.

Question: Why do we have eyebrows?

Answer: To keep the perspiration out of our eyes!

Only I haven't any answer at all to your query. It was one too many for me.

They Laugh at this in Vaudeville

RIALTO.

Cooper and Valle:

"I cannot wait any longer. I must take a kiss from you."

"But I say you sha'n't."

"But, my dear, it's necessary."

"I've never been kissed before, and I wouldn't want any one to think I've been kissed."

"But I won't tell a living soul."

"Well, if that's the case, I suppose I will have to."

(They both kiss, a long and lasting one.)

"Um, that was good!"

"Of course it was."

"And do the poor indulge in that way?"

"Quite frequently, my little dear, quite frequently."

"Well, well, well; and do they experience the same sensation as we do?"

"Absolutely."

"Well, let me tell you it's much too good for the working classes."

"When I was shipwrecked in Africa, why, I noticed that even the wild people there made love like we do."

"You don't say!"

"Yes, ma'am!"

"You must have experienced a great deal when you were shipwrecked."

"Of course. One day while I was roaming around the destitute land I came across a tribe of wild women who had no tongues."

"Good gracious! They had no tongues?"

"That's just what I said. Not one of them had a tongue."

"Then how did they talk?"

"They couldn't. That's what made them wild. Women, women, the world over, if one is dumb the other's dumber."

"Don't say that about women. A French scientist claims that women are the most contented creatures living."

"Is that French scientist a married man?"

"No."

"That's just what I thought, or he wouldn't be talking like that."

"But isn't it trust that the poorer a man gets the closer a woman clings?"

"Yes; and the closer a woman clings the poorer a man gets."

McVICKERS.

Reddington and Grant:

"I suppose you hope to become famous some day?"

"Famous?"

"Yes, wouldn't you like to get your face on a $20 bill?"

"No, but I'd like to get my hands on a $20 bill."

"You seem to have nothing but money on your mind."

"That's the trouble. It's all in my mind, but you can only spend it when you have it in your pockets."

"Do you believe that money promotes happiness?"

"You bet your life I do."

"To prove to you that you are mistaken I'll cite a little example. For instance, see how happy a goat is and he has no money."

"Did you ever sleep with a goat?"

"Certainly not."

"Then don't say a goat has no money."

"What do you mean?"

"If you ever was near one you must know that a goat always has a scent."

"I guess I'll have to take your word for it."

"But when it comes to real contentment, give me the wild animals that you find in a circus."

"What makes you think that the wild animals in a circus are contented?"

"Because only a few weeks ago when I attended the circus, I stood for a long while in front of a cage marked 'happy family,' and inside the cage were a tiger, a lion, and a lamb. It seemed to be such an unusual combination that I asked the attendant whether they had been together in the cage very long. He said, 'They've lived together this way for the last fifteen years.' I said, 'Do you mean to say that the lion, the tiger and the lamb never have any fights together?' He said, 'Well, the lion and the tiger get along perfectly, but the lamb has to be renewed occasionally.'"

It's Alive With Power

POWER — that's what makes an automobile step out and discount the miles and the hills, taking you there and back on your scheduled time—or ahead of it.

It is power that gets you quickly out of traffic jams, and makes impassable roads passable.

And yet your car's abundance of power must be flexible, as it is in the newest Winton Six, so that you may get away quickly, so that you may roll along at 50 or more without noticeable engine effort, so that you may do the steeps on high and never doubt her gameness in "hanging on."

Wonderful car, this newest Winton Six—the car that has everything from beauty to bulldog tenacity. May we show you? Simply telephone.

How France has Contributed to Today's Dinner of France, whose pioneering work created the science of food canning, and made the American householder his everlasting debtor.

NOT all the worthwhile history gets between the covers of a school-book. Its pages may resound with the din of mighty battles, but how many Americans realize that European military necessities of more than a hundred years ago were responsible indirectly for the establishment of a colossal American industry whose varied output is found today on millions of American tables?

The origin of this industry dates back to the year 1795, when the French Government to avoid the enormous losses caused by spoilage of army and navy food supplies, offered a reward of 12,000 francs for an improved method of preserving foods for sea service.

Among the contestants for the prize (a fortune for those times) was one Nicholas Appert, an expert confectioner and chef, of Chalons-sur-Marne—the same Marne where more than a century later, thousands of Appert's fellow countrymen were to hold the advancing lines and save the situation for the Allies. M. Appert conducted a number of experiments which for the most part, resulted indifferently. Nothing daunted, and with the wars of the great Napoleon constantly emphasizing the need for success, he kept at it, with the rare pluck and perseverance peculiar to his race.

At length our Frenchman hit on the device which, with modifications, is in use to this very day—that of heating the product and then hermetically sealing the container. Under modern methods however, canned food is sterilized after it is hermetically sealed in the container.

Right here was born the mighty industry whose highest development has been made possible by American inventive genius.

Nicholas Appert, after laboring strenuously for fifteen years, reaped the reward of his toil in 1810. He claimed the 12,000 francs, and incidentally, made the world everlastingly his debtor.

Appert's discovery stands as a fitting monument to unflagging industry and exhaustless patience.

The work done since his time has been mostly in the nature of improving the "mechanics" of the canning art. Seven-league strides have been taken in this direction, but to Appert belongs the honor of establishing the basic principles for all time and making possible an American industry which at the call of the Great War could produce, as one item in its program, three billion cans of food for the A. E. F. alone.

APPERT'S discovery was at once recognized as the solution of the problem, and was put into commercial use in America as early as 1819—or exactly one hundred years ago.

In that year Ezra Daggett and Thomas Kensett, using the method discovered by Appert, packed salmon, lobsters and oysters, in New York.

Boston quickly followed suit—William Underwood and Charles Mitchell packing damsons, quinces, cranberries and currants there in 1820.

Baltimore, the center of the oyster canning industry in this country, built its first cannery in 1840—the year that witnessed the death of the father of the canning industry.

The next year saw the beginning of the sardine industry in this country, in Eastport, Maine.

The first canning factory on the Pacific Coast was started in 1856.

The first canning factory in the Central States began in 1860—on the eve of the Civil War.

LITTLE progress however was made in canning in the United States prior to the Sixties. In the first place, cities were small. Fruit and vegetables could be grown near them and delivered fresh by wagon. The present-day demand for out-of-season foods and foreign foods, did not exist. In short, the conditions which today make canned foods a practical necessity, were conspicuous by their absence.

Just as the wars of Napoleon gave stimulus to the establishment of the industry, so our own Civil War stimulated its development in this country.

Soldiers in the detention camps and hospitals, being supplied with foods packed in cans, were quick to appreciate their convenience and excellence, and were later instrumental in spreading the good news broadcast throughout the country.

The large development of the industry dates from this period. Not until several years later, however, were formulated the principles which form the basis of scientific canning, as we know it today.

Nicholas Appert, successful though he was, could not himself tell why foods kept when treated according to that method. He ascribed it, as we shall see, to the exclusion of outside air, after applying sufficient heat to the food.

In his work entitled "The Art of Preserving Animal and Vegetable Substances," he wrote: "All trials I have made convince me that the absolute privation of the contact of external air (the internal air being rendered of no effect by the action of hot water), and the application of heat by means of the water-bath, are both indispensable to the complete preservation of alimentary substances."

Subsequently the French Government appointed Guy Lussac, the foremost chemist of his time, to investigate this phenomenon. Lussac confirmed Appert's theory that the exclusion of air from the container prevents the spoiling of foods contained.

This explanation prevailed until another eminent Frenchman Louis Pasteur, discovered most of the fundamental principles involved in the science of bacteriology.

The first application of the new science to canning in this country was made in 1895 by H. L. Russell, of the University of Wisconsin.

In 1896 Professors Prescott and Underwood of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, supplemented this application with other notable experiments.

IT is interesting to note that the Boston firm which marketed canned fruits in 1820, is now in its 100th year and is still hale and hearty, the dean of canning establishments in these United States.

Similarly, the business established by Nicholas Appert, and continued by his descendants, is the oldest in Europe.

If M. Appert were to visit a modern American canning factory, it is safe to assume that his amazement at the progress achieved since he strove for the imperial prize of 12,000 francs, would know no bounds. He would marvel at the thousands upon thousands of plants engaged in this gigantic business of food production and preservation! The immense variety of foods made available by his method for the every-day table! The widely separated regions drawn upon for food! The marvelously intricate machinery employed in almost every factory! He would thank his lucky stars that to him belonged the signal honor of having benefited mankind so enormously.

National Canners Association

A nation-wide organization formed in 1907, consisting of producers of all varieties of hermetically sealed canned foods which have been sterilized by heat. It neither produces, buys, nor sells. Its purpose is to assure, for the mutual benefit of the industry and the public, the best canned food that scientific knowledge and human skill can produce.

ART

American Oils Still Hold Interest at Art Institute

By Eleanor Jewett

The dawn is breaking and a chill wind blows
Out of the east.
Be gone—you fairy fancies born of night—
Pan triumphs with his joy and love of laughter.
Day comes! And he, the herald of the day,
Drives you before him
Lightly float your tresses on the wind
That flows like new wine down the valley's bowl.
Shuffling the shadows and the violet shades
Of the past dark.
On the east rim of the world there heaves
A rush of color.
A turmoil quivering with light.
Gold flashes into crimson.
And the day
Is come.
But in the valley below Pan dances with the dryads,
Silver-limbed and scarlet-haired, in the dusk of the forest.

ONE of the most vividly alive pictures in the exhibition of American oil paintings at the Art institute is "Dawn," by Arthur P. Spear. In rather rough verse the motif of the painting is conveyed to one in the opening lines of this discussion. The sun is, more or less, tumbling up over a horizon filled with a turmoil of clouds that billow and bend as though the wind, which blows cold over the trees on the hills below, were modeling them with chill fingers into such shapes as one finds more often in a twilight sky. Below, sport nymphs, with Pan in close pursuit, dancing their way to safety from the seeking, trailing radiance of the sun.

As I remember, last week I broke off my story of this exhibit with mention of the "Jade Bowl" by Indiana Giberson. To continues it: "Themont Street, Boston," by Arthur C. Goodwin, is a realistic, slushy winter street scene, such as soon, with the arrival of the promised snow, the streets of Chicago will probably rival. Yet, in spite of dismal reflections on the aftermath of even our most beautiful snow storms, one cannot give anything less than pleased approval to this picture. It is good.

"The Ghetto," by J. Jeffrey Grant, is a colorful canvas, embodying a conglomeration of things, such as geese, people, oranges, vegetables, fruit stands, etc., of motley coloring, making the portrayed corner of a market place a veritable feast for the eye.

"Across the Canal," by Johanna K. W. Hailman, is charming. In "Winter Moonrise," by Birge Harrison, there is found a wealth of feathery snow and a loveliness as delicate as the slim fingers of Jack Frost can paint by night on the warm glass of a window.

The setting, the color and the conception in "Motherhood Triumphant," by Charles W. Hawthorne, are delightful. The child is exquisite. But there is a lack felt in the drawing of the mother figure. There is something a little stiff, a little wooden, a little unresponsive in the set curve of the neck and the lines of the lower part of the face. The eyes are soft, but not brooding. There is nothing of pride, courage, trial, pain or triumph in this brown haired girl who poses so graciously. The triumph which, by right of title, belongs to her is securely clasped in the chubby hold of the exultant youngster on her lap. Perhaps the triumph of motherhood is centered in the child, and the artist wishes to convey that meaning by subtle, roundabout ways, but too much complexity is nearly always fatal, and it would be fatal here were it not for the innate beauty of the canvas which prevents too close a consideration of even self-evident faults.

One of the most excellent pictures in the entire exhibit, excellent down to the minutest detail, is seen in "The Cotton Gin," by Harry L. Hoffman.

Wilson Irvine shows an attractive moment in "Early April" and Benjamin D. Kopman has a delicate fancy in "The Hunters."

"Forest Silence" and "Spring Morning" by Carl R. Krafft are lovely.

To hurry through just a few more pictures and painters, because next week I wish to speak briefly of the sculpture in this same exhibition, there are the following paintings that should not be overlooked: "Autumn Evening," by Marian T. MacIntosh, a study in silver tones of boats at anchor; "Margaret and Her Brother," by M. Jean McLane, a picture of two little children; "November Light," by Bela Mayer, a lovely, haunting landscape; "My Father," an interesting portrait by Maurice Molarsky; "The Road House, June 30," and "Tsegi Cañon," by John W. Norton, both distinguished by a firm, blunt method of painting; "December Morning"—a truly beautiful picture—by Leonard Ochtman. And I think, because the list threatens to run over bounds, that I shall reserve the last group which I care for until next week.

In gallery 46 of the institute there has been arranged a number of Japanese color prints from the Clarence Buckingham collection. They represent the skill of three men—Okumura Masonobu, Torii Kiyomasu, and Nishimura Shigenaga.

For the most part the prints express those sentiments artistically so close, as far as most print evidence goes, to the Japanese heart—of hushed intrigue, fearful horror, placid contempt, intuitive disdain, solemn pleasure, and secretive devotion. Nor does representation of everyday occupations fail us. One finds a scornful hairdresser arranging the sleek black locks of a contemptuous customer, who regards himself in the glass meanwhile with an air of utter boredom, side by side to a musical group and across the room from a calm couple engaged upon a game where the dice and men employed are no more indifferent to the outcome than the players.

This sense of the futility of most mundane things plays over all the prints. It is almost discouraging to the average occidental mind. But I suppose it reveals, if one were clever enough to understand the revelation, why it is so passingly difficult to get a Japanese or Chinese man, woman, or child enthused or excitedly interested in anything—even our national sport of baseball. They are, so I have heard, excited by various gambling games, but their feeling is so well concealed behind a smooth, impervious screen of absolute inexpression that one wonders why they should be caused to suffer the sentiment at all.

Arrangements have been completed to hold a nation-wide exhibit of toys at the Art institute, commencing Dec. 4. It is to be under the auspices of the institute and the Art alliance. The aim of the exhibit is to stimulate interest in the art of designing beautiful and adequate toys, American toys; to bring the buyer and manufacturer into touch with the maker, and to raise the standard of toys. Lectures and entertainments for children have been planned. The details may be learned from Mrs. Herbert Hyde, Fine Arts building, and Miss Lavaron, secretary of the Art alliance, at the Art institute.

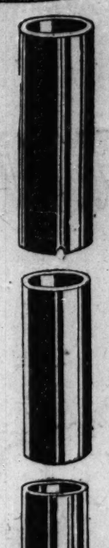
WHY

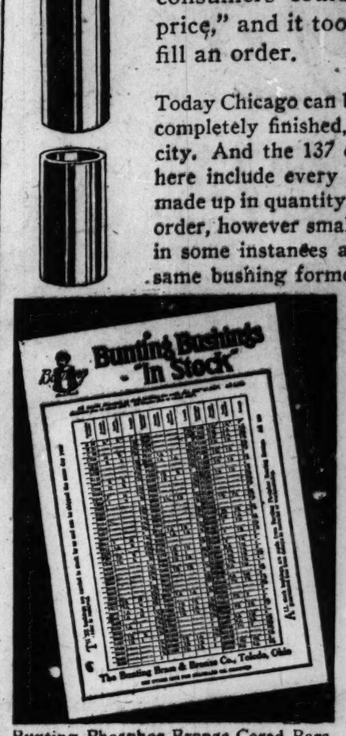
Bunting Bushings

ARE CARRIED "IN STOCK"



BEFORE Bunting selected 137 of the bushings most commonly in use, every order for bushings was specially made. Some manufacturers made their own from cored bars of metal—only the great consumers could buy enough to get a "quantity price," and it took from six weeks to six months to fill an order.

Today Chicago can buy Bunting Phosphor Bronze Bushings, completely finished, out of stock carried right here in the city. And the 137 different sizes of bushings in our stock here include every commonly used dimension. These are made up in quantity at correspondingly low cost, and on any order, however small, this low quantity price obtains. It is in some instances as much as 50 per cent lower than the same bushing formerly cost.



Bunting Phosphor Bronze Cored Bars, in all sizes, also carried here.

Machine builders, manufacturers, auto repair men, and all kindred trades in Chicago can now get this world-famous bushing at once at a low price by merely stepping to a telephone.

A New Kind of Atlas

Loose Lea — Always Up to Date

OUR former atlases have gone hopelessly out of date. They do not show the results of the greatest war in history—the vast changes that have swept over the face of three continents, redistributing millions of square miles of territory—establishing new nations—drawing new boundary lines—revolutionizing the destinies of people.

Now a wonderful new kind of atlas is ready for you—an atlas that keeps pace with the world! Fresh from the press comes the NEW WORLD Loose-Leaf ATLAS, a superb new collection of maps that is up to date now and that can be kept up to date in the future. It is Loose Leaf, and it is provided with continuous Map Service that supplies new revised maps whenever changes occur anywhere.

Here is the atlas you have been waiting for—here are three hundred and fifty pages of finely engraved, large-scale, full-color maps and indexes that show the whole new world of today with all the recent changes in every country. This great new work constitutes a source of timely geographical knowledge—a wealth of authoritative information.

Each day, as you read your newspaper, as you talk with well informed people about national and international affairs, as you follow the course of commerce at home and abroad, you will appreciate the value of the NEW WORLD Loose-Leaf ATLAS. You will turn to it, just as you turn to your dictionary and encyclopedia, to obtain exact information and to increase and broaden your store of knowledge.

Map Service Free for Two Years

The NEW WORLD Loose-Leaf ATLAS will be kept up to date for two years without charge. Twice each year new maps will be issued to cover all changes that have occurred in every part of the world. These revised maps are simply inserted in the Loose-Leaf Binder in place of the old maps. This new kind of atlas need never go out of date. It is the only atlas that keeps pace with the world.

The NEW·WORLD Loose Leaf ATLAS

The New Atlas You Need Now—The Last Atlas You Need Ever Buy

You need no longer be without an up-to-date atlas, and you need not wait until additional settlements have been made in the map, for this new kind of atlas keeps pace with the world—shows changes in the map whenever and wherever they occur.

If the world never changed no atlas would ever grow out of date. But with the rapid march of current events new atlases soon must become obsolete. Even the NEW WORLD ATLAS would soon be far behind the times if no provision were made for keeping always up to date. That is why we made it

Loose Leaf—To Insure Permanence

The NEW WORLD Loose-Leaf ATLAS represents a distinct advance in the science of atlas production. Never before has an atlas been made that could be kept up to date—permanently abreast of developments, of changes political and economic, of advances in commerce, of new discoveries and explorations.

World to Undergo Many Changes

Even now, after all the changes that have taken place in every part of the globe, an atlas cannot be kept up to date unless provision is made for future changes.

Plebiscites are apt to wipe out many boundary lines. Self-determination may bring about drastic changes. Perhaps even an entire continent may be divorced from its present rule. Who can foretell all that will take place the next year or so?

Map Service Free for Two Years

For every change that is made, a new map will be furnished, and for two years we will furnish these maps without charge.

Twice yearly, as the publishers have made new maps to conform to new conditions, they will be sent to those who own the NEW WORLD Loose-Leaf ATLAS. All that is necessary to bring the atlas up to date is to put the new maps in the binder.

After the first two years NEW WORLD Loose-Leaf ATLAS owners can purchase this always up-to-date map service for a nominal sum, thus insuring permanence to their atlas.

ASTRONOMY

VENUS.

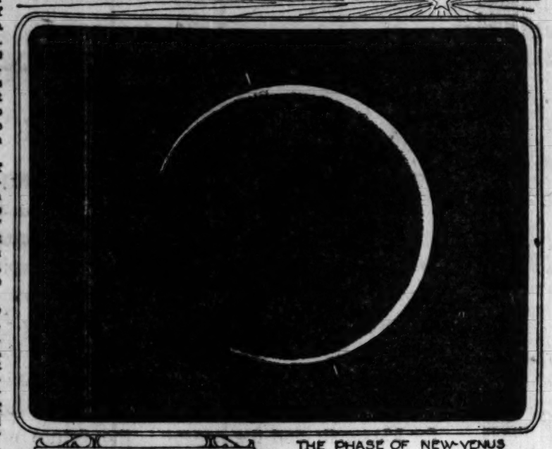
If you happen to look out toward the east in the very early hours of the morning before it is light, a brilliant white star will greet you. It resembles no ordinary star. There is no twinkle in its luster. It so outshines every other light in the heavens that you know at the first glance that it must be something unusual. And so it is. It is our neighbor in space, the planet Venus, at present near the earth and at its brightest.

If you are so inclined, take a sheet of coarse printing, like a full page advertisement, and hold it where Venus can shine upon it. You will be surprised to see how much you can read by Venus' light. Venus casts a very distinct shadow, too, like a pale moon. When no cloud or mist passes across the sky, Venus throws a halo exactly as the moon does.

Venus is the earth's twin. The planets were created in pairs, it seems. Jupiter and Saturn are twin giants. Uranus and Neptune are much alike, and the earth and Venus are almost exact counterparts of each other. Human beings could live on Venus if they could ever cross the bleak expanses of space that lie between. We would find in that globe a world much like our own. Venus is 300 miles smaller in diameter than the earth, and objects on its surface weigh about one-sixteenth less than they do here. Venus has more air than the earth has, and the clouds there are much more extensive than here. We should find the climate on Venus very moist and temperate, with no trace of winter and summer extremes at all. Jupiter and Saturn are always boiling and seething, as we look down on them through a telescope, but Venus appears wonderfully calm and untroubled.

The great whiteness of Venus' light is due to the sunlight reflected from the tops of the cloud banks which completely cover the ball. We should like to know more about Venus, but the veil of clouds makes study very difficult.

Venus lies nearer the sun than the earth, and consequently we can see only a part of its surface at one time. This gives the planet phases like the moon, but, unlike our satellite, they occur in the reverse order. It is old Venus when the planet is seen in the evening sky, and new Venus when in the morning. The crescent could easily be distinguished with the naked eye if it were not so blindingly bright.



THE PHASE OF NEW-VENUS THE ELONGATED HORNS OF THE CRESCENT ARE DUE TO THE VENUSIAN ATMOSPHERE

~ VENUS ~

DRAWN BY S.P. MARTIN

THE SIZE OF VENUS AND THE EARTH

The earth bears the same relation to Venus that Mars bears to us. As seen from Venus, the earth would be a marvelous spectacle. It would look like a double planet. Our companion would of course be the moon. The earth would be nearly eight times as bright as Venus at its brightest, and of a bluish luster, like Jupiter, while the moon would be brighter than Sirius, and yellow-white in color. Venus has no moon of its own, but at favorable intervals the earth would light up the whole face of the planet as much as the moon does the land of the earth.

Slams of Life

ALL ABOUT CARVING.

I do not like to carve a goose,
It seems to lope around so loose;
It will not stay upon the plate
And bide its gastronomic fate,
It will not calmly wait its doom—
I have to chase it 'round the room.

With knife and fork and steel in hand
I chase the bird to beat the band,
And all the gay assembled guests
Exude such coarse and uncouth jests
Ask "Why don't you hit it with a rock?"
Or "Why not try a hammerlock?"

And, hully gee! I have no luck
When operating on a duck;
My keen, inquisitorial blade
With cursed ease the ducks evade,
And oftentimes it comes to pass
I wish 'twas form to give 'em gas.

Occasionally one I snare,
And duck goes flying everywhere,
And like a benediction rests
The dressing on the startled guests,
And like a gentle dew it falls
From off the ceiling and the walls.

At taking down a turk, as well,
I'm, as you might say, S. O. L.;
I cannot wreck a roasted hen
As do those well trained married men
Who parcel out the neat debris
Among the guests successfullee.

In short I cannot carve for shucks
Geese, turkeys, chickens, roasts, or ducks;
I cannot wield a nifty knife,
And O the difference to my wife!
"Floyd Stricbel carves!" she loves to cry—
Some day I'm going to choke that guy!

SWEET MILK CHOCOLATE
Brach's
WITH ROASTED ALMONDS
NET WEIGHT 1½ OZ.

75,000 Chicago Kiddies Learned in One Week to ask for the "Perfect ALMOND BAR"

GROWN-UPS do not take candy as seriously as children, who linger lovingly over every morsel of sweets. Their appreciation is keener, their taste more exacting.

Last week 75,000 kiddies in and around Chicago asked candy merchants for Brach's Milk Chocolate Almond Bars.

Grown-ups can afford to give thought to this. It will mean greater enjoyment the next time they fancy a tidbit.

In Brach's there is a finer quality. This sheer perfection has three excellent reasons.

The smoothness of it comes from the four-fold grinding of the rarest of cacao beans.

Its deliciousness results from a blend of this chocolate. Months of earnest experimenting developed this blend.

And its mellowness is secured by whipping this deliciously blended chocolate for fourteen days and nights with rich milk.

These three elements of perfection evidently are easily perceived. In one week 75,000 children discovered and appreciated them.

You, too, will find Brach's Milk Chocolate Almond Bar unusually pleasing. You will find it wherever candies are sold, in the beautiful CANTERBURY BOX.

Good Roads Mean Big Sum Saved on Tire Expense

Improvement Works Both Ways, Says A. A. A. Official.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 29.—"Twenty-eight million tires are now yearly necessary to equip the passenger automobiles and motor trucks in use in the United States. To this should be added not less than 12,000,000 more tires, for many vehicles accumulate mileage to such an extent that a second set of shoes is necessary, to say nothing of the thousands of inner tubes.

"Forty million tires and their inner tubes at an average cost of $25 gives a total tire bill of $1,000,000,000—a fairly tidy annual expenditure for road travel and transportation. Hence it is high time to pay a little more attention to the effect of the various road surfaces on the motor vehicle instead of considering only the damage by the motor vehicle to the road," said M. O. Eldridge, director of roads of the American Automobile association. "You can scarcely pick up a paper without seeing in it something about how and why the fast moving passenger car and the loaded motor truck damage the road, and, as you read on you note how the writer proposes to design a highway to withstand these effects, and how speed and weights should be limited, and how the cost burden should be distributed.

"Few of those who discuss transportation questions give thought to the fact that our 7,000,000 motor cars which require annually 28,000,000 tires, exclusive of renewals, create a problem—namely, how fast will these tires wear out on each type of road surface? Compare, for instance, the smooth resilience of Fifth avenue with the rough, gritty, and flinty surfaces so often encountered on country roads, and try to imagine what a tidy sum in tire bills would be saved if we could all travel on avenue surfaces. The saving in tire costs alone would pay the difference in construction cost in many instances."

Road Work Funds.

An important report, which possesses peculiar interest for all motorists, regarding good road progress during the present year, has just been made by the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture. It shows that for 1919 the expenditures for hard surfaced highways establishes a new record, in so far as the department's road program is concerned, the total amount being $138,000,000. The indications are that the following year will exceed this record by a large margin, as the available funds for road expenditure by the bureau for 1920 amount to $633,000,000.

Numerous Bills.

More than two score of bills already introduced in the special session of the Sixty-sixth congress make evident the positive demand that is developing all over the United States for nationalized highways and more complete control of federal expenditures on roads by the government. Though the extra session is yet young, some forty bills having highways as their major theme have been dropped in the legislative hopper, while more than a score of others which deal with the road situation to a greater or lesser degree are now on file.

The Experts Say---

ABENT steering knuckle should be so straightened that a line run from the tie bar hole in the end of the part and the center of the kingpin will strike the center of the rear axle. Unless this is carefully carried out, the front wheels will not be so aligned as to run properly.

The car owner who carries a spare tire—and a great many of them do it—unprotected on the car is laying up trouble for himself. Even if no more serious accident happens, dust collects on the inside of the spare casing and is turned to mud by the first shower. Then when the casing is called into service the inner tube will be rubbed against this hard deposit of mud, with chafing and a speedy blow as the result. Cases for the spare tire cost little, and they should always be used to protect and preserve the spare tire for its day of service.

Silent chains that are now so much used for camshaft and electrical unit drive should be treated exactly as if they were sets of bearings. Each joining stud and rivet of the chain should be regarded as a bearing is, and must above all be given systematic and careful lubrication. Chains that run in the open need oil treatment once a day. The oil should be put on the inside, as this is the part that comes in direct contact with the sprockets. An oil brush is the most convenient method of distributing the oil along the surface of the chain.

Trouble is often experienced with overlubrication of the front cylinder of the Ford car, the oil forcing its way past the piston rings and causing excessive carbon. This is caused by the connecting rod of the front cylinder dipping too deeply into the oil. A cure is suggested as follows: Level up the crankcase by raising and blocking up the front end of the motor. This is accomplished by placing a pad under the crankcase front frame bearing. If there is a decided pitch to the crankcase, it may be necessary to use a block that will require longer spring clips. The alignment of the motor will not be affected.

One of the things necessary to keep up the appearance of the motor car is a constant touching up of such parts as lamps, windshield frame, etc., where black enamel is used. Scratches and slight chipping off of the enamel on these is bound to come, and is very unsightly. Enamel paints may now be secured that do their work with one application with a brush and with no rubbing.

Chicago Has This.

Owing to the element of risk connected with the location of garages near school buildings, Portland, Ore., has passed an ordinance prohibiting the erecting of public garages within 200 feet of a school. The danger and the noise in conjunction with the operation of cars in and out of garages is the cause. Private garages are not affected by the ordinance unless adjoining property owners file objections.

Republic Changes Hands.

F. W. Ruggles, president of the Republic Motor Truck Company, Inc., Alma, Mich., announces that he has, in conjunction with John N. Willys and W. J. Baxter of New York City, acquired control of the Republic concern and the Torbansen Axle company of Cleveland, O. The Willys-Overland company of Toledo, O., is in no way connected with the transaction.

Voice of the Motorist

Approves Steam Device.

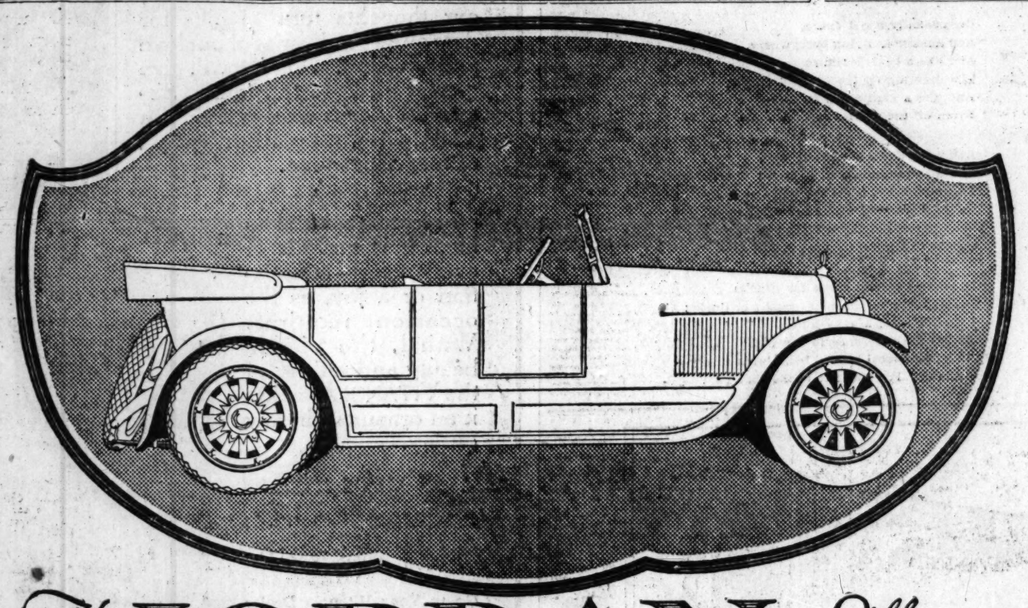
High Speed:

I have read with interest your reply to the motorist who asks if steam or water will eliminate carbon. I have been using a device that injects steam into my carburetor with good results. After running the car with this device for about 5,000 miles, I removed all spark plugs for inspection. Four were clean (without carbon) and on two, I could see that the carbon was coming off in the form of a scale. Before putting on the outfit I had run the car 10,000 miles. To date; I have run 17,000 miles without having any valves ground or spark plugs replaced. This is on a H 46 Buick. Last year we had an E 46, but after 12,500 I had to have the valves ground and carbon removed.

The owners of this carbon remover claimed it would save gas, but on my record I see no cause to warrant this claim, but I have noticed that as soon as my water reservoir runs dry that the motor takes on a stiffer "feeling" more sluggish than when the steam is working properly.

I'm not giving you this information or making these statements to advertise any device, nor do I want you to publish this unless you want to answer it in your columns. But between you and I, I know that there is some good in a steam contraption regardless of the government's claim there is not.

I have been driving five different cars for the last four years and average about 500 miles a week steady, year in and year out. K. R. Y.



The JORDAN Silhouette Five

EASE of handling is comparative. The ocean liner is easy to handle in the open ocean with leagues of water in which to maneuver. But the Silhouette Five is like the swift white launch darting in and out among the harbor shipping.

It is instantly responsive to the gentlest pressure. The Jordan arrangement of the steering apparatus is a marvel of precise control. The perfect balance of the car, the careful distribution of weight, the length and strength of springs and the delicate suspension all contribute to unerring forward motion, with no side-sway. In its application of power, the Jordan Silhouette is supreme. Acceleration is not a leap but a swift, plane-like glide. There is no jerking or struggling—the road simply flows past.

Women appreciate the ease and restfulness of driving the Silhouette Five as they appreciate its fashionable lines, its harmonious coloring and its perfect appointments.

They welcome a distinctly fine light car—a five passenger car in which quality has been made the compelling ideal.

Maxwell is but another name for Quality

THE goodness, the efficiency, the quality in previous Maxwells created a demand for the current Maxwell which 100,000 cars (the number now being built) cannot satisfy.

This shows a rare liking for Maxwell; and the appreciation that every dollar devoted to its manufacture has been wisely expended.

Think what the making of 100,000 axles means, the making of 100,000 frames, 100,000 engines, 100,000 clutches, and 100,000 transmissions.

Think of the great saving that comes with the purchase of so many materials.

Consider the accuracy that follows as one after another of 100,000 axles is constructed.

Maxwell — More miles per gallon — More miles on tires

Consider the vast use of capital it requires to turn them out—300 a day.

Estimate the confidence the Maxwell executives had in the Post-War model to rest the future of the Maxwell name on a year's production like 100,000.

They knew; 300,000 previous Maxwells had told them; the public was their judge.

You can look for high engine efficiency, or merely comfort, or long mileage on gas and tires, or improvements the war developed, or style, or value—you'll find it in the Post-War Maxwell.

Reasons Why Bright, Ambitious Girls Should Become Comptometer Operators

FIRST—SHORT COURSE OF PREPARATION

Six weeks' training will make you a Comptometer operator—much less time than stenography or bookkeeping.

SECOND—PLEASANT, AGREEABLE WORK

There is none of the drudgery of mental figuring. The work is interesting. You are placed among high class business associates and in offices convenient to your homes.

THIRD—SALARY ABOVE THE AVERAGE FROM THE START

A good Comptometer operator can do more figure work on Bookkeeping, Billing, Payroll and Cost Work than two or three people working mentally, thereby conserving man power and eliminating costly errors due to mental fatigue—that's why the trained Comptometer is worth more.

FOURTH—BIG DEMAND FOR COMPTOMETER OPERATORS

Our customers are calling on us for over 60 operators per week—some of these we are unable to fill. Increasing sales of the Comptometer assure every girl a position who completes the course and receives a diploma.

Students who enter our schools before December 1st will be graduated in time to take advantage of the extraordinary demands for Comptometer operators during January.

MOTORDOM

War Brought Out Radical Changes in Auto Designs

Transmission and Gearset, However, Still Need Improvement.

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE war has brought us a number of improvements in the mechanism of the car. That is to say, under the stern lash of military needs, many weaknesses were discovered and remedied, which, in the ordinary course of events, would have taken years to bring about. Not all these innovations have yet actually made their appearance, but the coming national shows will undoubtedly place most of them on public view.

Whatever else the war may bring us, it is devoutly to be hoped that some improvement in present types of transmissions or gearsets may result. Engineers are unanimously agreed that the gearset is by far the most backward of all the mechanical units that go to make up the modern motor car chassis. And we may reasonably hope that some improvement in transmission design is imminent, so that it will be of interest to examine the present types of this mechanical unit in detail.

The function of the transmission or gearset is to change the tractive effort at the rear wheels in proportion to the effort needed. By its means the rear wheels are permitted to run slowly while the engine is running fast, etc. In general this control over the tractive effort is obtained by meshing gears of various sizes. In operation power is generated by the engine, passes back through the clutch, which delivers it to a shaft, which is part of the transmission unit. On this shaft are a certain number of gears which may be shifted into and out of engagement with other gears, mounted on another shaft, known technically as a countershaft. These gears on the countershaft have varying numbers of teeth, a condition which produces the changes in tractive effort.

The mechanical unit that we have just described is known as the sliding selective gearset and while it serves its purpose fairly well it uses a tremendous expenditure of effort to accomplish what is comparatively a small effect. We need a device which shall perform this service in a simpler and easier way, without the constant danger of breakage and injury that exists with the present type.

While the sliding selective gearset is the prominent type today, there are other forms in use. The next most important is the planetary gearset, which is used in the Ford car, which in point of mere numbers, makes the type important. The planetary gearset consists of a group of spur gears, always in mesh with a central or master gear. This master gear is known as the sun gear and the spur gears as planetary gears, from a resemblance of the set to the operations of the solar system.

In operation the gears are forced to revolve on each other, this action being induced by stopping the movement of the parts supporting the gears, which is accomplished by means of a sort of brake. When the gearset is in high it revolves as a unit, giving a remarkably efficient action. One of the drawbacks to the planetary gearset is the fact that it can only be constructed for two speeds, as the adding of other speeds adds so much complication that engineers are loath to employ the type. The Ford car, it is scarcely necessary to remind the reader, has but two forward speeds. Still when it is well constructed the planetary gearset serves its end with a reasonable degree of efficiency.

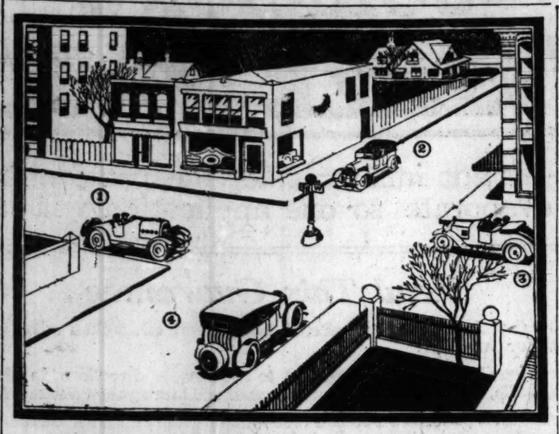
In the truck field we find a third type of gearset, known as the constant mesh type. This variety of transmission has not come into the passenger car field as yet and so is of no interest to us for the present consideration.

It is rather a remarkable fact that the simplest and theoretically the most efficient type of gearset, the friction set, has passed out of use in the automobile field. The friction gearset consists of two disks—one driving, the other driven. In operation the driven disk is brought into contact with the driving disk, the rate of speed being determined by its distance from the center of the driving member.

Obviously this arrangement gave an almost unlimited number of speeds, smoothness of action, but the great trouble was that the sets did not stand up under the strain of heavy work. At one time it enjoyed great popularity, but it gradually was abandoned for heavy work and finally even the light-car gave it up in favor of the sliding selective type. It is regrettable that the friction set could not stand up under the needs of service, for it had all the theoretical virtues that delight the heart of the engineer.

If the car owner will stop for just one moment and consider the essential construction of the conventional gearset he will realize the need for great care in operation and maintenance. Two shafts holding sets of gears, which must be brought into engagement while the parts are spinning at a high rate of speed, points to ever present danger of breakage or injury. And this is actually so. Breakage of members in the gearset, bending of the shafts so that they are out of alignment, are common in gearset operation. When the shafts once get out of line there is no hope of decent operation until the condition is remedied. The gears will clash and growl, the teeth will chip or suffer more serious breaks, and replacement of gears will do no earthly good until the entire transmission is properly lined up again. When the shafts are out of line the gears do not engage evenly, as they are intended to do, which is the whole secret of the trouble.

The first thing to do to keep the gearset up to proper operation pitch is to give it proper lubrication. Oil is the proper lubricant for this unit, not grease. In winter it will be well to use a somewhat thinner oil than in hot weather, as the cold tends to thicken the oil anyway. Every two or three months, or better, every thousand miles of running, the oil should be drained off from the gearset housing, which should be flushed out with kerosene and then refilled with fresh oil. Neglect of this precaution will probably bring premature failure of the unit.



NEW LAW DESIGNATES RIGHT OF WAY—The diagram illustrates the new state law which becomes effective Jan. 1, 1920. The machine on the right hand side has the right of way. No. 1 has the right of way over No. 2. No. 2 has the right of way over No. 3. No. 3 has the same over No. 4. No. 4 has the right of way over No. 1. The new regulation does not apply to boulevards. The diagram was furnished by the Chicago Motor club, which worked for the passage of the new law. The law is expected to decrease accidents.

Needed Blindfolding.

While motoring with a friend through southern Indiana, we met an old couple driving along in a ramshackle litle buggy. The horse was badly frightened and began to rear and prance. The old lady hopped out and waved her umbrella wildly at us, also screaming at the top of her voice.

My friend stopped the car and I got out and offered to blindfold the horse until the car had passed.

"That's all right," said the old man. "I kin manage the hoss. You jest blindfold mother until your car gets past her."

A Lawn Driver.

We went for an auto trip with my brother-in-law, who had purchased a new car. He was not an expert driver. After riding around several blocks we turned down a cross street and found the street ended abruptly in someone's front yard.

My brother-in-law would drive a mile rather than back up two feet. I don't know whether his car would back up. Not having room to turn, he decided to drive across the lawn to a street on the other side, which he did.

After rattling around a few more blocks we suddenly ended up in the same front yard again. The same course was taken as before. Before long things began to look familiar and we were again headed toward this same lawn.

As we took the line of least resistance a third time a voice called to us from a nearby lawn swing:

"For the love of Mike, if you can't stop that thing, keep it headed some other way until it runs down."

The Efficiency of the Chalmers

Quality First

So much favorable comment has been made on the engine of the Hot Spot Chalmers that we are inclined to feel that many overlooked the other great essentials of this magnificent car.

There's 117 inches of wheel-base in a Hot Spot Chalmers and every inch denotes high efficiency.

Radiator to rear axle, it indicates perfect design, superior material, rare skill in workmanship, and an attention to detail that lifts it far above competition in price.

Service department records prove this high efficiency in a Chalmers by figures; it averages in cost to owners less than one per cent per year of the list price of the car for repair parts.

As a matter of fact once an owner's license plate is bolted on the Hot Spot Chalmers the car seldom returns for service.

Give it gas, oil, grease, water, and fair treatment and it'll respond like the fine "creature of steel" it is.

JOHNSON'S FREEZE-PROOF

is easy to use—is non-inflammable—inexpensive and guaranteed. It does not evaporate so one application will last all winter.

Read This Guarantee

We guarantee that Johnson's Freeze-Proof has no more effect than water on the metals of the radiator or on rubber.

If Johnson's Freeze-Proof is used according to the simple directions in the proportion shown on our scale, it will absolutely protect your radiator against damage from freezing.

We do not guarantee Johnson's Freeze-Proof when used in cars with aluminum manifolds, although it has been used satisfactorily in hundreds of such cars. Water alone often has an injurious effect on aluminum.

Testimonials!!

We have handled Johnson's Freeze-Proof for the past two seasons and will continue to handle it during the 1919-20 winter.—THE AUTOMOBILE SUPPLY CO., 1335 Michigan Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
November 10th, 1919.

We have been using Johnson's Freeze-Proof for two or three years and have found it to give satisfactory results. We have purchased a supply again this year for use in our cars and feel certain now that with the use of the Freeze-Proofometer we can adjust the solution to the needs of the weather.—THE ILLINOIS SEED CO., 349-369 E. North Water St., Chicago, Ill.
November 1st, 1919.

I have used Johnson's Freeze-Proof in my Overland Six, which is a regular type Continental motor. Although this was a very severe winter, Johnson's Freeze-Proof stood the test.—H. E. GNADT, 2133 Roscoe Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
Feb. 12th, 1918.

Our General Manager is using Johnson's Freeze-Proof in his car and it seems to do the work very nicely.—CHALLENGE COMPANY, Batavia, Ill.
Jan. 15th, 1919.

I wish to tell you I am using Johnson's Freeze-Proof and selling it. I have no garage and my car stays outside—rain, shine or freeze. This morning I looked in the radiator—it was as fluid as ever. I looked at the thermometer and it was 22 below zero.—WILLIAM Y. RAKE, 1945-1951 Central St., Evanston, Ill.
Feb. 4th, 1918.

Directions Must Be Followed

Johnson's Freeze-Proof will give perfect satisfaction if used according to directions on label. It requires just a little time and care to comply with these instructions—then your worry is over for the whole winter.

1st—Clean all dirt, scale, sediment, etc., from the cooling system by using a boiling solution of ordinary washing soda. Flush out thoroughly.

2nd—Repair all leaks. Unless hose connections are new, replace them. Tighten all packing and gaskets.

$1.50 Protects a Ford

One package of Johnson's Freeze-Proof (Cost $1.50) will protect a Ford to 5° below zero, and two packages to 50° below zero. For larger radiators or to protect to a lower temperature, use additional Freeze-Proof according to the scale on the package.

Lutherans Making Campaign for Big Educational Fund

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot

WHILE many churches have been carrying on large campaigns for revived interest and the expression of it in a definite manner, the various Lutheran bodies have been raising funds for their different educational and other institutions. The total amount of money already raised, or nearly so, comes to about $4,000,000.

All this is in addition to the campaign of the United Lutheran church, which was completed by an every member canvass last week. The financial goal was the doubling of the present benevolences budget, which for three synods amounts to $2,000,000.

Among the funds recently raised was one of $500,000 for the relief of suffering among Lutherans in Poland. This amount has just been completed and forwarded to Europe for use in feeding and clothing the needy of all creeds, but especially members of the Lutheran churches in the stricken countries.

Several campaigns are now on for Lutheran colleges. Thiel college, Pennsylvania, expects to raise $250,000 for improvements and for the increase of salaries. Newberry college in South Carolina has set $300,000 as its goal for like purposes. Lenoir, in North Carolina, needs $250,000. Carthage college, in Illinois, has completed its drive for $400,000. Pacific Theological seminary, Seattle, Wash., is raising $250,000. Midland college, Freemont, Neb., obtained $350,000 in a thirty day campaign.

The Augustana synod has nearly arrived at its $500,000 fund for clergy pensions and the Norwegian synod schools at Canton, S. D., are in the midst of a campaign for $250,000.

The chief object in all the drives is summed up in the "Campaign Catechism" issued by the committee of the United Lutheran church campaign committee:

"It [the campaign] will seek, by means of the faithful preaching of the word of God and the education of the people in the ideas of stewardship, service, and sacrifice, to lead them to a fuller realization of the debt of love they owe to God and humanity; to set them to work so that by their own experience they shall know the joy of Christian service to deepen the flow of their spiritual life and widen their vision of the Christian calling in this world of sin, suffering, and need."

The Rev. Robert W. Patton.

The Rev. Dr. Robert W. Patton, national director of the nation-wide campaign of the Episcopal church, will be one of the speakers at a dinner tomorrow evening at the Hotel La Salle, which is to celebrate the arrival of the intensive period of the nation-wide campaign in the Chicago diocese. The Rt. Rev. James Wise, bishop of Kansas, and Lewis B. Franklin of New York, chairman of the financial forces of the campaign, also will speak. Charles W. Folds will be toastmaster.

Dr. Patton speaks at St. Peter's church at the morning service today and at St. Paul's church at 5 p. m. Bishop Wise is announced to speak at the morning service in St. Mark's church, Evanston, at St. Luke's church, in the afternoon, and at Grace church, Oak Park, tonight.

A pageant, "The Builders of the City of God," will be given in practically every Episcopal church throughout the country today in connection with the nation-wide campaign. It will be acted by the pupils of the church schools, and in accordance with ancient custom, will take place in the church. The campaign is "for a general awakening of the members of the Episcopal church to their full responsibilities." A budget of advance work has been prepared and adopted by the church. For the whole country it comes to $42,000,000. The share for the diocese of Chicago is $1,500,000 for a period of three years. Pledges will be taken next Sunday afternoon in an every member canvass to obtain this money and to "enlist" communicants of the Episcopal church in some part of the work.

J. Wilbur Messer, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Chicago, will address the men's meeting at 19 South La Salle street tomorrow noon on "The Message of the Y. M. C. A. to Men of Today." Dr. William Henry Larson, an evangelist of Watertown, N. Y., will speak at the Thursday meeting. Bible classes for men are held at the Central "Y" Sunday afternoons at 4:15 under the leadership of F. Wyatt Prentice.

Baptists of Chicago will meet on Thursday afternoon and evening at Immanuel church, Michigan boulevard and Twenty-sixth street, for a conference on the new world movement recently inaugurated by the board of promotion.

Another notable church federation has taken place in the union of the Belden Avenue Presbyterian and the Lake View Congregational churches. It will be known as the Seminary Avenue Federated church. Preaching services will be carried on in the Belden avenue "plant," while community activities will take place in the Congregational church buildings. The Rev. W. J. Semelroth is pastor of the federated church.

Crerar Memorial Presbyterian church celebrated Thanksgiving day by burning the mortgage on its property. The Rev. John W. Nicely is pastor of the church.

St. Henry's Roman Catholic church, Ridge street and Devon avenue, unveiled the first monument erected by any Chicago parish to its hero dead and in recognition to the war veterans. The ceremony took place on Thanksgiving morning, when the pastor, the Rev. F. J. Ruetershoff, sang high requiem mass. The statue was blessed by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. William Foley, LL.D., vicar general of Roman Catholic chaplains. The sermon was preached by the Very Rev. F. X. McCabe, rector of De Paul university.

The statue is twenty feet high and is made of Barre granite. Four symbolic figures adorn the top. Names of the 101 men who were in the service will be engraved on the monument in alphabetic order, and the bodies of those who died will be buried beneath it when they are brought back. On the base is inscribed: "To the Prince of Peace. In gratitude to our young men who served their country's cause in the great world war this memorial is dedicated by the parishioners of St. Henry's church."

Last Sunday the corner stone of the new Italian school of the Roman Catholic church of St. Philip Benizi, Oak street and Cambridge avenue, was laid by Count Giulio Bolognesi, Italian consul of Chicago. Judge Bernard P. Barasa and Capt. Ugo d'Annunzio, son of the poet-warrior of Italy, also took part in the service. The Rev. Angelico Barsi, O. S. M., is pastor of the church, and the Mantellate sisters of the third order, U. S. M., are in charge of the school, which numbers 250.

The Rev. Robert R. Bigger, D. D., formerly pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian church, and now superintendent of the adult department of the Chicago Sunday school commission, has been called to the presidency of Albany college, Oregon, a Presbyterian institution. He has not yet decided whether he will accept.

A nation-wide appeal for funds to carry out an extensive program of world-wide Bible distribution will be made by the American Bible society during the coming year. At a meeting of officers of the society with representatives of the leading denominations who contribute to the society's support, a budget of $982,000 for carrying on the work of the society in 1920 was approved. Plans were arranged for immediate response to appeals for Bibles that have come from all parts of the world. The field of distribution includes especially France, Russia, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, and other European countries, which have been devastated by war. Today is Universal Bible Sunday.

The United Scottish societies of Illinois hold their annual St. Andrews' day church service in the new Eighth Presbyterian church, Sacramento boulevard and Warren avenue, this evening at 7:30. The Rev. James MacLagan, pastor of Bethlehem Presbyterian church and chaplain of the St. Andrew's society, will conduct the service and preach.

Sunday, Dec. 7, will be observed as "Church Mortgage Burning day" at Calvary Methodist church. Dr. P. H. Swift, district superintendent, will preach at 11 a. m., and President L. F. W. Lesemann of the Chicago Training school and the Rev. A. T. Stephenson, a former pastor, will speak at 7:45 p. m. The burning of the church mortgage will be in connection with the evening service, and will be in charge of Dr. A. J. Sprague, president of the board of trustees, and one of the charter members of the church. All former pastors and members of the church will be given a special welcome to the services of that day.

CAN YOU USE A TRUCK

Our Deferred Payment Plan has made it possible for thousands to start in business for themselves

DURING the past ten years $20,000,000 worth of Autocar Motor Trucks have been purchased on our Deferred Payment Plan. 98% of all payments due have been met in full at maturity and the balance have been met later. In the few cases where we have had to take back trucks to meet the final amount due, the trucks have been resold and generally a substantial balance returned to the original purchaser or his estate.

Autocar Motor Trucks, because of their reliability and efficiency, pay for themselves.

The distinctive Autocar system of Factory Branches insures maximum service and economy.

The price of Autocar Motor Trucks is the same whether sold for cash or on the Deferred Payment Plan, except for an interest charge at the rate of 6% per annum on any balance due.

A Deferred Payment purchaser is not penalized in any way whatsoever. Moreover, he can place his own insurance with any reliable insurance company.

Executives and Managers.

Experienced Executive Seeks Change,

He began selling at fifteen. He earned the greater part of his way through college. He took a course in law as an additional business preparation.

For the past twelve years in the employ of the same corporation, a national organization with nine offices and operating the entire country over. Has had complete charge of sales and advertising, and is now general manager. During this period, which is almost the entire life of the corporation, its capital and surplus have more than trebled and regular dividends in excess of twelve per cent have been paid. He has developed and held big special representatives now earning five to ten thousand per year.

Believes in and practices the square deal and the highest type of salesmanship. Aggressive, sane, safe, industrious, temperate and loyal, and accustomed to reciprocal loyalty. Physically strong and mentally alert and tolerates no interference with the steady, forward progress of the business interests that have his attention. Possessed of some means, but is not seeking an investment.

His reason for leaving his present position is that, while it entails tenure under present conditions, it offers no considerable opportunities for advancement. He desires a similar position either in a larger business or in one where a repetition of the success above referred to will result in a partnership.

Replies held absolutely confidential. General Manager, 714 Harris Trust Bldg.

SALES MANAGER.

Matured man with unusual experience in "service" salesmanship, now in charge of the department, seeks larger field and greater opportunities, preferably with a growing manufacturer producing a meritorious specialty capable of wide exploitation—something offering latitude for an active imagination. In such a position the glory will not be centered entirely in the pay envelope; part of it will come from results obtained.

Analytic turn of mind, deep, clear, well-balanced thinker, aggressive and alert; "up and at 'em" type, but cautious and wary. Not a "world-beater" nor a "magician," but an enthusiastic worker, "champing at the bits" in present position because of circumscribed and handicapped by unprogressive methods. Willing to give up a lifetime position for one with a REAL opportunity, where honest reciprocal loyalty is a factor. Remuneration must have 300 cents in the cheap man, but a fair one, willing to accept an assistant's salary while breaking in. Proposition must be substantial, well established, and capable of further development. Fanciful schemes not considered. Employers unwilling to answer a blind ad may address Attorney Henry J. Brandt, 1615 Lumber Exchange Building, others address N 503, Tribune.

SALESMAN—IT TAKES GOOD SALESMEN to put the buzz into business. Without the zip and pep of the live producer the machinery of commerce would soon begin to rust and the mice would gnaw the backs off the ledgers. A good, live salesman is a gem of genius and in an all gold setting. The field is full of merchandise "order takers"—but the live ones know what the big money in sales work is and had in selling high grade specialties a special service. Our work is in the latter class, and we have not only the highest class sales organization in the country but our men get a post graduate course in their everyday experience with us through the unusual assistance and cooperation we give them. If your ambition and ability put you in the $10,000 a year class and you have the weight, dignity, and force of personality to meet and sell big business men—if you want to make a permanent connection with exclusive territory in an unusually high class and profitable line of work—if you are willing to work on straight commission—if you believe in making sales on a one call basis—if you want to become a part of the most successful organization of salesmen in the country and have the added backing of the most successful service concern in the U. S.—if these features of real success in salesmanship appeal to your better judgment, write us for interview, giving us an outline of your experience, which we will treat in strict confidence. Address H C 214, Tribune.

SALESMAN—WE WISH TO EMPLOY a young man between the ages of 24 and 30, who have personality, education, and a fine record. A college graduate preferred. We will put him through our training class in Boston, and later into our sales force. We want a man who can qualify as a branch manager inside of five years, and yet one who can live on a reasonable salary during the period of training.

This is an unusual opportunity for some young man just out of the army, who has the service, or one desiring larger opportunities than his present position offers. Candidates considered only upon application by letter, detailing qualifications, compensation expected, and showing some ability to sell their services by letter.

BIG FARM INCOMES

Learn about the big profits to be made in crops and livestock on 5-acre tracts in Delta county, Colorado. We offer tracts of 10 acres and larger, under cultivation, with orchards and improvements and irrigable soil, together with absolute water rights, conveying an interest in the mutual irrigation company serving the land. This company furnished abundant water this season, a severe test; this making crops sure.

Land is adapted to alfalfa, sugar beets, potatoes, onions, etc., and care gives enormous yields. Diversified crops must be raised with big yields. Stock raising is a profitable industry, as forest reserve with grazing privilege is near Hotchkiss, Colo.

Delta is also famous as an orchard country, winning nearly 1-3 of the prizes at National Apple Show in 1909—cup for best display of perfect fruit. National Irrigation Congress, 1910 and sweepstakes Colorado State Fair, 1918.

Schools, church, telephone, grocery delivery and good roads on Redlands Mesa, which is located in a delightful climate. Golf links with putting and hunting near. Write or call at once for information and our ACTUAL PLANTING LITERATURE. REDLANDS MESA COMPANY, INC., 109 N. Dearborn-st., Room 802.

In these days of big prices, with choice Illinois and Indiana corn land selling for $350 per acre is as unusual as the chance to buy sugar at 5 cents a pound. Within the next 30 days I will find a buyer for this magnificent farm of 615 acres. There is no more productive land anywhere. Land that ranks with the best being sold around Indiana and Illinois for $350 per acre today. MY PRICE on this for a quick sale is $200 per acre. Terms, one-fourth cash, balance on improvements, worth from $13,000 to $15,000. Deep black loam. Raised 60 bushels of corn to the acre this year. One mile only from the Jackson Highway. Just a short distance from a Consolidated School. About 60 miles from Chicago.

This is no piker proposition, but a rare opportunity for a live person with enough money or credit to swing it. This farm should be priced right now for $235 per acre. There are two flowing artesian wells on the place.

I CHALLENGE ANYBODY who is really and sincerely in the market for a grand farm bargain to give me the opportunity to show this place.

Unclaimed Storage
HEADQUARTERS

We not only carry the most complete line of storage merchandise in the city, but carry the best. One visit will convince you of the truth of this statement.

High prices prevail in the new furniture market—are higher every day.

Come to our big storage salesroom and look over the enormous display of the highest grade unclaimed storage in the city. We are certain merchandise like that it will satisfy the most discriminating buyers.

Really our merchandise is better than new. It is without question too new.

Please some of the relics which have been an eyesore to you with more modern pieces. Remember this—furniture of high grade manufacturers, slightly used—possibly three or four years old, can not be duplicated today at twice the original prices. Think what this means to you—pay chances—and come out at your earliest convenience.
